Twenty-Story Building Is Planned for Atlanta

RHODES-HAVERTY TO ERECT TALLEST STRUCTURE IN CITY

J. J. Haverty and Joe Rhodes To Construct Office Building at James, Forsyth and Peachtree.

3-STORY TOWER WILL BE FEATURE

Cost of Investment, Including Land and Building, Will Be Approximately $1,200,000.

Plans for the erection of what is to be the tallest building in the city, in the form of the latest New York type office structure, rising 17 stories above the ground and carrying a three-story tower, were announced Saturday by J. J. Haverty, who, together with Joe Rhodes, will construct the office building on the property owned by them at Peachtree, James and Forsyth streets.

The cost of the structure will be $600,000, while the investment involved, including land and building, will be approximately $1,200,000. A feature of the office building, in addition to being the city's tallest edifice, will be the distinctive architectural beauty to be incorporated. The preliminary plans, which have been drawn by Pringle and Smith, architects for the undertaking, show the structure to be of the "set-back" construction type, which is said to be the most popular now in skyscraper architecture.

The site of the new office structure is just opposite the large Candler building, on a lot fronting 92 feet on Peachtree street, 95 feet on James street and 80 feet on Forsyth. The building will cover the entire site, rising in a straight line for 15 stories, with corner set-backs on two additional stories, and the whole capped with a three-story tower. It will be the first structure of this type to be erected in Atlanta, Mr. Haverty said. The exterior of the building on its three street frontages will be ornamented with terra cotta and granite.

Immediate Razing Planned.

The proposed site of the new office building is now occupied by an old two-story brick building, which is to be demolished immediately to make room for the great edifice. The contract to the wreckers is expected to be let within the next few days, Mr. Haverty asserted. Pringle and Smith are said to be making rapid progress with the final draft of plans and specifications, which are to be ready by the end of 60 days, at which time bids for letting of the construction

CONDUCTOR FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER

Aged Chattanoogan Is Given Life Sentence by Jury; Defense Files Motion for New Trial.

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 3.—(AP) Harry C. Neilson, 55, Southern railroad conductor, was convicted late this afternoon in criminal court on the charge of murdering his wife, the jury placing the penalty at life imprisonment in the penitentiary. The jury was out about an hour. Notice of a motion for a new trial was made immediately by Neilson's chief counsel, W. H. Cummings, who was granted 15 days in which to prepare the motion. Meantime Neilson was remanded to jail without bond.

Neilson was convicted on circumstantial evidence bolstered up by testimony of Mrs. Frances Williams, 25, his paramour, who told a graphic story of his alleged confession to her of the murder of his aged and invalid wife.

Mrs. Williams was arrested at Enterprise, Miss., after Detective Joe Paradiso, head of the local police homicide squad, had intercepted a letter Neilson had written to her from the jail at Meridian. This letter told of his arrest and urged the woman to keep in the background.

On the stand Mrs. Williams testified that Neilson had come to her apartment which he had provided for her in a private home here, and where she passed as his wife, and confessed that he had just choked his wife to death, cut off her head, chopped up the body and burned it in the furnace. The woman testified that after the confession she had been forced to write letters attempting to show that Mrs. Neilson had eloped with Pat McQueen, an old sweetheart.

Atlanta's Newest Skyscraper

Architect's drawing of the Rhodes-Haverty office building, to be erected at Peachtree and James streets, opposite the Candler building. It will be the tallest edifice in Atlanta and the first to be modeled after the recently developed skyscraper type of "set back" architecture for the upper stories. Pringle & Smith are the architects.

FUTURES TRADINGS BILL IS APPROVED

Measure Would Prevent Short Selling of Grain and Cotton, Senator Caraway, Author, Says.

Washington, March 3.—(AP)—Speculating in cotton and grain futures on exchanges would be prohibited under a bill approved today by the senate agriculture committee and sponsored for several years by Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas.

The measure is far reaching in its terms and is expected to meet with stiff opposition on the floor, but it has behind it the strength of the producers of those two commodities who long have sought such legislation.

As explained by the author, the bill is aimed at short selling of cotton and grain with the resultant fluctuations in prices, but it does not prohibit future selling where the person who sells has a reasonable right to expect that he will have possession of the produce that he sells.

There are two main provisions of the bill. One provides a penalty of from one to six months in jail and a fine of from $1,000 to $10,000 upon any person who sends or causes to be sent any message offering to make or enter into a contract for the purchase or sale for future delivery of cotton or grain without intending that such cotton or grain shall actually be delivered or received.

The other main provision requires the filing of an affidavit by any person sending a message relating to future sales with the person actually transmitting the message setting out that such person is the owner of the cotton or grain, or that such cotton or grain is being grown on land owned by him, or that at the time he has a legal contract for the acquisition of such cotton or grain.

Any person who knowingly makes a false statement in such an affidavit would upon conviction be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than two years and fined not less than $500 nor more than $5,000.

YOUTH CONVICTED IN LOVE BOMBING

Dynamiter Faces Sentence of 20 Years for Injuring Sweetheart; New Trial Asked.

Ottawa, Ill., March 3.—(AP)—Hiram Reed, of Mossville, Ill., was found guilty by a jury tonight of bombing the Pleasant Valley schoolhouse in which his sweetheart-teacher, Miss Iola Bradford, was seriously injured, after less than an hour's deliberation.

Reed accepted the verdict without signs of emotion. Miss Bradford merely gazed at the floor as the verdict was read.

Defense Attorney H. L. Richoloson immediately filed a motion for a new trial.

Conviction on the charge carries a sentence of one to 20 years. The jury made no recommendation to the court.

March 17 was set for argument for a new trial. Pending decision on the new trial, sentence will not be pronounced. Reed is at liberty now on $20,000 bonds.

Hiram said he had nothing to say about the verdict, but the corners of his mouth twitched as he replied: "I still maintain I am innocent."

Reed, who made three confessions, told of placing dynamite in the stove to escape marrying the teacher who is about to become a mother. He repudiated his confessions from the witness stand, and denied his guilt, declaring his love for her and saying he was ready to marry her.

The dynamiting of the school house occurred on the morning of last December 1, the explosion almost killing the school teacher and disfiguring her probably for life. The blast went off just as she lit the fire in the school stove. By chance a number of pupils who arrived early that day escaped injury.

COMMANDER TATE SUSPENDS D. A. V. LIAISON OFFICER

O'Glen Ray Is Charged With Violating Constitution by His Participation in Political Fight.

National Commander William E. Tate of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War Saturday suspended O'Glen Ray, of Atlanta, national liaison officer of the war veterans' organization, following the mailing of 2,000 letters in Atlanta of a political nature over his signature, and on stationery which was said to have been similar to the organization's printed stationery.

Mr. Tate, who also is an Atlantan, in a formal statement Saturday morning said that Mr. Ray's letter was written without the knowledge or consent of the organization and that the letter subjected the veterans' organization to being misrepresented in the minds of the public.

The national commander stated the principles and policies of the organization as being non-political and nonsectarian and stated that Mr. Ray's letter was contrary to the constitution of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, of which he was a national officer at the time he sent out the letters.

Statement by Tate.

Mr. Tate's statement follows:

"As national commander of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, I have suspended O'Glen Ray as national liaison officer of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, for the following cause:

"It has been brought to my attention that Mr. Ray, acting as an individual and without the knowledge and consent of the organization, interested himself in local politics by writing a letter over his own signature on stationery carrying his official title as an officer of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, and by so doing subjected the organization to being misinterpreted in the minds of the general public. His act was contrary to the principles and policy of the organization laid down in the constitution which states that there shall be no participation in political and sectarian questions and industrial disputes. Its sole excuse for existence and one purpose is to work

WIFE OF CONVICT NAMES COUNTESS AS HEART THIEF

New York, March 3.—(AP)—Suit for $250,000 for the love of her convict-husband has been started in Manhattan supreme court by Mrs. Alice Bland Corbett, of Newcastle, Pa., against the Countess Andrew M. G. Soranzo, of Florence, Italy.

The suit is another climax to the romantic and criminal career of James F. Corbett, who crashed the portals of New York society and eloped with Marqueene G. Stevenson, now the Countess Soranzo, while he had a previous wife living. His second marriage has been annulled.

Corbett is now serving a five-year term in Sing Sing prison for grand larceny, his first wife is in Newcastle with their daughter, Julienne, and the countess has returned to America with her husband to fight what her attorney describes as an "outrage" perpetrated by "blackmailers."

PRESIDENT'S WIFE FINDS HER MOTHER ON HEALTH'S ROAD

Northampton, Mass., March 3.—(AP) Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, who came from Washington to her home city this week to visit her mother, Mrs. Lemira C. Goodhue, who is ill at the Dickerson hospital here, today spent more than four hours at her mother's bedside. Mrs. Goodhue's condition was said by her physicians to have shown improvement.

With Mrs. R. B. Hills, of Northampton, one of her close friends here, Mrs. Coolidge went to the hospital twice today, spending two hours with the invalid on each occasion. Tonight she dined at Mrs. Hills' home.

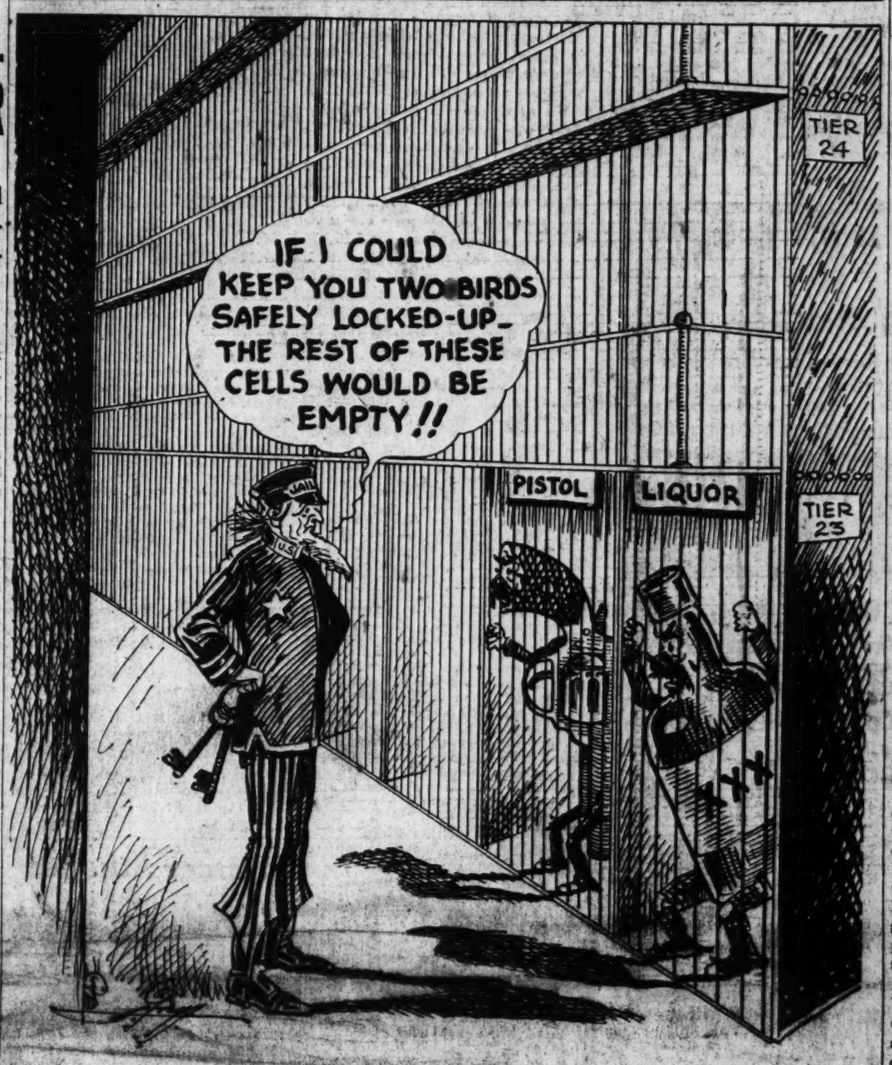

FOUR AMERICANS SHOOT WAY OUT OF MEXICAN JAIL

Mexicali, Mexico, March 3. — (United News.) — Four American youths who had been reported killed by Mexican soldiers today, after shooting their way out of jail at Ensenada, actually escaped into the hills, reports received here tonight by Carlos Comari, assistant chief of police, said.

Details of the jail break were meager. It was said arms were smuggled into the cells and that the youths shot their way to freedom last night.

12-STORY CARLTON APARTMENTS SOLD

Handsome Structure To Change Hands When Offer of $352,000 for Bonds Is Accepted.

Possession of the 12-story Carlton apartment structure on Peachtree street, one of Atlanta's newest and largest residential properties, has virtually passed into hands of new owners, it was disclosed Saturday with announcement of acceptance of the $352,000 offer for the outstanding first mortgage bonds by the Adair Bond Holders Protective committee, given out by Judge Shepard Bryan, chairman.

Offer to purchase the entire first mortgage bond issue, with a face value of $490,500, for $352,000, was made in the name of H. O. Cox and was accepted by the committee for recommendation of court approval. It is understood that this move practically means purchase of the edifice by H. O. Cox, after formal court action and foreclosure proceedings have been consummated.

The building is of the latest architectural construction and contains 130 rooms and 130 baths, occupied as bachelor apartments. It was built in 1924 by The Carlton, Inc., on a site having a frontage of 111 feet on Peachtree street and extending back 140 feet to a ten-foot alley in the rear. It is located in one of the city's most valuable north side realty holdings, being just north of the Georgian Terrace and facing the site of the proposed $2,000,000 Shrine mosque.

The actual valuation of the apartment building and land is said by well informed real estate men to be from $600,000 to $700,000. While default of the bonds and other tempo-

Eighteenth Visit Will Bring Old Favorites and New Successes of Metropolitan.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

This year's invasion of Atlanta by the Metropolitan Opera company, the eighteenth visit of that organization, will bring "a most interesting and varied repertoire of operas new and old, familiar and unfamiliar," according to the latest word received Saturday by the Atlanta Music Festival association from General Manager Giulio Gatti-Casazza, of the Metropolitan, who says the company will come this year "with even larger forces than usual."

Along with this enthusiastic promise came the first official announcement of the casts to sing the nine operas to be sung here during the week of April 23 to 28, inclusive, and the list includes virtually the entire array of notable singers in the Metropolitan cast. Complete casts were announced in Atlanta Saturday by C. Howard Candler, vice president and treasurer of the association.

Old Favorites in Cast.

"All the old favorites of the Metropolitan company and the new singers who have won notable success this season in New York will come to Atlanta for our eighteenth and what promises to be our greatest season of grand opera," Mr. Candler said. "In the long list of noteworthy artists are Rosa Ponselle, singing 'Norma,' her stupendous New York success revived this year; Beniamino Gigli, Mario Basiola, the great Galli-Curci, Amand Tokatyan, DeLuca, Lawrence Tibbett, Marion Talley, Lucrezia Bori, Martinelli, Antonio Scotti and dozens of others. Also there will be Grace Moore, pretty Tennessee girl, who won her first big success with the Metropolitan this season, as well as Frederick Jagel, the new tenor."

Among the operas will be three which have never been sung here before by the Metropolitan company, "The Barber of Seville," "Norma," classic revival, and Wagner's "Die Walkure." The other operas included on this season program are

STATE G. O. P. ASKS DRAFT OF COOLIDGE

In Event President Cannot Be Induced To Run, Herbert Hoover Is Georgia's Second Choice.

The Georgia republican state convention Saturday launched a movement at a meeting in the Fulton county courthouse to draft President Coolidge for another term and elected four delegates at large to the national convention at Kansas City in June. The convention went on record as favoring election of Herbert Hoover, provided the movement to draft the president fails.

Republicans of the fifth district also met and named a delegate and alternate to the national meeting. The delegates at large and the fifth district delegate are instructed to support the Coolidge movement as long as there is a chance to induce him to accept the nomination. Eleven district meetings are to be held to name the remainder of the Georgia national delegation.

Delegates Named.

The state convention, called to order by chairman Roscoe Pickett, of Jasper, at noon, named the following national delegates after a five-hour debate on party matters: J. H. Watson, colored, of Albany; B. J. Davis, colored, of Atlanta; G. F. Flanders, of Swainsboro, and T. N. Hendrix, of Edison.

Delegates named at the fifth district meeting were Clint W. Hager, United States district attorney, of Atlanta, and A. T. Walden, colored, of Atlanta, alternate.

The four delegates at large were instructed to work for Davis as national committeeman from Georgia by the state-wide body, which named the following officers to head the republican executive committee for the next four years:

Officials Selected.

A. T. Walden, colored, chairman; William Burch, colored, vice chairman; William Driskell, colored, secretary, and Willie Daniels, colored, treasurer.

Fifth district delegates selected for the next four years were: Campbell county, Herbert Swanson, colored; Douglas county, William Long and Albert Scales; DeKalb county, R. S. Douthard, Frank A. Doughman, Atlanta lawyer, and Rufus B. Camp.

Fulton county, R. L. Craddock, L. G. Harris, Davis, L. M. Hill, Driskell, Jackson McHenry, A. T. Wald-

Crowded Chamber of Deputies Cheers Premier Time and Again During His Fiery Address.

THREATENS TO STOP GERMAN PAPERS

Interference in Administration Intolerable, He Says; Austria Says He Avoided Specific Reply.

Rome, March 3.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini today made a vigorous defense of the fascist regime's policy in the Italian Tyrol and clearly restated the Italian position that administration of the district is a matter of internal policy, interference in which by foreign governments would be intolerable.

Making a long-awaited reply to Chancellor Seipel, of Austria, the premier defended the fascist government's patience and forbearance in the administration of the upper Adige region in which there is a strong German-speaking minority and issued a warning that the 15 German language newspapers published there would be summarily suppressed in case of a revival of "intolerable interference" from Austria or anywhere else outside of Italy's confines.

"A state respecting itself cannot tolerate foreign interference," said the Italian premier. "Mr. Fuller, the governor of Massachusetts, has supplied us with a striking example on that subject."

This reference was to the Sacco-Vanzetti case and referred to Governor Fuller's refusal to keep Sacco and Vanzetti—both Italians—from execution despite widespread movements in their behalf in foreign countries.

Facts To Talk in Future.

After declaring that the German language newspapers in the provinces of Bolzano would be suppressed unless the anti-Italian campaign beyond the Brenner pass were discontinued, Mussolini added:

"It is time to declare that insolent speeches, odious insinuations and vulgar insults have only one result—to accelerate the turning of the fascist rise and open an abyss between two neighboring peoples. As much as it is in our power we wish to be friends of the German world, of which we recognize the good qualities and appreciate the contribution brought to human civilization, but on one condition, that our safety, namely the safety of 42,000,000 Italians, should not be put even vaguely in question.

After questioning whether it was worth while to reply to the Austrian accusations, Mussolini said that despite the violence of Austrian criti-

WOUNDED IN HEAD NEGRO RUNS MILE TO CITY HOSPITAL

Although a full load of buckshot had been discharged into his head, Handy Seal, negro grocer, of 932 McDaniel street Saturday night ran one mile to Grady hospital to obtain medical attention.

According to the report given police, Seal's roommate, Jim Ervin, who lives over the store, had placed a shotgun with muzzle to the floor in the corner of the room. In some manner the weapon was accidentally discharged and the shot plunged through the floor and into the head of Seal, who was on the first floor.

Seal will recover.

Tribute Is Paid John McClelland By Supporters

Paying high tribute to John S. McClelland, candidate for solicitor of the criminal court of Atlanta, his friends and supporters Saturday held a meeting at headquarters in the Atlanta National Bank building and predicted an "overwhelming" victory.

Chairman J. W. Rountree stated that he had heard from many sections of the city and county and from all indications citizens have rallied to the support of Mr. McClelland by the thousands.

"Mr. McClelland will give Fulton county a conscientious, fair and impartial administration," Mr. Rountree said.

"Mr. McClelland has resided in Atlanta practically all his life and in this and all other campaigns has stood squarely for a fair and impartial enforcement of the law. He is one of Atlanta's most successful lawyers and citizens. He has at all times worked for the improvement of Fulton county and the city of Atlanta, trying to make this section of the state the best of any in the south.

"Four years ago Mr. McClelland ran for the same office against Roy Dorsey and was defeated by only 169 votes. Before Mr. Dorsey's term expired he resigned for a better position and his successor was named by the governor of Georgia. In view of the fact that Mr. McClelland suffered defeat by so small a margin of votes, he is confident that voters will make him solicitor of the criminal court of Atlanta next Wednesday, wiping out the defeat that he suffered four years ago."

INCENDIARY FIRES TAKE $75,000 TOLL

FIRE DEPARTMENT RECORDS SMASHED

All records of the Atlanta fire department for number of alarms answered within a 24-hour period were believed to have been broken Saturday when 39 calls were recorded from midnight Friday to 7 o'clock Saturday night. The largest previous number of alarms answered in one day was said to have been 33. Fire apparatus was kept on a constant run all day from one fire to another. The majority of alarms were for grass fires.

With only two months of the year gone, the 1928 record of firebugs who have been specializing on vacant houses threatens to exceed the entire year of 1927, according to information obtained Saturday from the fire department. Eighteen incendiary fires in vacant houses already have been reported by the fire department this year, against a total of 28 for 1927.

An appeal to the public to cooperate with the fire and police departments in apprehending the firebugs who have been responsible for damages to vacant houses exceeding $75,000 during 1927 and January and February of this year was made Saturday by fire department officials.

Seek Aid of Citizens.

Fire officials urged citizens to call the police whenever strangers are seen prowling around the vacant houses. They are convinced that the unprecedented number of vacant-house fires within the past year is the work of one individual or group of individuals, although they are at a loss for a motive.

Incendiary fires have been reported in vacant houses at the following places this year: January, 251 Forrest avenue, on the 21st; 327 Courtland street, on the 25th; 829 Marietta street, on the 26th; 759 Boulevard, N. E., on the 27th; February, 844 DeKalb avenue, on the 1st; 15 Anniston avenue, on the 3d; 1319 Iverson street, on the 5th; 533 Miller alley, on the 8th; 205 Dunbar street, on the 12th; 81 Harris street, N. E., on the 13th; 285 North Highland avenue, on the 16th; 567 Formwalt street, on the 22d; 832 Boulevard, N. E., on the 23d; 905 Fair street, S. E., on the 25th; 1576 New street, N. E., and 578 Lee street, on the 27th; 326 North Highland avenue, N. E., on the 29th, and March, 85 Moreland avenue, S. E., on the 2d.

The majority of the vacant-house fires have occurred late at night or in the early morning hours, the average time being around 9:30 to 10:30 o'clock at night and 2 o'clock in the morning.

Many Grass Fires.

Through streets crowded with the usual week-end traffic, the fire department rushed forth Saturday to answer an unusual number of alarms, most of which were caused by grass fires.

Grass fires were reported Saturday at the following places: Augusta avenue near Grant street, 352 Vanira, 372 Glennwood avenue, S. E., Springdale road and Ponce de Leon, rear of 619 Killian, S. E., 1235 Druid Place, N. E., 874 Capitol avenue, S. E., 685 Argonne, N. E., 951 Capitol avenue, S. W., 2553 Fair, S. E., 249 Josephine, N. E., rear of 919 Williams Mill road, rear of Habersham road.

Rear of 128 Howard street, N. E.; Stokes avenue and Gordon street, 1465 Westwood avenue, S. W., rear of 522 Rankin street, N. E., Boulevard and Rankin, 802 Clermont drive, N. E., rear of 919 Carmel avenue, Sylvian road and Genesee avenue, 1157 Arder avenue, S. W., next door to 171 Warren street, S. E., Woodland and Berne, rear of 1273 Metropolitan, 288 McKenzie drive, and Cascade and Stokes place.

Sparks from Chimney.

Sparks from chimneys caused blazes at 246 Trinity avenue, S. W., occupied by Mrs. L. G. Moye, and at 944 Euclid avenue, N. E., occupied by J. H. Thurman. A defective flue was responsible for an alarm at 1071 Bankhead avenue, N. W., occupied by R. G. Elliott.

Burning trash caused alarms from Adair Park school and from 28 Brighton road, occupied by W. A. Sutherland, according to fire department reports.

A defective flue at 583 Rockwell, S. W., burning trash at the rear of 839 Argonne, a flaring oil heater at 1029 Piedmont avenue, sparks on the roof at 746 Fair, S. E., and 441 Moreland, N. E., and a blaze started by a cigarette at 11 Leach street also were listed among the day's alarms.

T. L. SIMPSON ELECTED CITY SALESMEN'S HEAD

T. L. Simpson, affiliated with the sales force of the Kelly Brothers company, Saturday night was elected president of the City Salesmen's association at the annual banquet, dance and election of officers held at the Henry Grady hotel.

He succeeds W. W. Moore, of the H. L. Singer company, who has piloted the destinies of the organization for the past year, and to whose constructive and faithful service was attributed the phenomenal growth of the organization for the year.

Other new officers are R. H. Floyd, first vice president; B. B. Baber, second vice president; Si Perkins, secretary; A. S. (Pat) Murphy, assistant secretary; E. F. (Pet) Johnson, treasurer; C. H. Burge, chaplain; Leo Sudderth, attorney, and F. W. Connell, sergeant-at-arms.

A large number of salesmen, their wives and members of their families attended the annual affair. The business session preceded the banquet, which was followed by the dance.

Sandwiched between the dinner and the dance were several entertainment numbers which were featured by presentation of a gold watch to retiring President Moore by Ben Messer, chairman of the membership committee last year.

John Wesley Cooper, Mrs. E. F. Johnson and Gordon Moore rendered several solo numbers.

Mayor and Mrs. I. N. Ragsdale, who attended as special guests, were presented to the audience and given an ovation.

The City Salesmen's association is the oldest organization of its kind in the United States, having been organized here more than 30 years ago.

Macon, Ga., March 3.—(AP)—Leo Harris, Jr., 17-year-old Mercer freshman, who received a fractured skull and a broken leg in the wreck of a small car early this morning, was still in a critical condition at a hospital tonight.

Jack Freeman, driver of the car who was detained by the police until they completed an investigation, was released.

Harris and a number of other students were returning from a dance in an automobile.

FRANCE AND SPAIN SIGN TANGIER PACT

Paris, March 3.—(AP)—Spain is given control of the police of Tangier and of the international zone surrounding that city under an agreement with France signed today after 18 months of negotiating.

Spain had asked that the city and suburbs be incorporated into the Spanish protectorate in Morocco, faking this stand immediately after the surrender of Abd El Krim on the ground that hostile intrigues and an intensified contraband traffic in arms had been largely responsible for the Spanish difficulties.

She was supported by Italy in this stand and held to it firmly until both France and England let it be known that they would insist on maintenance of an international regime in the city and suburbs. Finally Spain accepted a French suggestion that she have a preponderant part in the police activities and thus be able to act directly against the smuggling of arms to the Riffians and the propaganda against Spanish prestige.

A conference which will be held soon in Paris will give England and Italy opportunity to approve today's agreement and settle the question as to Italy's participation in the administration of Tangier.

The problem of the administration of Tangier was brought up by Spain in 1926 after the defeat of Abd El Krim, Riffian war leader. Spain, in a memorandum to France, Italy and Great Britain, asked complete control of the Tangier zone on the ground that it was necessary to enable the Spanish government to prevent intrigues against the security of the Spanish zone and to suppress contraband in arms.

Both France and Great Britain answered that it was impossible to hand over the administration of Tangier to Spain because the Algeciras conference of 1905-1906 had confided the policing of the zone to France and Spain jointly. However, it was the opinion both in London and Paris that Spain could be given a greater share in the administration of the town and zone, thus putting her in a position to deal with contraband or intrigue against the Spanish zone.

The method of procedure agreed upon was for French and Spanish delegates to meet in Paris to endeavor to arrive at an agreement. This done a conference was to be called in which the British and Italian governments would be represented, Premier Mussolini having won a demand for Italian participation in the negotiations.

The Tangier problem has on several occasions created threatening situations. The most tense period was that during the Algeciras conference called on the insistence of the then German emperor who contended that the dominance of France in the Moroccan empire was beyond her legitimate political and commercial interests.

The treaty that resulted provided for the policing of the zone jointly by Spain and France.

The town and about 200 miles of contiguous territory is now governed by an administrator and two assistants. It was provided that until 1930 the administrator was to be a Frenchman and his assistants a Spaniard and an Englishman.

SPALDING COUNTY LEADER IS BURIED

Griffin, Ga., March 3.—(Special.) Funeral services for D. G. Thomas, well-known resident of Spalding county, who died Thursday night in Quincy, Fla., were held from the residence of his sister, Mrs. J. M. Brisendine, Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Mr. Thomas, who was born and reared here, had been in bad health for several weeks and had gone to Quincy in an effort to improve his health.

The Rev. L. M. Latimer, pastor of the First Baptist church here, and Elder Robert Barron, of Zebulon, and Elder George Goddard, of Milner, officiated. Interment was in Oak Hill cemetery.

Mr. Thomas is survived by his widow; four sons, William Thomas, of Atlanta; Douglas Thomas, of Odum, and James and Hugh Thomas, of Milner; four daughters, Mrs. L. M. Pope, of Alamo; Mrs. Norma Fain, of Quincy, Fla., and Misses Elizabeth and Frances Thomas, of Milner; two sisters, Mrs. J. M. Brisendine, of Griffin; Mrs. C. R. Allen, of Winston, and two brothers, C. A. Thomas, of Fairburn, and M. S. Thomas, of East Point.

WELLHOUSE SUIT WON BY COMPANY

A decision in favor of the United Paper company in a suit in which the company and Mrs. Belle L. Wellhouse each sought to recover $50,000 insurance for the death of Alvin Wellhouse, late vice president and manager of the company, under a "business insurance" policy, was handed down Saturday by Federal Judge Samuel H. Sibley.

Judge Sibley ruled that no reason appeared in any view of the policy why the money should not be paid to the paper company as the nominated beneficiary. The company could keep up the insurance to protect what it had already invested as premiums, though it suffered no loss by the death. Mr. Wellhouse having left the company some time before his death, Judge Sibley held.

The suit originated when the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, confronted by claims from both the paper company and Mrs. Wellhouse for the insurance money, petitioned federal court to decide the issue and deposited the money subject to the action of Judge Sibley, the insurance company admitting its liability to pay the insurance money, but being undecided as to the proper beneficiary.

The demand of Alvin Wellhouse that the beneficiary be changed to Mrs. Belle L. Wellhouse instead of the paper company when he left the company, without adjusting the premiums, could not possibly be considered as justified, Judge Sibley said. "In point of fact, he did not change the beneficiary as provided in the policy, nor did he do all he could have done to that end," Judge Sibley held.

Jailed in Wife Shooting.

Pensacola, Fla., March 3.—(AP)—J. B. Straywick, 22, was in jail here tonight, following his surrender after he shot and seriously wounded his wife, Robia, and less seriously wounding his mother-in-law, Mrs. Ray Goodwin, today.

Straywick declined to comment upon the affair. He and his wife had been separated several times during the past year.

This is the Car that interests AVIATORS —it is air-cooled!

Sport Touring

AMERICA'S Aviators—daring pioneers of a new and faster mode of travel—are making way for many advancements in transportation. In this new era, the principle of air-cooling for engines plays a tremendous part. In all important flights the air-cooled motor was the type of engine chosen to carry the plane to success.

It is not strange then, that Aviators should be interested in the Franklin Airman. It is the one car in America powered by an air-cooled motor—Franklin pioneered air-cooling.

In the new Airman Series, Franklin has incorporated many of Aviation's discoveries and fundamentals. New scientific light weight and air-cooling have combined to give motorists a car comparable to modern airplanes. Greater power enables the Airman to dash ahead with amazing acceleration, smiling at steep hills and conquering unusual road conditions. Long sustained high speed is made possible to a greater degree in the Airman—and with it there is a surprising absence of fatigue—and a great gain in comfort to both the driver and passengers. The balancing of the Airman's weight to the load it carries eliminates much useless dead weight and increases economy.

The endorsements of America's Aviators are valid reasons why you want to get acquainted with the Airman. Telephone for your demonstration today. Airman ownership may now be arranged on the most favorable terms.

AIR-COOLING ENDORSEMENTS by world-famous Aviators

"Air-cooling—nothing better!"

"Air-cooling makes for greater dependability and a saving in weight."

"Immeasurably more reliable."

"The elimination of water means less possibility of trouble .... reduces the power plant weight."

"The air-cooled engine .... is definitely superior to the water-cooled engine of equal power."

"I am for air-cooling 100 per cent."

"An Airman always chooses an Airman."

"Franklins hereafter for me—no more experimenting."

Doctor at 83 Found People Preferred His Prescription

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. If grown people want to use them no one can deny them the privilege, but they should never be given to children.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs? All drug stores have the generous bottles.

W. B. Caldwell M.D.
AT AGE 83

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.—(adv.)

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from any drug or department store and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this strength is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove your freckles.—(adv.)

COUNSEL CLASHES MAR TRIAL OF FOX

Los Angeles, March 3.—(AP)—Heated wrangles of counsel and sharp threats from the judges marked the joint trial today of William E. Hickman and Welby Hunt for the slaying of C. Ivy Toms, druggist.

Judge Elliott Craig and defense Attorneys vainly battled to stem the volume of words in the testimony of Dr. Frank A. Mikels, the first of a battery of prosecution psychiatrists attempting to break down Hickman's insanity defense.

"Boil it down! Boil it down!" Judge Craig frequently interrupted as the witness gave in detail every move of Hickman he had observed and every word the prisoner had spoken to him in the last two months.

While Dr. Mikels was being cross-examined, Jerome Walsh, Hickman's counsel, James Costello, assistant prosecutor, and the witness all started arguing at the same time over a legal point. Judge Craig entered the fray with the admonition to Walsh that "an adjournment until Monday —and you know where you'll be."

Walsh apologized.

Dr. Mikels' testimony, holding Hickman to be sane, was virtually the same as given by him in the youth's trial for the murder of Marian Parker, for which Hickman is under sentence to be hanged.

Rootin'Tootin' Ridin' Cowboy

New York, March 3.—(AP)—The New York American in a copyrighted story today says that Barbara Monell, 23-year-old daughter of Mrs. Ambrose Monell, reputed to be one of the wealthiest society leaders of New York was married February 21 in Colorado Springs to a rodeo performer and harness maker. His name is Kenneth Wilson Glaze.

The paper says that the girl, who has entry to all the society homes of New York, will live on a ranch with her cowboy husband. It quotes her as preferring the western type of man to the more modishly attired easterner and that she desires to live the simple life.

Miss Monell underwent an operation last fall and was ordered to Colorado for her health.

Glaze, whom the paper describes as six feet, one and a quarter inches tall, weighing 175 pounds, good looking and a "rootin', tootin' bronco ridin' cowboy," fell in love with the society heiress who is quite a horsewoman herself.

"The marriage was performed with the entire good feeling of the Monell family, a spokesman for Mrs. Monell said. Mrs. Monell, her spokesman said, is glad that her daughter is married "to such a splendid young man and doesn't think that differences in social standing are essential."

The young Mrs. Glaze first astonished society when she made a two-mile swim in the surf at Newport when only 14 years old and has continued to astonish them since with her daring feats of horsemanship.

Mrs. Monell is the widow of the president of the International Nickel company, who left her a fortune of approximately $15,000,000.

Former Atlanta Contractor Held On Fraud Charge

Tampa, Fla., March 3.—(AP)—Leonard G. Smith, former contractor, of Atlanta, Ga., was in custody of county officials here today, pending the arrival of officers from the Georgia metropolis, who expected to take Smith to that city for trial on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Local authorities said Smith was charged with failing to complete a building after having been paid for the work by an Atlanta woman. Smith intimated that he would resist extradition.

SERGEANT CHAPPALEAR LEAVES FOR TAMPA.

Bearing extradition papers signed by Governor L. G. Hardman, County Police Sergeant W. C. Chappalear left here Saturday afternoon for Tampa to bring Smith to Atlanta for trial.

Smith was indicted Friday by the Fulton county grand jury on three false swearing counts and bond was fixed at $5,000 by the solicitor's office.

The former Atlanta contractor perjured himself when he swore to statements, in applying for loans to a local trust company, attesting that three houses built by him in 1925 were free of labor and material debts, the true bills say.

All three houses, one on Gordon street and two in the Garden Hills district, were encumbered when Smith indorsed the affidavits, according to the grand jury's charge.

Another indictment charging larceny after trust was returned against Smith several weeks ago on complaint of a woman client who alleged he misappropriated monies paid him toward building a residence here.

FRENCH AVIATORS' FLIGHT DELAYED BY FROZEN MOTOR

Sharon, Pa., March 3.—(AP)—A frozen motor today prevented Dieudonne Costes and Joseph LeBrix, French airmen and conquerors of the air over four continents from continuing an interrupted flight from Mitchel field New York, to Detroit. The fliers, who were forced down in a snowstorm on a farm near here yesterday, worked several hours today carrying boiling water from a farm house to the "Nungesser-Coli" but the engine would not function properly.

The temperature at the farm was 15 degrees above zero early today and this low temperature completely stalled the motor. The "Nungesser-Coli" was lashed fast after the forced landing to prevent a high wind from moving it about and causing possible damage.

From Detroit the airmen plan to continue their flight to San Francisco where they will board ship for Tokyo. From Tokyo they expect to fly to Paris, from which city they set out several months ago.

FARM RELIEF BILL CHANGES OFFERED

Washington, March 3.—(AP)—Revision of several features of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill including provisions governing in part the operation of the equalization fee, has been recommended to the house agriculture committee by a group of leading farm organizations.

The proposed changes, made public today by Chairman Haugen, are designed in some instances, the farm organization spokesmen said, to meet specific objections raised by the administration to the measure.

The committee on Monday will take up consideration of the bill in executive session and Haugen said that the recommendations would be voted upon when the committee reached the sections of the measure to which they would apply. He expects the committee to vote on the bill before the week-end.

The farm organizations, among other things, recommended that investigations by the farm board which would be created under the bill, be initiated upon the request of the leading cooperative associations and farm organizations representing the producers of a commodity for which assistance in handling the surplus is sought.

Other recommendations were for:

Broadening of the term "surplus" to make clear that any domestic national surplus, whether it is seasonal or year's total in nature, can be dealt with by the board.

Authority for the board, under specific restrictions, to make insurance agreements with cooperatives on staple crops.

The farm organizations also urged the committees to consider the advisability of giving the board authority to suspend collection of the equalization fee in the event of litigation.

WALSH LAW VOID, OIL LAWYER HOLDS

Washington, March 3.—(United News.)—The Walsh law, designed to force American citizens abroad to testify in trials in this country, was branded as unconstitutional by former Governor Nathan L. Miller, of New York, today in arguments on the government's attempt to enforce its $100,000 forfeiture penalty against Henry M. Blackmer, wealthy Denver oil man and missing Teapot Dome witness.

Miller appeared before Justice Frederick L. Siddons in District of Columbia supreme court, Blackmer still being in Europe, and demanded dismissal of the contempt of court proceedings started against Blackmer by the government's special oil counsel, Owen J. Roberts, of Philadelphia, and former Senator Atlee Pomerene, of Ohio.

Blackmer is now a "legal resident of France," and outside the jurisdiction of the court's power to require testimony, Miller said. He attacked the law as special legislation directed against his client in particular.

Senator Pomerene pointed out that Blackmer has claimed American citizenship.

Miller said that citizenship was not in controversy, that Blackmer had retired from business in 1914 and left Denver, Colo., to establish a legal residence in France.

"The controversial question is jurisdiction of the court," Miller continued. "This case is quite without precedent—an act of congress attempting to extend jurisdiction of our courts beyond territorial jurisdiction of our country.

"The constitutionality of the act itself is the fundamental proposition."

Miller caracterized the District supreme court's action as a criminal proceeding rather than an attempt to punish for civil contempt. He pointed out that the court seizure of Blackmer's property—$100,000 in Liberty bonds—was void for "you can not proceed to punish a person for a crime until you catch him and until he is within jurisdiction of the court."

"This is simply turning constitutional principles upside down," he continued. "The proceedings here in question, like all contempt proceedings under the Walsh act, being unquestionably criminal and personal in nature, due process demands at least that the court obtain jurisdiction over the person of the accused before proceeding against him, but the very purpose of the procedural provision of the Walsh act is to deprive the absent accused of this fundamental right by authorizing the court to serve its process on him in a foreign country. The proceedings are therefore wholly unconstitutional and void, regardless of whether the offense charged can constitutionally be a punishable offense at all."

Miller cited decisions which he claimed "clearly showed" Blackmer's constitutional rights under the fourth, fifth and eighth constitutional amendments were being violated.

Roberts asserted in reply that the United States has the power to recall a citizen from abroad whether in peace or war time, when it is necessary for the citizen to testify in government litigation.

Summing up the government's case in the dismissal motion Roberts contended:

1.—The accused does not have a right to a jury trial under contempt proceedings.

2.—Seizure of his property does not constitute "unreasonable search and seizure" as defined in the fourth amendment.

3.—The court ruling to show cause is within the meaning of the fifth amendment.

4.—Imposition of a $100,000 fine on Blackmar is not excessive, cruel, or unusual punishment within the meaning of the eighth amendment.

"Blackmer disobeyed a subpoena issued by this court and until he appears and explains it he is automatically in contempt," Roberts declared.

"It is perfectly correct for the court to collect a penalty from his property if he fails to appear before that body."

Justice Siddons pointed out that if it were unconstitutional for the government to subpoena a witness essential to the prosecution of a federal criminal case then such witnesses would be unattainable.

The court requested counsel for both sides to file rebuttal briefs by March 12 and ordered a recess until that date.

D'ANNUNZIO, ILL WITH INFLUENZA, REPORTED BETTER

Gardone, Italy, March 3.—(AP)—Gabriel D'Annunzio, Italian poet and soldier, who has been gravely ill here at his Riviera estate, tonight was reported by his physician to be much better. It was said, however, that he would have to remain in bed for several days more. He passed a quiet night which the physician took as an indication of speedy recovery.

The poet-warrior suffered an attack of influenza several weeks ago, but apparently was well on the way to recovery when complications of bronchial trouble once more caused his friends worry.

FIGHT ON SEWER CONTRACT SEEN

A councilmanic fight Monday against award of a contract for purchase of approximately 25 miles of sewer pipe, the entire supply of the city for 1928, was seen Saturday when several members of city council stated that they would attempt to have the contract given to the low bidder instead of the one recommended by the purchasing committee.

The Yancey Concrete Products company was given the award at $35,440.41, while the Shearman Concrete company was the low bidder at $26,459.64.

Bids received and tabulated by W. P. Price, purchasing agent, follow:

Shearman company, $26,459.64; Yancey company, $35,440.31; Carolina Portland Cement company, $37,915.15, and the Campbell Coal company, $38,254.46.

Recommendations of the streets committee of city council regarding award of contracts for purchase of curbing and for concrete sidewalks, gutters, driveways, hexagon tile and extra tiles and contracts for paving three street stretches totaling 9,472 square yards at a cost of $21,063.20 also will be submitted to city council.

R. E. Suggs will be given the granite curbing contract if council approves the recommendation of the streets committee. The bid was 71 cents a foot for curved granite and 49 cents for straight.

The Davis Construction company was recommended as the acceptable low bidder for the following: 54,000 square yards of concrete sidewalk at $1.35 a yard; 4,500 square yards of concrete driveways at $1.50 a yard; 30,000 square yards of concrete gutters at $1.70 a yard, and 38,000 square yards of hexagon tile sidewalk at $1.30 a yard. Total, $184,050. The Meador Construction company was recommended for 20,000 pieces of extra tile at 17 cents each.

ECONOMIC SURVEY OF FLOOD AREA URGED IN CONGRESS

Washington, March 3.—(AP)—An economic survey of the Mississippi valley flood area to determine whether local contributions to a federal government flood control project by the affected states should be required was termed today as a "fundamental feature" of flood legislation by congress in a statement by Representative Davenport, of New York, a republican member of the house flood control committee.

The New Yorker reiterated his opposition to the Reid $473,000,000 full federal payment flood bill which was approved by the committee.

Chairman Reid announced that the report of his committee on his measure would be made public early next week. The seven members of the committee who opposed the bill plan to submit a minority report.

The house group seeking flood control of the Mississippi river's tributaries will hold a meeting next Tuesday at which it is expected they will indorse the proposed Robinson amendment to the senate flood control bill alloting $5,000,000 for the survey of tributaries control and reservoir investigation. Chairman Howard, of the tributary group, said that he had a conference today with Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic senate leader, and author of the amendment, and that the proposal was "entirely satisfactory to the house tributary members."

Cave Spring Is Thrilled By Visit of Atlanta Girl

:: MARGARET ASHLEY EXPLODES LOCAL THEORY ::

BY HARRIET C. STEVENS.

Cave Spring, Ga., March 3.—(Special.)—A few days ago Cave Spring had the pleasure of entertaining Miss Margaret Ashley, of Atlanta, field assistant of Dr. Warren K. Moorehead, noted archaeologist, who for four years has been carrying on excavations in the Etowah mounds near Cartersville.

Miss Ashley was in this section looking for evidences of Indian habitations and relics that would connect the Etowah mounds with Coosa river mounds. While here she visited the museum of the late W. O. Connor and examined his splendid collection of Indian relics. Miss Ashley was very enthusiastic over the collection and enjoyed it thoroughly.

Incidentally, she tore down a favorite playhouse of Cave Springites when she visited the queer little round hill about two miles from Cave Spring, on the Davis farm. In the past numbers of Indian relics have been dug up on this hill and by many it was thought to be a regular Indian mound.

As soon as Miss Ashley saw it, however, she shook her head. It fitted in too well with the topography of the land. No, it wasn't an Indian mound. Some graves, perhaps; but not a regular mound.

Miss Ashley explained that the Indians probably selected the summit of the hill as a burial place because of its prominence. This was often done, she said.

The visit of the Atlanta expert was thoroughly enjoyed by all and Cave Spring residents express the hope of having her come to this section again.

Darrow Is Visitor To Site of Famous Evolution Battle

Dayton, Tenn., March 3.—(AP)—Dayton, where the famous evolution trial was held in 1925, was visited again today by Clarence Darrow, one of the chief legal figures in that noted case.

He appeared then in the array of counsel that defended John Thomas Scopes, school teacher, from the charge of teaching evolution in violation of the state statute.

Hundreds of the town's citizens cheered him when his automobile drew up to the curb today. Walter Haggard, who helped prosecute Scopes, stepped forward and gave Darrow the official welcoming speech on behalf of the Dayton Progressive club of which he is president. Dr. John R. Neal, who was chief defense counsel at the trial, also greeted his former associate.

"Dayton looks very much like it did three years ago," commented Darrow as he viewed the scenes of the struggle which drew world-wide interest. He visited the red brick courthouse on the "town square" where he measured swords with the late William Jennings Bryan, one of the attorneys who represented the state of Tennessee. He sat again at the table in Robinson's drug store where the movement to test the evolution law got it start. Darrow and his party had luncheon at the hotel where scores of newspapermen from all parts of the United States were quartered while on the Dayton assignment. They were guests of the Dayton Progressive club.

Mr. Darrow, accompanied by his son, Paul, the latter's wife and two children, stopped over here en route by automobile from Chicago to St. Petersburg, Fla.

BOLLING H. JONES TO ADDRESS MEET OF LAWYERS' CLUB

Bolling H. Jones, chairman of the board of the Fulton National bank, will be principal speaker at the monthly meeting of the Atlanta Lawyers' club, at 5:30 o'clock Friday night in the breakfast room of the Kimball house, it is announced by William G. Grant, president.

Mr. Jones announces that he will speak on "The Cussedness of Lawyers," and he has promised to tell the club some things concerning the profession which he "has had on his chest for years."

The Sunshine Four, male quartet, Columbia record artists, will be in charge of the entertainment program, which has been arranged by Ernest Bell, chairman of the entertainment committee of the club.

DRY HEADS MEET TO RESCUE SOUTH

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 3.—(AP) The opening gun of a campaign to weld more firmly the "solid democratic dry south" against what have been seen by prohibitionists as "wet" efforts to split it on a wet and dry issue in the forthcoming presidential election will be fired here tomorrow by the Anti-Saloon League of America at the southeastern states' prohibition convention.

Dry leaders from each of the nine southern states, religious heads, church delegations and government prohibition officials will attend the four-day conference, which will be brought to a climax Wednesday night with the passage of resolutions outlining the league's stand on the political situation, particularly as it concerns the presidential aspirations of certain avowed candidates.

League officials already on the ground declined in advance of the meeting to predict just what form this pronouncement would take and likewise withheld comment on the suggestion advanced in some quarters that the convention discussions might involve a proposal to sponsor a bolt from the party by southern democrats if Governor Al Smith, of New York, is nominated at the Houston convention.

Policies of the league on presidential candidates as well as proposed prohibition planks for both party platforms, however, will be set forth at the outset by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of Richmond, Va., chairman of the board of temperance and social service of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, and also chairman of the league's legislative committees. He will be the principal speaker on the opening program of the meeting, which will convene at 3 p. m. in the First Baptist Tabernacle.

Bishop Cannon has chosen for his subject "Why the Repeal of Prohibition is Unthinkable."

Addresses by prominent league, church and government spokesmen will form the bulk of the convention program, which, after tomorrow's single session, will be divided into three meetings daily. Other speakers include Dr. F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the league; Dr. E. H. Cherrington, director of the league's department of education and general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran and Seymour Lowman, assistant secretary of the treasury.

TORCH MURDERER STILL AT LARGE

BY PAUL WHITE.

(United News Staff Correspondent.)

New York, March 3.—New Jersey's "torch murder," mysterious from the moment the charred body of Miss Margaret Brown was discovered, has become increasingly puzzling with each passing day.

Almost two weeks have elapsed since the 40-year-old governess was slain. Two days after the crime the slayer confessed in an anonymous letter and sent $2,500 in bonds and cash that had belonged to Miss Brown as surety for the authenticity of his confession.

Since then police of two states have been searching continuously for the murderer, whose weapon was probably gasoline that, ignited, fatally burned the governess.

The search has narrowed down considerably and authorities, while not daring to call him the slayer in the absence of positive evidence, desire to question one "Dr." Louis Clement, a man of many aliases.

Today they were attempting to link Clement, a self-styled physician and inventor, with Armgaard Karl Graves, who during the war declared himself a German spy although repudiated at Berlin.

Friends of Miss Brown overheard her say that she had been courted by a "Dr." Clement.

An abandoned wife suspects that the "Dr. L. Clement Van Norden," who married Theresa Flower, vaudeville violinist, was the bogus physician for whom police are now searching.

Charles A. Levine, the first trans-Atlantic air passenger, and Max Steur, probably the city's best-known criminal lawyer, the day before the murder, expected to be involved in a $4,000,000 business project engineered by Armgaard Karl Graves.

Graves, Levine said, first called on him on February 13 and said his backers had guaranteed him $4,000,000 for four mammoth airplanes designed to operate in South American republics. Levine thought his visitor was a crank until Graves mentioned that Steur was his attorney.

Old photographs of both "Dr." Clement and Graves have been partially identified as the same.

DR. MORRISON COMING TO HOLD BIG REVIVAL

Dr. H. C. Morrison, founder and former president of Asbury college, Wilmore, Ky., noted educator, editor of The Pentecostal Herald, a religious publication, and one of the most noted pulpit orators and evangelists of the country, will begin a two weeks' revival service March 18 at the St. Paul's Methodist church.

This announcement was made Saturday by Dr. B. F. Fraser, pastor, who declared that Dr. Morrison is one of America's most forceful and appealing speakers.

"It is the desire of leaders of the St. Paul church that the institution be visited by a real character-building revival, where sinners may learn the way of light and life everlasting and we have obtained the services of Dr. Morrison to aid us in realization of our ambition," Dr. Fraser said.

"We are gratified to announce that a man of Dr. Morrison's prominence and magnetic influence will conduct the services."

RICH'S CREATES LOW PRICES

In storekeeping, no less than in invention, an ounce of initiative is worth a pound of adaptation.

Adaptation waits for good prices to come along.
Initiative makes them happen.

Adaptation is haphazard, spasmodically benefiting customers.
Initiative is a force steadily operating in customers' interest.

Adaptation is concerned with the question, "What are prices?"
Initiative asks, "How shall we lower prices?"

Adaptation waits for the other fellow.
Initiative acts.

Draw Made To Determine Speaking Order For Oratorical Contestants

School Eliminations Expected To Begin in Georgia Next Week; Winner in Zone Second Place.

School contests in the fifth international oratorical contest will begin in Georgia about the middle of March, and district contests are to be completed by the last of the month. However, so far, no contests have been held in any of the Georgia schools.

The speaking order for the participants in the zone finals and the national final meetings of the national oratorical contest was determined recently in Washington by lot drawings made by Frank B. Noyes, publisher of The Washington Star.

For the purpose of the contest, the nation is divided into seven major zones with clearing centers at New York city, Washington, Raleigh, Chicago, Troy, N. Y., Kansas City and Oklahoma City. The winner in each one of these zone meetings secures a place in the national finals, which automatically carries with it an 11 weeks' tour of Europe with all expenses paid, as all of the eight national finalists, are entitled to that trip, regardless of the order in which they finish.

Contestants in the territory of The Atlanta Constitution are in zone 4 and will compete in the zone final meeting at Raleigh, N. C., on May 11. The champions of the different newspaper territories in that zone will speak in the following order: Jacksonville Journal, Atlanta Constitution, Raleigh News and Observer, Louisville Courier-Journal, Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, Birmingham News.

The speaking order at the national finals to be held in Washington on May 26 will be as follows: First place, winner in zone final at Washington; second place, winner in zone final at Kansas City, Mo.; third place, winner in zone final at New York city; fourth place, winner in zone final at Oklahoma City; fifth place, winner in zone final at Troy, N. Y.; sixth place, winner in zone final at Chicago; seventh place, winner in zone final at Raleigh, N. C.

In case there is any gap in the speaking order, that gap will be filled by consolidation. In other words, it will not be necessary to make a redrawing for positions at any zone final meeting.

The results of the last four national final meetings, all of which were judged by members of the United States supreme court, do not show conclusively that any one part of the program is more favorable to a speaker than another.

The winners of first, second and third places in 1924, spoke first, fourth and second respectively. In 1925, the winners of first, second and third places spoke third, fourth and seventh respectively. In 1926, first, second and third places went to the second, fifth and seventh speakers. In 1927, first place went to the last speaker, second to the fifth and third to the fourth.

In the international finals last October, the winners of the first, second and third places spoke third, fourth and first, respectively. In the international oratorical contest of 1927 first place went to the fifth speaker, second to the third and third to the second.

Emory Summer School Session To Open June 11

With a faculty of more than 70 teachers, many of whom have taught at Emory summer school before, Emory university summer school for 1928 will convene in two sessions, the first of which will open June 11, according to an announcement by Dr. Ralph E. Wager, director of the Emory summer school.

Emory will offer many new courses this summer, including courses in music and art, and the summer enrollment is expected to break all previous records. The first session of six weeks ends July 18 and the second session, beginning on July 19, will end on August 24. Students may register for one or both sessions, according to Dr. Wager.

The faculty staff will include 20 visiting professors, some of whom are making their first visit to Emory this summer. Among these professors will be teachers of music, painting and various other subjects of art. In addition, the university has promised to secure an expert instructor to teach swimming, and courses will be offered at the new Emory pool.

One innovation from previous summer schools will be the establishment of a normal school of music, which will be in charge of the progressive series of the Teachers' College of St. Louis. In this department music will actually be taught as well as a course in the appreciation of music. Similar normal schools of music have been established by the St. Louis school, at Cornell, Louisiana State university and New York university.

Course In Painting.

A course in painting will be taught by Mrs. Esther Richardson, who is director of art in the Joliet, Ill., Township High school.

Among the other new teachers are Miss Florence Burris, University of Chicago, who will offer courses in education; Professor E. E. Giltner, New York City Training School for teachers; Miss Fay Griffith, Indiana State normal; Miss Bernice Leary, LaGrange, N. J., school supervisor; H. H. Linn, West Point, Neb.; Miss Louise M. Mohr, supervisor of social studies, Winnetka, Ill.; Raymond M. Porter, Nebraska Wesleyan university; Miss Frances Presler, Winnetka, Ill., and Miss Lillian H. Stone, Cincinnati Kindergarten Association Training school.

To the psychology department will be added for the summer session Dr. Paul L. Whitely, Colgate university, and Miss Ella M. Gardner, educational clinic at Bryn Mawr college.

Miss Eilma Van Duseldorp, social worker of Hardin county, Iowa, will teach sociology at the summer school. Professor James W. Daniel, Wesleyan college, Macon, will teach in the history department and Dean Floyd Fields, of Georgia Tech, will teach mathematics.

ONLY SIXTY-TWO DEFENDANTS AWAIT TRIAL IN FULTON

Of 102 defendants now in jail on charges pending before the Fulton superior court, criminal division, all but 62 have been tried and await either disposition on a motion or decision by the higher courts, it was announced Saturday by Lewis P. Jones, chief clerk of Solicitor General John A. Boykin's office.

Only 10 of the 62 untried cases were in jail prior to January 1, and six of these are on the calendar for immediate trial, it was said.

PROTESTS ON FITCH NOT SEEN AS RIFT BY PRESBYTERIANS

New York, March 3.—(AP)—Protests against the admission of the Rev. Dr. Albert Parker Fitch, former Congregational minister at Carleton college, Northfield, Minn., to the Presbyterian ministry, on the ground that he declined to affirm the virgin birth of Christ are "certainly no indication of a 'rift' in the church," Dr. Howard Duffield, moderator of the Presbytery of New York, said in a formal statement today.

"The only point to which any exception has been taken," he said, "is Dr. Fitch's statement that he found the gospel records themselves not entirely clear in the matter of the virgin birth, and there his position necessarily had to be the same."

The protest against the admission of Dr. Fitch, now pastor of the Park Avenue Presbyterian church, will come before the general assembly of the church at Tulsa, Okla., in May.

Miss Frances Newman Will Address Alliance Discussion Meet Tonight

Miss Frances Newman, Atlanta woman writer, will address a gathering at the Jewish Educational alliance at 8 o'clock tonight, the meeting to be under the auspices of the Alliance discussion group.

The topic for discussion will be "Realism and Romanticism in Modern English and American Literature." The meeting is open to the public and will be in the nature of an open forum. Miss Newman will be the principal speaker and will discuss literary matters informally with the discussion group.

Miss Newman's appearance marks the second of a series of weekly meetings being held by the Alliance discussion group.

CHILD SERIOUSLY INJURED BY AUTO

Evelyn Hopkins, 4, of 255 Woodward avenue, was taken to Grady hospital early Saturday night in a serious condition as the result of being struck down and run over by an automobile driven by J. H. Manning, of 657 Hansell street, at Woodward avenue and Formwalt street, according to Call Officers Ector and Holland, who investigated. Doctors fear the child has serious internal injuries.

According to information given police, Manning was making a right turn from Woodward avenue into Formwalt street, when the child suddenly stepped in in the path of his car, which passed over her body.

Autoists Held.

Carter King and Hollie Kittle, of Manchester, Saturday night were being held by county authorities in connection with injuries suffered Friday night by Jack E. Scott, of a Marietta road address, knocked down by a hit-and-run motorist on stepping from a street car in Inman Yards.

Scott was given emergency treatment at Grady hospital, and later dismissed as only slightly injured, according to attendants.

Witnesses told county police the automobile which struck Scott was traveling at a high rate of speed. It was later found in a blind alley nearby, abandoned by the occupants.

King and Kittle were traced through the license tag, but insist neither of them was driving at the time of the accident.

BURGLARS SHATTER DRUG STORE DOOR BUT NET ONLY $7

Cook's Drug store, at 205 Georgia avenue, S. E., was broken into by burglars early Saturday morning and robbed of $7, according to a report to police. The thieves broke a door glass to enter the drug store.

Mrs. H. S. Harnard, of 1298 Lucile avenue, reported to police the loss of an old gold bracelet, set with three diamonds.

Community Chest Agencies Face Service Curtailment

With the necessity of an active and resourceful organization for charity relief and constructive philanthropy made apparent by the report Saturday that 16,606 individuals and families were served in January by Community Chest agencies, it was announced at the same time by Frank Miller, service secretary of the chst, that failure of public subscriptions sufficient to meet the minimum estimated expenses of the agencies will cause a general reduction of their budgets and a curtailment of activities and service.

"Executives and boards of social welfare organizations had hoped on on entering the year 1928 that the chest would have a pledged sum of money sufficient to finance the allowed budget expense," said Mr. Miller's report. "This is now seen to be impossible, and the apparent shortage implies the facing of a hard year's effort to make ends meet. It means a disappointment for societies and contributors since we cannot give service and help beyond our limited income. All the more need now for cooperation and conference among the agencies."

16,606 Families Served.

Extent of the work being performed by the 37 agencies of the chest was described by the figures of the report which showed a total of 16,606 families and individuals served. Twelve relief and service societies helped 6,637 families and individuals and conducted programs of public service, this group including the Atlanta chapter, American Red Cross, Atlanta Humane society, Atlanta Legal Aid society, Atlanta Safety council, Community Employment service, DeKalb chapter, Red Cross, Family Welfare society, Federation of Jewish Charities, Salvation Army, Travelers' Aid society, Tuberculosis association and West Point Milk fund.

Ten child-caring societies served 1,020 individuals, in most cases salvaging helpless little ones from disaster, this group including the Atlanta Child's Home, Carrie Steele Logan home, Florence Crittenton home, Gate City Free kindergarten, Georgia Children's Home society, Hebrew Orphans' home, Home for the Friendless, Leonard Street Orphans' home, Sheltering Arms, Child United Social service.

Individual Service.

Three societies in the group of individual service ministered to 115 persons, in this group being the Home for Incurables, Home for Old Women, and Community Home for Girls. From the churches home for girls, which belongs in this classification of service, no report for the month was received.

Five societies of the "character forming" group served 7,907 individuals, these including the Atlanta School of Social Work, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Girl Scouts, Y. W. C. A. The Social Service exchange, which serves all agencies with record of cases to prevent duplication and waste, reported 927 clearances for the month.

The report described also the work accomplished by the central organizations looking to greater effectiveness of relief and expenditures, including conferences of trained executives of the several groups on 52 difficult cases, and constant conferences by executives of the "character-forming group," whose functions interlock with relief and service agencies in the service of youth, to develop their machinery of service and promote educational measures.

Egleston Hospital Cornerstone Rites Will Be Held Today

With officials of the city government, members of the Junior league and hundreds of others present, the cornerstone of the Henrietta Egleston Memorial hospital for children now under construction on Forrest avenue, will be laid at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The Rev. W. W. Memminger, member of the committee charged with carrying out the will of the late Thomas Egleston, whose bequest made possible the hospital, will have charge of the exercises.

The first unit of the hospital is rapidly nearing completion, will be ready for occupancy about July and will be one of the most modern and best equipped children's hospitals in the country. A second unit has been planned to consist of a nurses' home and additional rooms for hospital use.

All children under 12 years of age will be treated free. It will be the first hospital devoted exclusively to children in this section and will be under supervision of Dr. Hines Roberts, one of the leading physicians of the city. It will be nonsectarian in character and will fulfill a long-felt need of the city, it was stated by officials in charge.

Stomach Bad 35 Yrs. —Feels Fine Now

"I suffered with indigestion and stomach gas for 35 years. Since the first dose of Adlerika, I have not been troubled a minute."—D. Carlisle.

The simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, saline, etc. (known as Adlerika), has a most surprising DOUBLE action. First it acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel (most medicines act on lower bowels only) and removes foul matter that often poisoned the system for months. Second, Adlerika clears all GAS and sourness from stomach and bowels, bringing INSTANT relief from stomach trouble. And in addition, Adlerika removes metabolic poisons which cause neuritis, rheumatism, etc.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, writes: "Adlerika, in addition to its intestinal cleansing, checks the growth of intestinal bacteria and bacilli."

Dr. J. Weaver: "In my 50 years' practice I have found nothing to excell Adlerika."

J. E. Puckett: "After using Adlerika, I feel better than for 20 years. Awful impurities were eliminated."

It will astonish you the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika brings out—matter you would never believe was in your system. In chronic constipation, gas bloating, sour stomach and sick headache, just ONE spoonful Adlerika brings wonderful relief. At leading druggists.—(adv.)

APPLICATIONS OPEN FOR POSTAL UNIT OF NATIONAL GUARD

Plans for organizing the postal section headquarters detachment, Thirtieth national guard division, in which there are three vacancies to be filled, are now being formulated, according to announcement Saturday by Lieutenant Colonel Eugene Oberdorfer, Jr., assistant chief of staff. Applications for these vacancies may be made to Colonel Oberdorfer either personally or by letter, at 309 Grant building, or by telephoning to him at Walnut 4162, it was stated.

"The general staff section," stated Colonel Oberdorfer, "already has been recruited to full strength allotted by the militia bureau of the war department. This section is now awaiting federal recognition and is ready to be mustered in as a unit of the Thirtieth national guard division."

It also was stated by Colonel Oberdorfer that the division will hold this summer its first encampment and reunion since the world war. A two-week's camp of instruction will be held at Camp Jackson, S. C., in which all the units of the national guard comprising the Thirtieth division will participate. Pay and allowances for members of the national guard is the same as that allowed by law to those of like grade in the regular army, it was stated.

Chamberlin Will Visit Atlanta

ELABORATE PROGRAM ARRANGED FOR FAMED FLIER

Tuesday in Tiny Flivver Plane

The smallest airplane that has ever landed at Candler field, according to aviation experts, will be that flown by Clarence D. Chamberlin, trans-Atlantic pilot, on his visit to Atlanta Tuesday. It is a "flivver" type plane with a wing spread of only 20 feet.

Chamberlin is using this tiny airship for his tour of the country principally because he desires to give it a thorough test under varying conditions. He believes that, like the low-priced automobile, it will go far toward making it possible for the general public to adopt a new form of travel.

The tiny plane is by no means new. It is the same Sperry "messenger" which went down into the English channel years ago with Lawrence Sperry. It was salvaged afterward and lay idle in an English hangar until last year, when Chamberlin bought it, reconditioned it, and put it into service again.

Late Only Once.

The pilot who flew the Columbia from New York to Germany with Charles Levine as passenger, just a few days after Lindbergh made his famous flight to Paris, has kept on his schedule during his present tour with the exception of his engagement in Macon, two weeks ago, when he encountered a terrific storm half-way between Long Island and his destination.

"I was forced to make a landing where I could," he said. "But it was not because of any failure of the little plane. It was absolute nausea. No landsman in a rowboat tossed in a storm at sea could have been sicker than I. We were upside down and sidewise and knocked about in that storm until all I could do was just come down and trust to luck to find a smooth spot. I could never have landed in a big plane."

Chamberlin is scheduled to arrive from Florida early Tuesday morning and land at Candler field, where he will be greeted by committees from the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, the Aeronautical association and the aviation committee of the city council. He will be taken to the Atlanta-Biltmore hotel for a rest in private.

Address at Georgia Tech.

At 11 o'clock Tuesday Chamberlin will address the aviation students of the Georgia School of Technology in their assembly hall. He will be introduced by Lieutenant Edgar E. Glenn, officer in charge of the flying school.

At 3 o'clock he will deliver a lecture, with motion pictures, at the auditorium, before the boys of the public schools, who will be admitted by tickets distributed through the school administration.

On Tuesday evening at the Biltmore hotel Chamberlin will be guest of honor and speaker at a dinner, to be given by the Aeronautical association. Reservations may be made at the hotel, at $3.50 per plate.

Chamberlin looks upon the achievements of the past year as the open sesame in aviation in the United States, since they awakened the country to the need for education in aeronautics, beginning with the youth in the public schools.

A Natural Development.

"The gesture of the Guggenheim fund in this direction is a natural development," said Chamberlin, commenting on the recent announcement that 85 school superintendents in cities of over 100,000 population had accepted the idea of introducing elementary courses in aeronautics into the public schools. "I am sure the idea will be enthusiastically received where it is tried out. It is the logical thing to do. The child imagination craves this sort of training. It will be of immeasurable help to aviation in the next 20 years.

"Manufacturers over the world are turning their attention to new models in airplanes. They are conscious of the trend; they foresee the need for models, perhaps as many as there are of automobiles at present. And there will be a demand for them all when flying has gripped the popular interest as I believe it will in another few years. Yes, I look for the day when we will be able to choose our model of airplane to meet our special requirements at our price. The demand in my opinion will have come long before the variety of plane designs has been greatly increased."

for the betterment of the men and women wounded, injured or disabled in defense of their country in the world war.

Letter to O'Glen Ray.

"I have today handed Mr. Ray the following letter:

"'It should not be necessary for me to call your attention to Article 11 of our national constitution, which specifically states that our organization shall not take part in any political or sectarian question, nor should it be necessary for me to remind you of the oath you took to uphold this constitution.

"'However, I have before me a letter which went out over your signature to ex-service men in and around Atlanta, Ga., in which you are soliciting votes for a particular candidate. It is true that this letter is not on official D. A. V. stationery, but it is on specially prepared stationery, carrying your name as national liaison officer of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War.

"'Even if this were not true, owing to the fact that you hold a national office in this organization, it is impossible to separate your individual actions from your official actions in the minds of many people. Therefore, this letter is concrete evidence that you have broken the constitution under which you are supposed to operate.

"'It is needless for me to tell you that I am extremely displeased. However, I have no desire to act harshly and unjustly in a moment of anger. For that reason this is to notify you that you are, from this time until further notice, suspended as national liaison officer of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War.

"'I am taking this action in order that I may gather together all the facts surrounding this episode, estimate the damage done by your totally unexpected, unwarranted and inexcusable act and then calmly and coolly deliberate on the matter. When more definite action has been taken you will be notified."

BALDWIN TO HOLD SPECIAL ELECTION

Milledgeville, Ga., March 3.—The primary to elect a successor to the late Benjamin Bass, tax collector of Baldwin county, will be held on March 7.

J. A. Rogers, an employee of the Georgia state sanitarium; L. D. Smith, prominent merchant and former member of the city, council, and A. I. Butts, well-known bookkeeper, are the candidates. Interest is keen and the race is expected to be close between the three candidates.

Carlton Binns Backers Plan Vigorous Drive

Predicting an overwhelming victory for Carlton W. Binns in his race for solicitor of the criminal court of Atlanta subject to the city democratic primary of March 7, speakers at a meeting of the third ward Binns club, of which J. H. Branan is chairman, Friday night called on voters of the county to continue the Binns ticket in office in the "interest of efficiency, courtesy and a fair and impartial enforcement of the laws of the state."

Several score members of the organization attended the meeting, at which Mr. Binns, R. B. Giles, J. C. Shelor and Arthur O. Haynes were among those who delivered addresses and laid plans for prosecution of a more vigorous campaign.

All speakers predicted victory for Mr. Binns, but declared that the Binns forces should solidify their strength with a view of polling a "big and decisive majority for the Binns ticket."

"On the eve of the voting in the race for solicitor of the criminal court of Atlanta, I feel that I should make public acknowledgement to my friends who are the friends of law and order, for the magnificent support which they have accorded me," Mr. Binns said. "My campaign manager, Lowry Arnold, my campaign committee, composed of the most conservative and substantial business men of this community and I are all in hearty accord in the belief that Fulton county citizens will return me and my associates to office on Wednesday, March 7.

"The people of Fulton county appreciating faithful service rendered in support of decency, law and order are not going to put my trained associates and myself out of office when our record is admittedly unblemished, just to gratify the ambition of some other man.

"My friends say that almost without precedent, it has been the immemorial custom on the part of the fair pulic to grant to an appointee who had demonstrated his fitness for office an endorsement, especially when the appointee's term of service was for so short a time as it has been my privilege to serve. Other friends are pointing out with convincing effect the training and qualifications of my associates, who gained their experience in service to the public through association with my predecessor in office, and are unwilling to put faithful, trained public servants out of office for no other reason than to satisfy the loud claims of other aspirants. No business would survive, much less succeed, if run on such principles.

"I am unhampered by affiliations which would prevent me from giving the people of Atlanta and Fulton county a strict enforcement of the laws in protection of their property and lives. I pledge my efforts towards making Fulton county a better, safer and more decent place in which to live and rear our children.

"I am proud of the clean record which I can offer to the voters of the county, in asking you to give me your indorsement. My selection will mean that the voters want a continuance of the enforcement program, which we have tried to prosecute in a fair, impartial, just and honest way.

"For these reasons and on account of the confidence in our integrity and qualifications, we predict an overwhelming victory on Wednesday."

NOTABLE CASTS IN 1928 OPERA

"L'Africaine," "Rigoletto," "La Boheme," "Carmen," "Pagliacci" and "Hansel and Gretel."

Mail orders from out-of-town people are now being received by Mr. Candler at the office of the association, 84 Broad street. These orders will be received, filed and filled in the order of their receipt.

Announcement By Metropolitan.

Announcement of the Metropolitan company regarding the Atlanta season, received Saturday, said:

"With even larger forces than usual and a most interesting and varied repertoire of operas new and old, familiar and unfamiliar, the Metropolitan Opera company of New York will make its usual spring invasion of Atlanta, when General Manager Giulio Gatti-Casazza will present his world famous organization on the occasion of Atlanta's eighteenth annual spring season of grand opera, beginning Monday evening, April 23.

"The brilliant results obtained last year when the number of performances was increased from seven to eight, so fully justified the experiment that Mr. Gatti-Casazza is pleased to announce that it will be repeated. This time, however, there will be five evening and three afternoon performances, two of the latter on Friday and Saturday, an arrangement which enables out-of-town patrons to hear five operas in two days and a half.

"Some outstanding features of the week may be noted. For the first time Atlanta will hear Vincenzo Bellini's masterpiece, "Norma," the revival of which after an absence of more than a generation from the Metropolitan stage, has been one of the most distinguished events not only of the season of 1927-28, but also of Mr. Gatti-Casazza's 20 years' management of the institution. Rosa Ponselle in the title role added new laurels to her reputation. The Atlanta performance will be of further interest, as in it will appear the new young American tenor, Frederick Jagel, who has constantly grown in popularity since his most successful debut with the company last fall.

"L'Africana" Opening Opera.

"Wisely, because of the richness of its setting and the truly grand opera quality of its music, calling for artists of the first rank for all its leading roles, has Myerbeer's 'L'Africana' been chosen for the opening night of the music festival. Miss Ponselle will sing the title role; Beniamino Gigli will impersonate 'Vasco da Gama'—one of his best roles. The ballet is a special feature of this work.

"Galli-Curci is a name ever to conjure with, and she will appear for the first time in her very captivating role of Rosina in Rossini's immortal grand comic opera, 'The Barber of Seville.' Nor is there a better 'Figaro' than Giuseppe De Luca, who will be in the cast.

"It is a long time since Humperdinck's delightful 'Hansel und Gretel' has been given in Atlanta, but it is as fascinating as ever, with Editha Fleischer and Queena Mario as the Babes in the Woods, and a wonderful witch in the person of a newcomer, Dorothee Manski. This opera, announced for Wednesday afternoon, will be followed by 'Pagliacci,' with an ideal cast, including Lucrezia Bori, Giovanni Martinelli and Lawrence Tibbett.

"It was in 'Rigoletto' that Marion Talley made her first bow with the company in New York two seasons ago. She will sing Gilda's music on Thursday evening with Beniamino Gigli and Giuseppe De Luca.

Wagner Not Neglected.

"Wagner lovers have not been neglected. The most popular opera of 'The Ring' will be sung on Friday afternoon, given after many years—'Die Walkure'—with a cast to make Europeans envious. It will include Florence Easton, Julia Claussen, Marion Telva, Rudolf Laubenthal and Clarence Whitehill, one of the world's finest Wotans.

"'Carmen' has been restored to the Metropolitan repertoire this season and Bizet's masterpiece will be the Saturday matinee opera of the festival, with Florence Easton (than whom there is no more versatile artist in any opera company) in the title role. This will be the occasion of the Atlanta grand opera debut of another southern girl, Grace Moore, late of Jellico, Tenn., who will be the Micaela of the occasion. The quartet will be completed by Messrs. Martinelli and Tibbett—the latter as the bull fighter, Escamillo. Here, again, the ballet figures prominently.

"The ever popular 'La Boheme' will bring the week of opera to a close with an ideal cast including Lucrezia Bori, Editha Fleischer, Beniamino Gigli, Antonio Scotti and Leon Rothier.

"The Metropolitan, it seems unnecessary to remind Atlanta, has the best there is to be had. Mr. Gatti-Casazza can only repeat the promise which he always has made good, that the full resources of this famous operatic organization will be drawn upon and that the performances will approximate in casts of artists, scenic splendor, ballet, orchestra, chorus and every other detail, the New York productions, which have given the company its international distinction."

SERGEANT ALVIN YORK HAS NEW TREASURES

Nashville, Tenn., March 3.—(AP)—Two prized acquisitions—one a 12-pound son, and the other a letter of praise from the late Field Marshal Haig—are new treasures of Sergeant Alvin C. York, world war hero, who has disposed of business interests in order to superintend the building of his school for mountain chidren.

The letter from Marshal Haig, written from Bewersyde, St. Boswell's, Scotland, in reply to a December missive of York's, wishes him success in his project, and expresses the general's pleasure that "you, who gave such splendid proof of your powers of leadership in the war—use these same great powers in peace to advance the good of your fellow countrymen."

And the baby—Sam Houston York is his name, and he is the fourth son born to the war veteran.

STATE G. O. P. ASKS DRAFT OF COOLIDGE

en, all colored; Rockdale county, H. W. Williams.

Delegates from the fifth district at large included C. P. Goree, assistant United States district attorney; T. W. Holmes, colored; J. T. Rose, deputy internal revenue collector; C. W. Hager, United States district attorney; S. S. Simmons and J. B. Dove.

Coolidge Commended

Resolutions indorsed at the state meeting commended President Coolidge for his business administration and expressed the hope that he would permit himself to be drafted for his party.

The following state officers were named for the next four years: Roscoe Pickett, of Jasper, chairman; Mr. Rose, vice chairman; Davis, secretary, and John W. Martin, treasurer.

Sharp debate arose at the meeting over the question of whether or not district and state national delegations should be instructed for Hoover, or merely asked to "favor" the Hoover candidacy, with Clark Grier, of the Fulton county delegation, seeking the instructed group and Davis opposed to such a course. Davis won.

Both Grier and Doughman, Atlanta attorney, vigorously challenged the legality of the two meetings and announced they would call new sessions to select national delegates.

Another stormy debate followed Doughman's declaration on the floor alleging the Fulton county group had no legal right to seats in the district session. He was ruled out of order by the chair.

MUSSOLINI MAKES VIRTUAL WAR THREAT

cisms, he would speak with "the utmost calm but without equivocation." He added:

"Furthermore, this is the last time I shall speak upon this theme. In the future I shall let the facts do the talking."

The premier made his address, which was greeted with a storm of applause, only a few hours after he had marched in the funeral procession of Marshal Armando Diaz, whose victory over the Austrian army in 1918 gave Italy her present northern frontier. However, he made no use of the significance of the morning's commemoration, confining himself to a review of what fascist Italy had done for citizens of German blood and speech and Italy's aid to Austria after the post-war debacle.

All talk of submitting the question of "minorities" to the League of Nations is nonsense, the premier declared, adding that if Geneva entered "such a labyrinth it would never succeed or emerge."

His reference to the League of Nations, uttered with what appeared a sardonic smile, evoked some titters of laughter from among the deputies who had crowded the chamber in which he spoke.

Ridicules Charges.

This reference, the premier emphasized, repeating: "The League of Nations? Geneva? What a hope!"

His peroration, "Let us make known to the Tyrolese, to the Austrians and to the whole world that upon the Brenner pass all Italy with its living and its dead is upright and on its guard," was the signal for a storm of applause from the deputies who rose as one man, singing "Giovennessa," the Italian hymn.

Answering protests in the Austrian parliament against the alleged mistreatment of the German-speaking inhabitants of the upper Adige, the premier declared that all reports about "systems of tyranny, brothers tortured and peoples slaughtered by the barbarous fascista dictatorship, besides being false, are superlatively ridiculous."

"We are not the pupils of Austria which for a whole century filled the countries of half Europe with executioners, filled the prisons with martyrs and erected scaffolds everywhere," he said.

Declaring that reports of fascist atrocities were the mere inventions of a diseased imagination, the premier said that only two persons of German nationality in the Adige were sent into forced domicile. One of them was almost immediately freed and the penalty on the other was reduced and "indeed he would also have been freed had it not been that a campaign in his favor was conducted abroad."

Replying to charges that Italy had done nothing to build up the province of Bolzano, Mussolini said that Italy had undertaken there gigantic public works and spent hundreds of millions of lire electrifying the Bolzano-Brenner railway and constructing two great hydroelectric plants, one of 40,000 and the other of 270,000 horsepower, 195,000 of which would be utilized for private industry. This represented a total government outlay of 400,000,000 lire and employed 5,000 workmen.

Gives Last Warning.

"It was most curious during the excavations," the premier exclaimed, "that workmen found Roman coins of the first centuries of the Roman empire!"

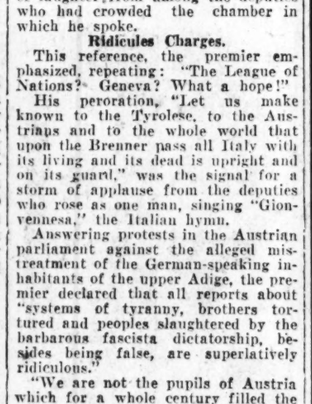

Other huge works were erected and 11,000,000 lire were spent on rural houses, most of which went to shelter Italian farmers of German nationality, the premier said.

Expanding on conditions in Bolzano, Mussolini asserted that there were still fifteen newspapers published in the German language there, political as well as economic, religious, literary and scholastic.

"Since our great tolerance is badly understood," he added, "I give a last warning: If the anti-Italian campaign continues beyond the Brenner the fate of these publications is sealed. They will be suppressed."

20-STORY BUILDING PLANNED FOR ATLANTA

contracts will be called for, with actual building to be begun before the expiration of 90 days, it was stated. Completion of the building is scheduled for approximately one year from now.

The edifice will be known as the Rhodes-Haverty building, for its owners. According to the architects it will be of distinct American design, one that will be an unusually handsome landmark for the upper Peachtree street section. The ground floor on the street frontages will be devoted to store space, room being provided for three stores on Peachtree street and three on Forsyth street. An arcade extending from Peachtree to Forsyth street is planned for the north portion of the building. Four elevators will be installed of the most modern type in any office building south of New York, it was stated. Three will be for passenger traffic, equipped with flying stops, push button devices, high speed arrangement and complete safety. The entire structure will contain approximately 85,000 square feet of floor space, making a large addition to the existing office facilities in Atlanta.

Near Theater District.

The Peachtree and James streets site has been mentioned in the past few years as the probable location of a major improvement, preferably an office building. Its proximity to the rapidly developing hotel and theater district makes it an extremely valuable plot for development of this kind, Mr. Haverty remarked, the value of the vacant lot being conservatively placed at $600,000. The new structure will be within a short distance of many of Atlanta's most prominent downtown buildings.

Plans were announced several months ago by Mr. Rhodes and Mr. Haverty for use of the site to construct a three-story office building. Later the value of the location was considered too great to be devoted to the original plans and the large edifice was decided upon. For the purpose of incorporating the latest improvements in the way of office buildings an inspection tour of the large metropolitan sections of America was made by Mr. Rhodes, Mr. Haverty and Mr. Pringle, who returned last week from New York.

Mr. Haverty, who is chairman of the city art commission, and officially interested in improving the structural appearance of Atlanta, stated that in the design of this building the owners feel that beauty should be combined with utility, "thereby developing standards of culture in architecture which will represent the energy, imagination and aspirations of the American spirit. America has developed a great and beautiful architecture," Mr. Haverty stated. "It is distinct in character and one which is the admiration of Europe with her magnificent standards of culture of past generations. Atlanta is looked upon as the center of culture in the south, and in this new building is to be illustrated that spirit of culture which belongs to the south."

Material to be used in construction of the Rhodes-Haverty office building will be terra cotta, brick and granite. Pringle & Smith, the architects for the new building, have designed many of Atlanta's principal structures and important buildings in other cities, including the Norris building and Carlton apartments, on Peachtree street; the Fulton National bank, on Marietta street; the Lynch office building, in Jacksonville, Fla.; the Forrest Hills-Ricker hotel, in Augusta, and several other modern structures.

If You Need a Tonic Get the Best

"For several years after I married I suffered from weakness. I grew very thin and pale and was so extremely nervous that at any sudden noise I would jump and be nervous for hours. My back ached and I was so weak I could scarcely get around to do my little housework, when through the advice of a friend I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and by the time I had taken four bottles I was getting along just fine. It restored my nerves and so strengthened the organs that I have had no more trouble. I have since become the mother of two very healthy, strong children."—Mrs. J. R. McClendon, 1462 Broad St., Augusta, Ga. (Picture above.)

Negro Must Die.

Nashville, Tenn., March 3.—(AP)—Will Terrill, negro, must die April 18 for a criminal assault on an aged white woman near Nashville last year, the state supreme court decided today.

ENGAGEMENT RING DECISION REVERSED IN SUITOR'S FAVOR

The court of appeals Saturday reversed a ruling of the Albany city court which granted Miss Helen Frances Smith the custody of an engagement ring given to her by R. C. Hawkins, holding that the retention of an engagement ring after an engagement was broken depended on the circumstances in the case.

Miss Smith contended that she tendered the ring to Hawkins after their engagement was broken and that he told her to keep the ring. Hawkins contended that he merely told Miss Smith to keep the ring in the hope that they could adjust their differences. The lower court ruled in favor of Miss Smith but the higher court reversed the ruling and remanded the case for trial by the Albany city court.

Annual Bible Conference Opens Today at Tabernacle

The annual Bible conference, one of the most important events of the year in Georgia church affairs, will open this morning at the Baptist Tabernacle on Luckie street.

The morning service hour will be devoted chiefly to introduction of the world-famous group of Bible teachers who are to speak at the three daily sessions on each of the eight days of the conference and with official welcomes on behalf of the city and state to the speakers and to the hundreds of ministers and laymen from out of the city who are here for the eight-day series of meetings.

Governor L. G. Hardman will welcome the visitors on behalf of the state, while the city's greetings will be voiced by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale.

Miss Saxe Returns.

Among the list of internationally-known speakers and Bible teachers here for the conference, is Miss Grace Saxe, of Chicago, known for many years for her Bible lesson courses designed especially for young people. Miss Saxe illustrates her lectures, which will be given daily during the conference, with large charts. Atlantans recall Miss Saxe's previous work in this city when she was here in 1917 as one of the leading workers with Billy Sunday in his seven-week revival.

Dr. R. A. Torrey, of Asheville, who is as famous in Great Britain and Australia as he is in America, is another speaker who returns to Atlanta after attending previous conferences. Dr. Torrey, in addition to speaking daily, will conduct a "question box," inviting all who wish to submit any questions regarding the Bible which have puzzled them.

Dr. J. C. Massee, of Tremont Temple, Boston, is another favorite of past years who returns.

Newcomers To Atlanta.

Among the newcomers to Atlanta are Dr. William Lamb, outstanding pulpit orator of Australia; Dr. M. E. Dodd, of Shreveport, and Dr. Harry Ironside, of California.

Musical programs will form a part of every session of the conference, with the Emory Four quartette taking the principal part.

Sessions will be held at the tabernacle daily, morning, afternoon and night and, in anticipation of the large crowds expected, additional seats have been added to the normal capacity of more than 3,000.

The conference is undenominational in character and Dr. Will H. Houghton, pastor of the tabernacle, with officials of the church, invites all Atlantans and visitors, irrespective of church affiliation, to attend.

Bible Students, Hairdressers Meet This Week

A Bible conference and a hairdressers' convention are on the books for Atlanta this week.

The Bible conference will begin today at the Baptist Tabernacle and is expected to assemble some of the country's leading religious students for a week of afternoon and evening lectures.

For three days, beginning Monday, 500 marcel, water wave and shingle bob experts from seven southern states will hold a convention at the Ansley hotel. The program for the opening day includes a parade, one float in which will bare to the world at large the intimate secrets of those little beauty parlor booths, as four women will be given permanent waves as they pass through Atlanta's downtown section.

At the same time an airplane will circle over the city, dropping cards which will entitle the bearer to beauty shop specialties at various city shops.

Next Sunday the Southeastern council of Jewish women will assemble at the Biltmore hotel for a three-day session. The plans for their entertainment were formulated at a recent meeting of the Atlanta section of the National council of Jewish women, of which Mrs. Frank Neely is president.

The Atlanta tourist and convention bureau announced Saturday that through March 1, 136 conventions had been secured for Atlanta in 1928. Many of these have already been held, but the larger conventions, ten of which are national in scope, will be held later in the year.

Four conventions have been booked for 1929, the largest of these being the National Association of Commission Merchants. It will assemble over 800 produce men from all over the country in January, 1929.

CAPTAIN BREWSTER ASSUMES COMMAND AT G. M. A. TODAY

Georgia Military academy this morning begins a new military administration in the appointment of a West Point graduate, Captain William R. Brewster, as commandant. He succeeds John Q. Nash, who resigned to accept work with Fulton county.

The new commandant is a native of Pine Bluff, Ark., having attended the University of Arkansas before receiving his appointment to West Point. Following his graduation from the United States Military academy, at West Point, he served five years in the United States army, three years as an instructor at Camp Benning and two years in the Panama canal zone.

Captain Brewster has been associated with Colonel J. C. Woodward, president of the Georgia Military academy, for two years, having been head of the history department of the school since the fall of 1926. His promotion to commandant of the school will mean that he will continue at the Atlanta institution and not return to active service in the United States army. He has been acting as assistant commandant to Mr. Nash since coming to the Georgia Military academy.

CONYERS FINED $11 ON FIVE CHARGES

Appearing in police court in answer to five charges, Ed Conyers, 62, of a local hotel, was fined only $11 by Acting Recorder W. G. Cooper. Conyers was charged by the arresting officers with "drunk, disorderly conduct, carrying concealed weapons, possessing liquor and discharging firearms within the city limits," according to police records.

SUMMER SCHOOL TO PRESENT OPERAS

Athens, Ga., March 3.—The greatest program of entertainment ever sponsored by the University of Georgia Summer school is planned for the ensuing season, according to Dr. J. S. Stewart, director of the summer school, who has announced the schedule for four complete grand operas during the fifth week of the summer season. The first opera, "La Traviata," will be sung Tuesday evening, July 24; "Sampson and Delilah," July 25; "Hansel and Gretel," July 26, and "Romeo and Juliet," July 27.

Queener Marion, a great favorite with Georgia audiences, has contracted to sing three operas, and Norworney and Judson House, of the Metropolitan Opera company, will also sing here this summer. Dr. Stewart also states that three other Metropolitan stars will contract in the next few days for appearance here this summer.

In connection with the week of grand opera, which is free to all summer school students, there will also be held a music teachers' institute for lovers and teachers of music in the south.

Boys' Hi Club To Repeat Play Tuesday Night

"Three Live Ghosts," the comedy which the Boys' High Dramatic club recently presented so successfully at Atlanta Woman's club auditorium, will be repeated by popular request Tuesday evening, March 6, again at the Woman's club. This production is the first full-length play that the group has offered this season, and it marks the peak of the work that this organization has been doing during the past three years.

The cast is an exceptionally well-chosen one, and speaks well for the ability of the club's director, M. H. Davis, of the school faculty. While he has been the director the club has won several play competitions, the most recent being the one-act play tournament sponsored by the Marietta Y. W. C. A.

The cast includes the following students of Boys 'High school: Carlos Lynes, Walter Paschall, Richard Clark, Randolph Echols, Henry Kingdon, Lee Laney, William Bailey, Ben Read and Charles Wagner. Hal Hulsey is faculty business manager of the club, with Alex Gaines acting in that capacity for the student office.

Admission will be 50 cents, and no seats will be reserved. Tickets may be secured at the school from individual students, or at the box office the evening of the performance, which starts at 8 o'clock.

MOODY INSTITUTE FILM TO BE SHOWN IN OTHER CHURCHES

Due to the intense interest aroused by the showing at the Baptist Tabernacle last week of a four-reel picture, "Life at the Moody Bible Institute," the film will be shown again soon in other churches of the city, it is announced.

In the picture are pictorially portrayed the daily scenes of actual life at the Moody institute, showing the 1,500 and more students at their lessons, meals, recreations and religious work.

The Moody Bible institute, founded by the great evangelist Dwight L. Moody, is known far and wide as the "West Point of Christian Service," and graduates of the institution are found in all parts of the earth, and the influence of the school has touched practically every nation.

Co-Ed Movement at Emory

NUMBER OF FEMALE STUDENTS STEADILY MOUNTING

Disturbing Male Contingent

The co-ed movement on the Emory campus is progressing rapidly, according to college statistics. Despite opposition offered by many members of the male contingent of the Emory student body, more and more co-eds are calling Emory "alma mater."

The number of co-eds has increased during the 1927-28 semesters to almost double the number at Emory in 1926-27. And a report from the registrar's office shows an increase of three co-eds during the last quarter.

All the schools have co-eds except the Business Administration school and the Medical school. However, the biology and chemistry departments have four co-eds who are otherwise listed in the graduate school, but are taking all their work in these two departments.

In the college of liberal arts, there are six co-eds in the freshman class. There was one in the class of 1925-26 and three in the freshman class of 1926-27. The sophomore class this year has seven girl students; there are six junior and one senior co-eds. Several of these are Atlanta girls who find it more convenient to attend Emory than to go away. Two of the co-eds are former Agnes Scott students and one is from the Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville.

Two girls are registered in the Lamar school of law and one in the Technological school, the report says. The graduate school has 16 co-eds, making a total of 44 co-eds, with the number steadily increasing.

IF KIDNEYS BOTHER TRY DOSE OF SALTS

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much rich food creates acids which clog the kidney pores so that they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood. Then you get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin to drink soft water in quantities; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activtiy, also to help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby often preventing serious kidney complications.—(adv.)

WALTER B. STEWART

CANDIDATE FOR

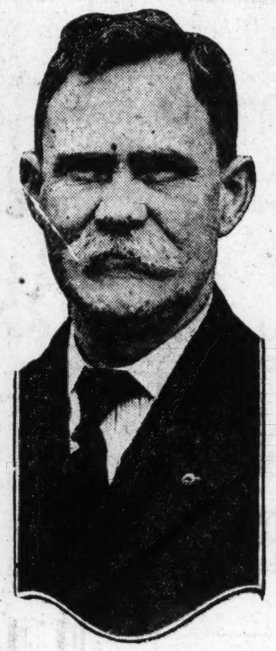

County Commissioner

Subject to Democratic Primary March 7, 1928.

Your vote and influence will be appreciated.

TO THE CITIZENS of FULTON COUNTY

Captain Lowry and his associates are deeply grateful for the many expressions of commendation and assurance of his hearty support by the people of Fulton County. His Campaign Committee has had the courteous and hearty co-operation of the people from every part of Fulton County. They are proud of him, realizing that the office of Sheriff is one of great importance to both the County and State. He is the first aid of the courts, carries out their mandates and executes their judgments, has the power and authority to summons every citizen of the County to maintain the peace and dignity of the County. The Sheriff's duties are numerous and complicated.

CAPT. JAMES I. LOWRY

Every citizen owes it to himself and to his County to exercise as much care in selecting a Sheriff as he would in selecting a trustee or guardian for his minor children. The citizens' life, liberty and property, as well as his comfort and happiness, are affected by the efficiency of our Sheriff and his competent corps of deputies. His splendid ability so nobly blended with dignity, sound judgment, efficient service, firm but courteous manner, his devotion to duty, his loyalty to principle and splendid spirit of fairness, has challenged the admiration and pride of the people whom he serves. He is known all over the State as a man of unbending and uncompromising integrity.

The outside world judges people by the officers they select, because they reflect themselves through the officers they elect, especially is this true of Fulton County, the capital county of the State, and Captain Lowry is looked upon by the State as a standard. His election is assured and the voters of Fulton County are going to make his election decisive on March the 7th.

Five Floyd County Families

:: COMBINED TOTAL WOULD MAKE REGULAR TOWN ::

Boast 639 Living Progeny

Rome, Ga., March 3.—(Special.)—While it may not be the record for all the United States still Floyd county can put up a mark for other communities of the country to shoot at, for a while, anyway. There may be larger families in Floyd county of descendants with the head of the family still living, than the five reported, but for the present these five may be taken as champions.

The five family records contain what may be called two all-time records even if one or more of the three might be beaten as to number.

One of these records is held by a family whose head is living and but 58 years old. He has 109 descendants. The second record is held by a family with five genegations represented and a total of 170 descendants. The total descendants of the five families recently reported is 639, or an average of 127 plus per family. Of these 520 are living making a grand average of 104 members per family.

These five families live in different parts of the county, but if they lived in the same community and nobody else moved in it, it would still be a sizeable village.

The records, as recently published, are as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Bolt, age 85 and 75, respectively, who have 103 descendants including 13 children, 59 grandchildren and 31 great-grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Bolt live in Lindale.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Mormon, age 58, have a total of 109 descendants, including 14 children, 55 grandchildren and 41 great-grandchildren. They live on R. F. D. No. 7.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Lovell, age 88, living near Floyd county, have a total of 120 descendants. The family includes 12 children, 59 grandchildren, and 49 great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Sarah Ezzell, living at Wax, sends in a record of 137 descendants, including 13 children, 61 grandchildren and 48 great-grandchildren.

The champion family of the county, however, is that of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Womack, who live in Lindale. They are 88 years old and have 170 descendants in five generations. The descendants are as follows: eight children, 75 grandchildren, 81 great-grandchildren and five great-great-grandchildren.

No race suicide here!

BALDWIN STARTS MEMBERSHIP DRIVE FOR CORN CLUBS

Milledgeville, Ga., March 3.—Work on enrolling boys and girls in the Baldwin County Corn club has commenced by County Agent E. A. Nesmith.

Mr. Nesmith will within the next few weeks visit every school in the county and will endeavor to secure a record enrollment in the boys' corn club work. Liberal prizes are being offered at the Baldwin county fair in October.

BALDWIN COUNTY FARMERS WARNED OF WEEVIL PERIL

Milledgeville, Ga., March 3.—County Agent E. A. Nesmith has issued a warning to the farmers of Baldwin county advising them to dispense with any ideas that any considerable number of boll weevils were killed by the cold weather during the past winter. Mr. Nesmith states that, while some weevils were killed, the infestation will be heavy again this year, and advises farmers to cut their cotton acreage down as much as possible and increase the yield by fertilizing heavily and liberal use of calcium arsenate and other boll weevil preventives. A fair cotton acreage is predicted for Baldwin county.

Dr. C. W. Downey Again Named Mayor Of Tallapoosa, Ga.

Tallapoosa, Ga., March 3.—(Special.)—Dr. C. W. Downey, was re-elected mayor of Tallapoosa in the annual election by defeating Arthur Brewster by a vote of 132 to 65.

Charles E. Pearce, agent and manager of the Tallapoosa mills, was re-elected as councilman, receiving 123 votes; C. A. Swint was nominated also for councilman, his vote being 117. J. R. McKibben and J. S. Strickland were the defeated candidates for councilmanic places.

GEORGIA EAGLES PLAN HUGE MEET

Augusta, Ga., March 2.—(Special.) A program for Georgia Eagles brimful of activity and aiming for the expansion of the order, to culminate with the state convention in Savannah June 5 and 6, is announced by S. Herbert Elliott, state president.

The state executive committee will meet in Macon on March 7, to discuss matters of great importance to the fraternity and to make plans for the state convention, including the appointment of committees to work out the details of the convention, which the president plans to make the greatest in the history of Georgia Eagledom. The old ag pension plan, which has been adopted in a number of states throughout the country, will be one of the main features discussed by the committee with a view to its establishment in Georgia.

Accompanying Mr. Elliott to the executive committee meeting will be the following members from Augusta: Albert Ingram, state secretary; L. J. Schaul, past worthy president; H. T. Bridges, chaplain of Augusta aerie, and T. S. Lyons, secretary of Augusta aerie.

On March 11, Savannah aerie, with a membership of more than 2,000, will celebrate its silver jubilee with appropriate exercises. Otto P. Deluse, of Indianapolis, past grand worthy president, will deliver the principal address.

An initiation of a class of over 300 candidates will be a feature of the event. State President Elliott will also deliver one of the principal addresses. Delegates to the Savannah silver jubilee from Augusta have been appointed as follows: B. S. Goldberg, past worthy president; L. J. Schaul, past worthy president, and E. J. Cook, vice president of Augusta aerie.

On March 12 Savannah aerie will stage a banquet for the national officers and state officers in attendance at the silver jubilee ceremonies.

State President Elliott stated that on April 21 he would visit Atlanta aerie to make plans for a Mother's day celebration there and to inspect the aerie.

On March 12 Mr. Mr. Deluse will visit Augusta aerie and will be accompanied by officers of Savannah aerie. It is planned to initiate a large class and stage a banquet in honor of the national officer's visit.

2 STATESBORO GIRLS MISSING FROM HOME

Statesboro, Ga., March 3.—(AP)—Two girls, believed to have but little money and following an ambition to "earn their way through the world," are missing here, having disappeared Thursday. Their absence is causing considerable concern to their parents and friends. They are Arvis Brinson, aged 14, and May Lee Hutchinson, aged 12.

The two girls left home some time Thursday. Late in the afternoon they were seen in Dover, a nearby town. Since then they have not been heard from.

Phi Delta Kappa Hold Initiation Rites This Month

Initiation ceremonies in the Georgia Alpha chapter of Phi Delta Kappa, national young men's social fraternity, will be held late this month, according to announcement Saturday.

The Phi Delta Kappa fraternity is characterized as perhaps the largest Greek letter organization of its kind in the nation and is in no way affiliated with college institutions. It was founded in Marion, Ind., in 1902, and the Georgia chapter was recently organized in Atlanta. The national body has a membership of about 15,000.

On March 7 the officers and members of the local chapter will entertain its pledges at a dance in the D. A. R. hall. Recently elected officers for the year are: Lawrence J. Cole, president; Lloyd B. Spink, vice president; Clarence F. Sessions, secretary, and Gus H. Howard, Jr., treasurer.

Phi Delta Kappa is an organization of progressive business and professional men. Its membership is formed by careful and discriminating selection of the most representative men who may be relied on to cooperate with their fellow members.

The rituals and teachings of Phi Delta Kappa do not conflict in any way with any religious beliefs or political affiliations of any of its members, the local officers said. It has become more than a fraternity, due to its tremendous growth, and has stepped into the ranks of many civic improvements, becoming a big factor in a large number of the various communities in which its 93 active chapters are scattered.

The Atlanta chapter of the organization is now holding weekly meetings regularly in the pine room of the Ansley hotel while plans are being worked out for the erection of a permanent chapter home.

Officials of the local chapter said Saturday that the annual convention of the fraternity will be held in July in Indiana. Local officers are desirous, with the cooperation of other southern chapters, of bringing the convention to Atlanta some time in the future.

Peach County's Initial Primary Shows Big Vote

Fort Valley, Ga., March 3.—(AP)—One of the most spirited county primaries ever held in the state and the first spirited contests ever held since the creation of Peach county, took place here yesterday. The various county officers were nominated in the 1,500 votes cast. Six hundred women balloted and they took great interest in the various contests. A total of 1,075 votes were cast in Fort Valley alone.

W. M. Blewster defeated Emmett Houser for clerk of the superior court by a majority of 63 votes. Mr. Houser is one of the best known men in Peach county.

Sheriff George Anderson defeated his opponent, Hal Vaughn, by a majority of 925 votes.

C. N. Rountree, tax receiver, was reelected over his opponent, V. L. Stanley, by a majority of 718 votes.

J. E. Broaderick led the ticket for county treasurer over three other opponents by 167 majority.

M. C. Moseley, county manager and ordinary, and T. E. Tharp, tax collector, are unopposed. The primary resulted in a busy day Friday for the voters of Peach county. The new officers take office this year.

ERSKINE TO SPEAK TOMORROW NIGHT AT AGNES SCOTT

Decatur, March 3.—Dr. John Erskine, well-known novelist and professor of the English department of Columbia university, will deliver an address in the auditorium at Agnes Scott college Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock.

The subject of Dr. Erskine's talk on this occasion will be "The Delight of Great Books." The presence of the author was part of the program arranged for Agnes Scott by the lecture association of the college.

Tickets for Monday night's lecture are on sale at the Davison-Paxon department store, it was announced.

FIVE-ACRE COTTON CONTESTS TO HAVE BALDWIN ENTRANTS

Milledgeville, Ga., March 3.—Baldwin county enrollments in the state five-acre cotton contest are being made rapidly, according to County Agent E. A. Nesmith.

Mr. Nesmith plans to have Baldwin county well represented next fall when the awards in the cotton contest are announced. The county agent who ends the cotton contest with the largest enrollment of farmers gets a prize of $100 and several farmers have predicted that County Agent Nesmith will be a strong contender for this prize. A first prize of $1,000 is offered to farmers in the state making the largest yield on five acres. The contest is being handled by the State College of Agriculture.

LEGION CHAPLAIN TO SPEAK MONDAY AT THOMASVILLE

Thomasville, Ga., March 3.—Legionnaires of Thomasville, Monday evening will hear addresses from Rev. Gill R. Wilson, national chaplain, and J. M. Carr, state adjutant, American Legion.

Chaplain Wilson was elected to that position at the legion's ninth annual convention, held at Paris, France. He is a minister of the Presbyterian church, and his brother, Dr. Gill L. Wilson, and his mother, Rev. Amanda Robb Wilson, are both active in the ministry. He served in the world war as a combatant, and saw much active service, including a term in the aviation division.

Treutlen County Flogger Begins 3-5 Year Term

Soperton, Ga., March 3.—(AP)—R. E. Lee, convicted last August for assault with intent to murder and sentenced to three to five years in the state penitentiary in connection with the flogging of E. M. Flanders, editor of the Soperton News, has begun serving his sentence. The conviction recently was affirmed by the state supreme court.

Several others under indictment in connection with the flogging probably will be tried at the August term of superior court here.

9-CENT GASOLINE FOR ATLANTA

A startling announcement that will be welcomed by the readers of this paper is the perfection of an invention that practically cuts gasoline cost in half. In actual test one gallon of gas has been made to run a car 50 miles. Thousands of cars have been equipped and the owners report amazing gasoline savings, more power, instant starting, quicker pick-up and disappearance of carbon. So that this invention can be installed on every car, E. Oliver, 999-1613 N. Third street, Milwaukee, Wis., is seeking men in different localities to handle exclusive territory for him. To those interested he will explain his $5,000 a year offer. Write him for his proposition and free sample offer at once.—(adv.)

SPONSORSHIP ASKED FOR NEEDY CHILDREN

The Georgia Mother, which was once the Ansley Memorial home, an institution for unfortunate children, is asking that every Atlanta mother become the sponsor for some needy child.

Mrs. J. J. Ansley, who donated her home on Crew street and a farm in Harris county, near Columbus, to the institution, is the home mother. The institution has asked that every Atlanta mother knowing of some needy child send in its name and a description of conditions to Mrs. J. E. Andrews, president of the advisory board at 319 Pulliam street.

A committee will investigate such reports, and they will at all times be treated with strictest confidence. Mrs. J. E. Andrews is president of the board; Mrs. W. S. McMillan, vice president; Mrs. E. E. Huguley, second vice president; Mrs. Clyde Drummond, treasurer; Mrs. Walter Scott, secretary, and Mrs. M. L. Duggan, chairman.

Other members are Mrs. B. G. Otwell, Mrs. J. B. Matthews, Mrs. Rebecca L. Felton, Cartersville, who is also honorary life grand mother; Mrs. Edgar Alexander, Miss Carolyn Rosborough, Mrs. Otis Poundstone, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Mrs. John F. Barnwell and Mrs. J. D. Willingham.

3 Buildings To Cost $550,000 On New Agnes Scott Program

The next step in the Greater Agnes Scott college building program will likely be taken this spring with the erection of a $125,000 power plant to take care of the entire college plant, according to an announcement Saturday by the college authorities.

The administration building, which will cost $300,000, and the chapel, costing $125,000, will follow next on the building program. The three structures will cost $550,000.

A survey is now being made for the power plant and plans for it are being prepared. It will be large and complete enough to take care of all existing buildings, including the gymnasium, as well as the ones still to be erected.

The administration building will include the offices of the college and several additional classrooms. It will be one of the most complete buildings of its type in the country.

The chapel will be a memorial to Dr. F. H. Gaines, founder of the college, and its president until 1923.

The gymnasium was the first unit to be erected under the new building program. It is considered a model of its kind. With the completion of the other buildings, the college, it was stated, will be equipped not only for its present expansion but also for its future requirements.

Additional buildings are justified and are made necessary, according to the announcement from the college, because of the growth of the enrollment. There are now 500 students in attendance, against 200 in 1913. The increase has been 100 per cent in the past ten years. Pupils are in attendance from 27 states and from Korea, Mexico and Venezuela.

Coincident with the growth of the enrollment has been the development of vocational training, according to the announcement. Ten years ago the graduate of a woman's college looked forward either to teaching or matrimony. Now the courses at Agnes Scott fit young women for various business and professional activities. Several of the students are regularly on the list of the college placement office, which finds places for graduates.

Authorities at Agnes Scott estimate that more than half of the students go into business or the professions after graduation. Several have entered medical schools after graduating from the science departments. The course in psychology has supplied advertising writers to business concerns in Atlanta and other cities. The course in economics supplies workers to sales organizations. Many of the girls find temporary work in Atlanta stores.

JUDAEAN CLUBS TO OBSERVE PURIM NEXT SUNDAY NIGHT

An interesting program in celebration of Purim will be presented by the boys and girls of the S. I. J. and T. E. L. Young Judaean clubs at 7:30 o'clock Sunday night, March 11, at the Shearith Israel synagogue, located at 302 Hunter street, S. E. The feature event of the program will be a Purim humorous play "Casting of Lots."

In addition to this play there will be recitations and songs appropriate for the celebration of Purim. There also will be a musical program.

The program has been arranged by Louis Geffen with the assistance of Miss Bessie Geffen. The public is invited.

MAJ. HESTER ORDERED TO FORT LEWIS, WASH.

Major John H. Hester, 22nd Infantry, now in command of the second battalion of that unit at Fort McPherson, Saturday received war department orders transferring him to Fort Lewis, Washington, to take effect September 5.

Major Hester has been at Fort McPherson since last summer, reporting to the regiment after the completion of the war college course of 1927. He is a graduate of West Point.

Dr. H. R. Calkins To Speak Monday On Work in India

With Governor L. G. Hardman presiding as chairman of the meeting, a lecture on "The Heart of Hinduism," will be given at the First Baptist church at 8 o'clock Monday night by Dr. Harvey Reeves Calkins, of Lucknow, India. Dr. Poteat, who is serving a pastor of the First Baptist church, states that the public is invited and that no admission charge will be made. "It is not a religious lecture," said Dr. Poteat, "but one which should interest every well-informed thinking person."

Dr. Calkins has recently returned to the United States. He has resided in the Orient for nearly 25 years, working principally in India and China. On his last trip through China he stated that he was followed for more than a year by Japanese spies. Dr. Calkins is said to have caught the psychology of the Oriental mind as few white men have.

"England, with all of her laudable intentions, has not understood India," Dr. Calkins claims. "The English mind cannot seem to understand that such men as Gandhi and Tagore, and the numerous other leaders of Hindu thought, are gentlemen; gentlemen of the highest culture and not 'brown skinned natives.'

"Indeed, a common fallacy of the western mind is to regard India as a seething mass of jungle, tigers and vile humanity. Nothing could be farther from truth. Bombay undoubtedly is the most beautiful city in the world. One sees marble palaces, beautiful parkways that would do credit to Atlanta or New York, matchless roads which have stood for centuries—and a people who show a background of culture which existed for centuries before the Aryan white came out of the savagery of the forests of northern Europe and began his western civilization.

Puzzle to Occidental.

"The leaders of Hindu thought are well bred gentlemen, often highly educated, always courteous, but an eternal puzzle to the occidental mind. And the women are beautiful. The simplicity of their attire, patterned after the fashions of classic Greece, is indescribably attractive. I have seen Madrasi coolie women going to the fields dressed as modish as a western woman would dress for a ball.

"But there is another side to the picture, and a much darker one, which I shall be happy to convey to the people of Atlanta in the course of the lecture Monday evening and to explain, as best I can, the complexities of Hindu psychology and philosophy. A great future awaits the United States in India, for the Hindu loves America. He loves America because America understands him better and seems to sympathize with him more than other nations," Dr. Calkins concluded.

4 OIL COMPANIES SLASH GASOLINE PRICE TO 18 CENTS

Forced by independents to slash gasoline prices three cents a gallon for the second time within the past few months, four large oil companies Saturday announced a cut to 18 cents per gallon to meet the price level of the independents.

The companies which cut to the 18-cent mark were the Standard Oil company, the Gulf Refining company, the Reed Oil company and the Wofford Oil company, while Sinclair and Texas company officials said they had not been authorized to reduce prices.

Atlanta Mfg. Co., Inc., Opens Large Factory At 541 Stewart Ave., S.W.

The Atlanta Manufacturing company, Inc., makers of tents, awnings and tarpaulins, has opened a new factory at 541 Stewart avenue, S. W., a larger and better equipped building.

The John Boyle and company, Inc., of New York, has selected Atlanta as jobbing headquarters of the south. The concern has selected the Atlanta Manufacturing company as its jobbers, and a complete stock of merchandise will be carried in stock in Atlanta for the benefit of other awning manufacturers in the south. The Atlanta Manufacturing company, Inc., is one of the largest manufacturers of its kind in the south.

W. C. CRAVER TO SPEAK AT BUTLER Y. M. C. A.

"The Negro and Inter-Racial Good Will" will be the subject of W. C. Craver, student Y. M. C. A. secretary, who will be the principal speaker at the Butler Street branch Y. M. C. A. meeting at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Special music will be furnished by the Washington High School Girls' Glee club and Herman L. McClain, lyric tenor.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

Dr. Griffin will at once enter into the active practice of his profession and his location will be 93½ Whitehall St., S. W., corner Whitehall and Hunter streets, where he will be glad to meet the public, former patients and friends. Phone WAlnut 8570 for appointment.

Jaycees To Open Ticket Campaign For 'Home Show'

The most extensive forestry exhibit ever shown in Georgia will be a central feature of the Southern Building and Household exposition, to be held at the Atlanta auditorium March 19 to 24, it is announced by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, which is presenting the big "home show."

The exhibit is being prepared under the direction of M. B. Lufburrow, state forester. It will include specimens of every tree that grows in Georgia, and displays of the work being done by the state forestry department to protect the trees and guarantee to the public a supply of timber for the future. The lumber dealers who will make exhibits at the show are especially interested in forestry work, and make large contributions to its support.

Considerable rivalry between manufacturers and dealers in competitive building materials is developing in their plans for elaborate displays at the big exposition. The comparative merits of various types of brick and tile, lumber and manufactured materials will be displayed and the prospective home builder will have opportunity to discuss with experts the best materials for his house.

Ticket Sale Drive.

Teams of the Junior Chamber of Commerce will open this week an intensive campaign for the sale of tickets for the "home show." They have set for their goal a sale of 50,000 tickets, at 25 cents each.

Virtually all of the exhibit space in the main auditorium building has been taken by representative Atlanta firms, many of them leasing several booths.

Among the more important exhibits to be made are those of V. K. Kriegshaber & Sons, Georgia Power company, the Hoover company, Campbell Coal company, Atlanta Tent and Awning company, King Hardware company, L. W. Rogers Grocery company, Pickert Plumbing company, Atlanta Wier Furnace company, J. M. High company, Frigidaire corporation, Graham-Paige Motor company, Alexander-Seewald company, Moncrief Furnace company, Murphy Door Bed company, Dixie Electric company, Feldwood Products company, West Lumber company, Beck & Gregg Hardware company, Womack Lime and Cement company, City Ice Delivery company and Atlanta Paint company.

AUTO ASSOCIATION PLANS DEVELOP IN NORTH GEORGIA

The state-wide organization of motorcar owners, under the leadership of the Georgia State Automobile association, took on added impetus during the past week when Kiwanis clubs at Baxley, Jackson, Covington and Winder each appointed committees to perfect plans for county organization in their counties.

Important progress was also reported from North Georgia. The Clayton Chamber of Commerce took the initiative in securing members for the association in Rabun county, with a large number of applicants signed up.

During the present week officials of the state body will meet with citizens in Lyon, Jessup, Blakely, Dawson, Richland, Shellman, Coleman, Toccoa, Cornelia and Clarksville regarding immediate steps in those localities for the setting up of county branches with full A. A. A. service. A charter was issued during the week to the branch at Cuthbert and it is expected that a similar charter will be granted to Lumpkin.

New Christian Science Church Opens Today With Two Services

Marking the steady growth of Christian Science in Atlanta, first Christian Science services in the new church building of the Second Church of Christ, Scientist, at Juniper and Fourth streets, will be held this morning.

The services in the new building will be held at 11 o'clock this morning and 8 o'clock tonight. Merrill Hutchinson, first reader, and Mrs. Doris M. Sockwell, second reader, will conduct the services. School for children up to the age of 20 years will be in session at 9:30 o'clock tonight.

The subject of the lesson sermon at these services will be "Man," and will consist of references from the King James Bible, with correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation. If you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 481 A Mar coffus Ave., Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LX., No. 263. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 4, 1928.

New Model Home Of Constitution Will Open Today

Public Invited To Visit Ideal Structure in Haynes Manor From 2 to 10 O'Clock.

BUSINESS FIRMS AID IN MOVEMENT

Home Will Remain Open for Public Inspection for Period of Four Weeks, Beginning Today.

The second of The Atlanta Constitution's model homes—designed, built and completely outfitted in order to provide a graphic illustration of the latest and most highly approved methods of homemaking—will open for the first time this afternoon at 2 o'clock at Peachtree, Battle avenue and Alton road in Haynes Manor.

The general public is cordially invited by The Constitution to visit the master dwelling any time between the opening hour and 10 o'clock tonight, at which time it will close for the day. The home will remain open for public inspection for the ensuing four weeks, being open on week days from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until 6 o'clock at night, and on Sundays between the hours of 2 and 10.

This model home is the second in a series of master dwellings to be presented to the public of Atlanta and this section of the country under auspices of the Home Owners' Institute, nationally-known organization which promotes interest in the building and furnishing of tasteful and enduring homes constructed of nationally-advertised and officially-approved materials.

The first model home was presented by The Constitution last fall in Avondale Estates, with a number of leading Atlanta firms interested in home-building and home-beautifying, cooperating. This ideal dwelling attracted approximately 55,000 visitors during the four weeks it was open.

The Avondale Estates home was so located as to be easily accessible to residents in all sections of Atlanta, and the Haynes Manor model dwelling is equally accessible. Its advantageous location is expected to attract to it an equally large number of Atlantans and Georgians who are interested in home-building and home-decorating and furnishing and who are desirous of seeing in use the most advanced devices for beautification, permanence and labor-conservation.

The home is located five blocks from the Buckhead and Oglethorpe car line on Peachtree Battle avenue. Motorists who desire to drive to the home will find the roads asphalted and concreted every foot of the way and in splendid condition.

Firms Cooperating.

Firms which are participating with The Constitution in the presentation of this magnificent home are:

The M. Rich & Bros. Co.; The B. Mifflin Hood Brick company, The Campbell Coal company, the Willingham-Tift Lumber Company; the Lowry company, the Capital Electric Lighting and Fixture Studios, the Scagliola & Stucco Co., the Georgia Power company, the Moncrief Furnace company, the Alexander-Seewald Co., National Products, incorporated, the Atlanta Realty & Construction Co., Sirron Nurseries, and the Baeck Wall Paper company.

Rich Is Decorator.

All the cooperating business houses listed above have taken prominent part in the construction of the home with the exception of the Rich company, which has had full and complete charge of furnishing and decorating the model dwelling, supplying it with furniture, rugs, draperies and bric-a-brac in keeping with the architectural style of the structure.

At the opening of the model home this afternoon, a corps of official hostesses will be on hand to receive visitors and point out all features of the construction and outfitting of the dwelling. The same hostesses will be on hand throughout the four weeks during which the home will remain open.

Tile Work by Hood.

Closely adhering to and enhancing the beauty of the colonial architecture of the model home is the tile work—material for which was supplied by the B. Mifflin Hood Brick company.

The roof is one of the salient features of the home, being of Yorkshire shingle tile, which is the first

HOOVER IS LEADING NOMINATION RACE; LOWDEN IS NEXT

Commerce Secretary Only Republican Aspirant With Delegates From Practically All States.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

The republican picture begins with Hoover. He is the only one of the candidates who will have some delegates from practically every state, the only one who has support from wide varieties of groups and kinds of voters. In addition he has the support of roughly half of what is called the "old guard" leadership of the party and more than half the younger leadership. By these and other characteristics Hoover is in a class apart. (Lowden is another candidate who will have support from a considerable area, but not nation-wide. Dawes could have nation-wide support, but declines to be an avowed candidate.)

Next to Hoover stands Lowden, the only other avowed candidate who is running in anything other than a strictly local sense. Lowden will have all or substantially all the delegates from several states in the farming area and some delegates from practically every state where farming is the chief economic interest. Lowden is the only candidate who is running as the leader of a definite cause; namely, the demand that farming be relieved of its present subordination in the country's economic structure. Lowden, in addition to his delegates from the farming states, will have some support from the south, based upon an affection for him which is a growth from his long association shoulder to shoulder with conventions for practically thirty years.

Three Favorite Sons.

Other than Hoover and Lowden the other avowed candidates are in a clearly marked group. They consist of three senators—Curtis, of Kansas; Willis, of Ohio, and Watson, of Indiana. Their common characteristic is that their candidacies are wholly local, on the "favorite son" basis, and wholly dependent for such hopes of success as they may have in a convention that shall be inconclusive as regards the major candidates and in which the outcome will be determined chiefly by negotiation after and if the major candidates fail to achieve a majority. Of the three Curtis is the nearest to being a serious contender. As the official republican leader of the senate he has a standing above Willis and Watson. He has a similar superiority to the other two in the estimation of Republican leaders generally. If the national convention should come to

YOUNG PLAYMATES SERIOUSLY INJURED BY MOLTEN LEAD

Luther Dill, 8, of 260 Milton avenue, and James W. Wimbish, 14, of 252 Milton avenue, were treated early Saturday at Grady hospital for eye injuries inflicted by the spattering of hot lead which they were trying to melt while playing near their home. According to attaches of the hospital the injuries are believed to be of a serious nature.

GEORGIA SOLONS ASK U. S. TO PAVE ROADS IN PARKS

Washington, March 3.—(AP)—Paving of the Lafayette extension and Ringgold government roads in Georgia entering the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military park was sought in two bills today by Representative Tarver, democrat, Georgia. The Lafayette road would cost $193,500 and the Ringgold highway $117,000, the measures provide.

Dorothy Goodson Wins in Baby Contest; Mrs. Bessie O'Quin Crowned Queen of Ball

Mrs. Bessie O'Quin, representing the Georgia railroad and "The West Point Route" in the queen election and popularity contest conducted by the Atlanta Lions club in connection with the clinic for better babies. Mrs. O'Quin was crowned at the coronation ball at the city auditorium Saturday night by Governor L. G. Hardman, and to her goes the first prize, a sedan. The left inset is Mary Rose Ritayik, 13-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Ritayik, 310 North avenue, who won the first prize in the baby popularity contest, and the right is Dorothy Goodson, 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Goodson, 894 Oglethorpe street, who was acclaimed by the 75 doctors participating in the clinic as Atlanta's most perfect baby.

Dorothy E. Goodson, 3, is Atlanta's most perfect baby. Mary Rose Ritayik, 13 months, is Atlanta's most popular baby and Mrs. Bessie O'Quin is the most popular of the 20 young women representing as many business houses in aiding the Atlanta Lions club's clinic for better babies.

These were the announcements made by Governor L. G. Hardman at the city auditorium Saturday night when the clinic came to a close. Between 5,000 and 6,000 persons filled the big hall to overflow to see Mrs. O'Quin crowned queen by the governor and to witness presentation of prize cups to winners in the baby contest.

Just before announcing the baby winners Governor Hardman made a short speech in which he praised the Lions club for the good work done by the clinic, and expressed the hope that it could be made an annual affair.

A tense moment came as the prize winners in the queen contest were called. The five winners were called on the stage, and beginning with the fifth, Governor Hardman called their names in the order of the prizes won until only two were left.

These were Miss Lillian Everitt, representing the City of Atlanta, and Mrs. O'Quin, who represented the Georgia railroad and "The West Point Route." There was a slight delay but finally the name of Miss Everitt was called as second prize winner, leaving Mrs. O'Quin first.

Mrs. O'Quin received 365,875 votes for first place. Miss Everitt was next with 286,125 votes. Miss Mildred Womack, representing the Rogers stores was third with 252,325 votes. Miss Frances Grant, of the Western Electric company, was fourth with 120,000 votes, and Miss Martha McCrorey placed fifth with 105,575 votes.

GEORGIA BUDGET CHANGES PLANNED

Governor Hardman Will Recommend Revision of Fiscal System of State in Next Message.

Governor L. G. Hardman is now studying the budget plans used by other states as well as the fiscal system of some of the more progressive states of the country, with a view toward recommending changes in Georgia which will be incorporated in the governor's next message to the legislature, it was learned at the capitol Saturday.

Recently the governor received a copy of the budget commission's report used in North Carolina and also received some records on the system used in the state of New York.

"It takes time to study out these methods and to work out fiscal plans which will bring about more economy and efficiency in the state government," the governor said. "It is my hope to prepare recommendations covering the entire system of state government by the time the legislature meets again. In my platform when I ran for election I emphasized the need of economy in the state government and it is my hope to make some recommendations of real, tangible benefit before I leave office."

Several recommendations made by the governor to the last legislature were adopted, one of the most noteworthy being the recommendation that all state funds be paid into the state treasury and paid out by that office only on warrants properly signed by the governor and state comptroller. This recommendation was incorporated in the Neill bill, which will go into full effect next July.

Before he assumed his duties as governor last July Governor Hardman visited the capitals of several southern states to study the fiscal systems used in those states. Much of the material he obtained on those trips will be used in his next recommendations.

3 REASONS GIVEN FOR LINDY'S SECRET FLIGHT TO CAPITAL

Washington, March 3.—(AP)—Charles A. Lindbergh landed here from New York in a cabin monoplane with four friends late today, remained at the controls until the ship rested safely in a hangar and an army automobile was backed alongside and then dodged quickly from one to the other to be hurried away to a secret destination.

The elaborate and mysterious precautions, one companion declared, were motivated by the trans-Atlantic aviator's desire "to become a private citizen." Asked the purpose of the capital visit, while Lindbergh exchanged brief greetings with Lieutenant Roy S. O'Neal, of Bolling field, each companion gave a varying version.

"He's out for a little fun," said one.

"He's here on business," said another.

"It's a personal matter," said a third.

DETROIT CONVICTS MAN OF THEFTS NEVER COMMITTED

Detroit, Mich., March 3.—(AP)—Charles Holowski, 26, was convicted in federal court here today of the theft of money order blanks from the St. Petersburg, Fla., postoffice December 17, 1927, and was sentenced to six years in the federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

NO SUCH CRIME, SAYS ST. PETERSBURG.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 3.—(AP)—Postal authorities were mystified today upon receipt of a dispatch concerning the conviction of Charles Holowski in federal court at Detroit for the theft of money order blanks from the St. Petersburg postoffice. No such theft has been committed in the history of the office, the postmaster said.

MICHIGAN AVIATOR HOPS OFF APRIL 1 ON LONG FLIGHT

St. Joseph, Mich., March 3.—(United News)—Captain Joseph Donellan announced today he would leave Chicago April 1 on a second attempt to fly to South America and back.

He abandoned a recent attempt after reaching Havana, Cuba.

CAPTAIN DIETRICK DIES OF WOUNDS

Well Known Scout Succumbs at Gainesville; Wounded Assailant Under Arrest.

Gainesville, Ga., March 1.—(Special.)—Captain Will A. Dietrick, superintendent of Vogel Forest Park at Neel's Gap, who was shot by Charles F. Jones Wednesday night, died Saturday night at Downey hospital here.

Captain Dietrick, who was about 50 years of age, after being severely wounded through the abdomen by Jones, twenty years his junior, wrested the gun from his assailant and shot the latter through the chest.

Jones, a Union county man, and said to be a brother of the sheriff of that county, is in Downey hospital severely but not critically wounded. He was technically under arrest on a warrant charging "felony" prior to Captain Dietrick's death. At the sheriff's office here it was said this charge probably would be changed to murder.

The cause of the shooting has not been determined. According to reports, Dietrick met Jones at the small drink stand operated by the former at Neel's Gap Wednesday night. It was said that Jones, who had been drinking, engaged in a heated exchange of words with the forester and drew his gun and fired point-blank at the elder man.

Captain Dietrick, it is said, staggered from the first shock of the bullet, but rallied momentarily and grappled with the younger man, tearing the weapon from his grasp and wounding Jones, both men collapsing. Jones was taken to the local hospital by his brother, it was said, and several hours later Captain Dietrick was brought here by automobile.

Funeral services will be held for Captain Dietrick Monday morning at 11 o'clock from the chapel of the Newton Undertaking Parlors here.

FATHER CONFESSES DROWNING 2 BOYS IN INDIANA CANAL

Bound Them With Wire and Made Them Walk Plank With Promises of Seeing Mother.

Indiana Harbor, Ind., March 3.—(AP)—A father confessed today that he had caused the death of his two sons by tricking them into casting themselves into the Indiana Harbor ship canal on a promise that by so doing they would see their grandmother, who is dead.

George Chisholm, alias George Smith, 36, formerly of Montreal, an East Chicago, Ind., foundry worker, made the statement in identifying the bodies of two boys, 9 and 7 years old, found floating in the canal, as his sons.

Chisholm, known here as Smith, said he decided to kill his three sons, George, Jr., 9, and Edgar and Robert, 7, twins, and himself because he did not believe he could provide a home for them and thought all would be better off dead. He said he brought them from Montreal where they had been with relatives after his wife and he had quarreled and she had returned to England, and on February 6 took George and Edgar to the ship canal after dark, bound them together with wire and fashioned a plank over the canal along which he induced the two to walk, promising them that if they jumped in they would see their grandmother, whom they had begged to visit.

Intended To Kill Self.

George toppled in pulling Edgar after him, Chisholm said, and the father watched them drown, intending also to kill his other son and himself, but lost his nerve. Chisholm, who said that was his real name, although he had lived here three years as George Smith, told so many versions of his story that the police tonight were not certain that parts were true.

He took them late at night to the canal and bound them together with wire picked up at a lumber yard, he said. Then he placed a plank over the canal, the confession said, and told the boys to stand on it and look in the water if they wanted to see their grandmother.

The grandmother was dead but the boys did not know that.

They walked carefully onto the plank and stood a moment looking into the water. George, the elder, lost his balance and fell in, dragging Edgar after him.

"I intended to kill myself," Smith told police, "but I didn't have the nerve."

Smith and his wife separated several months ago. She went to England. Smith put the boys in an orphanage and came to East Chicago.

A month ago he brought George, Jr., Robert and the latter's twin brother Edgar, to East Chicago, where the family boarded with a Mrs. Lorenz.

Until today the discovery of the bodies of the two boys mystified po-

ATLANTAN IS SHOT ON DIXIE HIGHWAY

W. L. Minor Held in Bartow Jail for Drawing Gun in Alleged Defense of Father.

Cartersville, Ga., March 3.—(Special.)—J. K. Minor, 54, of Atlanta, had his right arm shattered by a pistol bullet, and his son, W. L. Minor, 25, is in Bartow county jail here in default of $300 bond as a result of an altercation between the Minors and Sodie Collum, storekeeper, on the Dixie highway Saturday night near the Cobb county line.

Collum, it is said, admitted to Sheriff George Gaddis, of Bartow county, that he fired the shot that wounded the elder Minor. Young Minor was taken in custody after he had drawn a pistol on Collum, according to authorities.

The trouble started when the Minors, who were driving south toward Atlanta in company with W. J. White, of 513 Thompson street, East Point, and W. H. Rhodes, of Sewance, Ga., and Collum scraped cars en route.

According to Collum, he was returning to his store after a trip to Cartersville when the Minor machine bumped into his car. He remonstrated verbally, he told officers, and a little later the occurrence was repeated.

Driving to Tapp's Crossing, near which his store is located, Collum told authorities, he went into his store and obtained a pistol and returned to the highway, which he blocked when the Minor party came along. During the course of his remarks the elder Minor was wounded.

While admitting firing the shot, the storekeeper declared that he did so only after the younger Minor displayed a weapon. Young Minor, on the other hand, told officers that he drew his gun only after his father had been wounded.

Tom and Will Bury Hatchet In Love Notes

Humorist and Humorous Senator Friends Again After Flareup.

BY KENNETH CRAWFORD,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Washington, March 3.—Governor Al Smith and the Roman Catholic church went practically undenounced today while Senator Tom Heflin of Alabama, their severest critic, devoted himself to peace negotiations with Will Rogers, humorist.

Rogers and Heflin severed diplomatic relations after Rogers had criticized the senator for voting against the Walsh power resolution and for his stand on Muscle Shoals; and Heflin had replied with a denunciation of Rogers in particular and humorists in general.

Meanwhile, an exchange of notes with Rogers was carried on. The humorist himself made the first move. He sent a telegram saying in part:

"Say, Tom, you got me all wrong. Nobody ever went through your state saying the nice things about you I have. I like you personally and you are the greatest story teller in the country and we should hit it off. I don't think you mean all the things you say of me. I am not that important or that bad. Send a message that I can read from the stage."

Heflin, after a few minutes careful deliberation, decided to forgive all. He sent the following message:

"Glad to have your statement. Freely forgive your Florence, Ala., saying. The slate is clean. We will be friends as before."

TALMADGE LOSES LEGAL SKIRMISH

Commissioner's Appointee Must Show Cause Why He Should Not Be Ousted by Brown Men.

Hartwell, Ga., March 3.—(Special.) Commissioner of Agriculture Eugene Talmadge Saturday lost the first round of the legal fight here involving his right to supplant appointees of former Commissioner J. J. Brown with an official of his own regime.

The decision, of state-wide interest, was rendered in Hart county superior court by Judge W. L. Hodges, of the northern judicial circuit, and has the effect of compelling B. L. Bullock, named by Talmadge as fertilizer inspector for Madison, Elbert and Hart counties, to show cause why he should not be ousted by three appointees of former Commissioner Brown.

Judge Hodges overruled the demurrer of Bullock to petitions of B. L. Russell, of Hart county; A. A. Seymour, of Elbert county, and I. H. Fowler, of Madison county, asking that Bulloch be removed from the office in which he was placed by Commissioner Talmadge prior to the expiration of the short terms of the three petitioners.

Hearing on March 16.

The court's decision does not mean, however, that the petitioners were successful in their efforts to oust Bulloch. That phase of the litigation is to be decided when the petition is to be heard on its merits. March 16 is the date set for the hearing of the petition, which will be held in the Madison county superior court.

Saturday's decision was based on quo warranto porceedings instituted by Russell, Seymour and Fowler, alleging that Commissioner Talmadge's action in dismissing them as fertilizer inspectors in the three respective counties and placing Bulloch in office in their place was illegal in that their terms had not expired.

The question involved in the controversy is the right of Commissioner Talmadge to discharge men appointed by his predecessor.

Commissioner Talmadge has notified Russell and his associates to show cause at his office why they should not be discharged as fertilizer inspectors for certain causes. It was reported here that J. T. Sisk, of Elberton, representing Russell and the other plaintiffs at interest, had instituted injunction proceedings in Fulton superior court to prevent the Talmadge hearing.

Commissioner of Agriculture Eugene Talmadge stated Saturday night that he had no knowledge of any injunction proceedings having been filed in superior court and added that the hearing regarding Russell, Seymour and Fowler would be held Wednesday in his office at the state capitol.

TWO BADLY HURT WHEN AUTO TAKES DIVE INTO CREEK

Tumbling into a creek after striking a hole in the road and overturning, the automobile driven by A. C. Mills, 24, of 9 Holmes street, Saturday sent him to Grady hospital suffering from a fractured pelvis, severe lacerations and bruises, while Mills' companion, O. C. Burns, 21, of 1211 Avon avenue, sustained severe bruises.

The accident occurred on the Bolton road, near Rankhead avenue. Both men were rushed to Grady hospital in an ambulance.

FAITH NOT SHAKEN BY TRAGIC DEATH OF PILOT BROOKS

Automobile Wizard Says Production Will Start When Experiments Are Completed.

TOOTH PICK VALVE CAUSED DISASTER

Also Building Huge Motor for Trans-Atlantic Air Service, Ford Tells Newspapermen.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 3.—(AP)—Henry Ford, his faith unshaken by the tragic fate of Henry Brooks, his chief pilot, will continue experiments with his flivver planes and when perfected and put into volume production, will sell them for about the same price as his automobiles.

Ford said this tonight in making his first public comment on the crash of Brooks' plane in which the young aviator lost his life at Melbourne Beach, Fla., a week ago. He said he could not estimate the time required before starting manufacture of the planes in the quantity necessary to market them at automobile prices.

Ending a vacation of two weeks at his winter home here today, Mr. Ford told newspapermen just before his departure that his company would continue its experiments with small planes and when perfected and put into volume production they would sell for about the same price as the automobile which he makes.

Tests similar to the Detroit-Florida non-stop flight which ended fatally for Brooks will be undertaken as soon as another plane of similar design is ready, Mr. Ford said. He added that no successor to his late chief pilot had been named, but that one of the airmen of his organization would be promoted to carry on the work.

Building Huge Plane.

In his first public comment on the Brooks accident, Mr. Ford spoke affectionately of his protege, praising his courage and ability and expressing great regret at the tragic mishap.

Reports from Ford company experts, the automobile magnate said, clearly indicated that the "tooth pick" plug placed in the vent of the gasoline tank was responsible for the crash.

In addition to the small plane, Mr. Ford said his company was working on a Diesel engine to motor a huge passenger plane capable of trans-Atlantic service. Asked if he intended to fly to Europe in one of them, he said he expected to some day, but did not "think it will be this year." He added that an air trip to Brazil, which he has in mind, also is a futurity of undetermined date.

"If I go it will be by airplane," the manufacturer said. "I would never spend 20 days making the trip by boat."

Turning from airplanes to automobiles, Mr. Ford said his company is turning out nearly 1,000 a day and expected to reach a maximum of 5,000 a day by the middle of the summer. Subsequent expansion, he said, would depend upon the demand which he believes will continue to grow.

Watches Edison Experiments.

During his stay here the manufacturer has been in close touch with Mr. Edison's experiments in rubber. He declined to comment in detail upon his opinion of the outcome of his friend's work, other than to say that "if anything can be done about it, Edison will do it."

The automobile manufacturer acquired a heavy coat of tan during his two weeks out of doors here and had Mr. Edison's word for it that he looked "100 per cent better than when he arrived."

SON OF ATLANTAN COMMITS SUICIDE IN JACKSONVILLE

Jacksonville, Fla., March 3.—(AP)—Robert Mason Bibb, city editor of the Stuart Daily News, shot and killed himself in a local hotel last night, it was reported to police today. Financial worries were believed to have caused his act.

Bibb's father, J. W. Bibb, lives in Atlanta, Ga. The body will be sent to Westminster, S. C., former home, for burial.

Dollar Worth $1,250 Paid for Ticket At Waycross Movie

Waycross, Ga., March 3.—(AP)—Mrs. Frank G. Adams, wife of the proprietor of a local movie theater, and ticket seller in the same place, accepted a silver dollar yesterday from an unidentified party as payment for a ticket. She made change, tossed the dollar in the till and thought nothing of it.

Last night when she checked up she noticed the dollar was made in 1804. It was such an unusual looking coin that she wired a Fort Worth Texas coin dealer for its value. Today she received a wire offer of $1,250 for the dollar. Only four of the 1804 dollars were coined, it was understood. One other was recovered several years ago in Philadelphia.

GRAND JURY TO SIT IN BENNEFIELD CASE

Lawrenceville, Ga., March 3.—The March term of the Gwinnett superior court of the Piedmont circuit will convene here Monday for a two weeks' session. Judge W. W. Stark will preside, and Solicitor General Pemberton Cooley will represent the state.

The most important case to be brought before the grand jury is the murder of James Bennefield, 55-year-old farmer, and his nine-year-old son, John, who were found dead at their home on Sunday afternoon, December 18, by neighbors. Bennefield's head was crushed as if by some instrument of iron, his throat was slashed and one of his arms broken. The young boy had been hit on the side of the face and his throat had been cut from ear to ear with a sharp instrument.

Sam Gower, Joe Price and LeGrand Sikes were arrested and placed in jail about a month later by the officers. Sikes and Joe Price are said to have confessed their part in the crime, laying the killing of Bennefield to Sam Gower. Sikes stated that about $600 was taken from the dead man and divided among them, but was turned over to Gower's wife until excitement over discovery of the crime quieted down. Sikes is a son-in-law of Gower.

The trials of these parties, if indicted by the grand jury, probably will begin the second week of court. Gower and Price are in the Fulton county tower at present, where they were taken immediately after the commitment trial the first part of February.

FATHER CONFESSES DROWNING SONS

lice. One of the bodies was found more than two weeks ago, the other yesterday.

Apparently the wire which Smith said connected them had broken when they fell. Strands of wire were found around each body, however.

Neighbors of Smith became curious when they missed two of the boys and some connected the disappearance with the drownings. They told police and Joe Dura, who knew the Smiths, was asked to inspect the clothing of the dead boys. He said it resembled that of the Smith boys. Then Robert, the twin brother of Edgar, was shown the clothes. He said they belonged to his brothers.

Smith and Mrs. Lorenz were arrested and after two hours of questioning, Smith confessed.

Smith formerly lived in Montreal. His real name, he said, is George Chisholm, but he has used the name of Smith since he came to this country. The wife now living in England is his second and was not the mother of the children, he said.

Text of Confession.
(By United News.)

The full text of the confession made public by police late today follows:

"When they continually asked to see their grandmother I told them that if we saved some money they might go back but I also told them the only way they could see her was to wrap themselves in wire and throw themselves into the water. February 6 I left work at the Calumet foundry, where I am employed, about 4 p. m. I ate supper at home with the boys. George and Edgar talked of seeing their grandmother.

"There was some wire in the yard which I had brought home from the foundry. After dinner George took this wire and wrapped it around his belt and around Edgar.

"When they had finished I took the boys and led them to the bridge over the canal. It was dark. When I told them again they could see their grandmother by jumping into the water, they expected me to jump with them.

"There was a plunk sticking out from the bridge. They walked out on it and George tumbled in. The weight of his body pulled Edgar with him. I did not hear any cries from them. I walked away and met a friend who was drunk, and bought him a drink.

"On Washington's birthday George's body was washed up. That was about half past six at night. I went to the morgue and stayed by it until after midnight. Then I went home and the following night I haunted the canal. The night after that I did not go to the canal, but did every night after that, including last night. I wanted to jump in and die too but I hadn't the nerve."

RAILROAD BUILDER BURIED SATURDAY

Wilmington, N. C., March 3.—(AP)—John Reese Kenly, 81, veteran railroad builder and president of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad, was placed to rest here today in Oakdale cemetery.

The funeral services were conducted at the St. James Episcopal church this afternoon by Dr. William H. Milton, rector, and Dr. A. D. P. Gilmour, pastor of Mr. Kenly's church, the First Presbyterian.

A BABY FOR YOU

Are you denied the blessing of motherhood—the glory of a baby all your own? Do you and your husband yearn for a baby's arms and a baby's smile? Nature does not intend that any woman should be childless. When she is, it is usually due to some weakness or disorder of the organs of reproduction. When these organs are properly toned up, invigorated and helped to function properly, the blessings of motherhood may be realized.

Many women are now praising a remarkable new treatment called Gen-Tone and expressing their gratitude for what it has done for them. Intended as an aid in revitalizing the organs of reproduction, many report also that it helped to relieve many of the ailments common to women, such as bearing-down and periodical pains, etc., and aids them to lead happier and more companionable lives.

To test this new treatment, simply send name to Hamilton Products Co., 836 American Bank Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and when your treatment arrives pay postman $2.00 plus few cents postage. This reliable company agrees to refund the $2.00 if you are not satisfied. You should not hesitate in accepting their generous offer.—(adv.)

PAYING DIVORCE BUSINESS JOLTED BY COLBY DECISION

Paris, March 3.—(AP)—The American divorce industry in France, which has been so hard hit by the refusal of the Versailles court to grant a divorce to Bainbridge Colby, has been in the hands of a clique of foreign lawyers who had French attorneys appear for them in court.

Reno in its palmiest days never had such a thriving patronage from Americans who wanted to have their marital ties dissolved. The fees many wealthy American women paid their attorneys were fabulous.

Divorce lawyers and their relative merits were discussed with the same freedom that women chat about dressmakers and beauty specialists. Cannes, Nice, Biarritz, Monte Carlo and Deauville were favorite resorts for women who had established an alleged domicile in Paris and traveled about while their attorneys were getting their cases ground painlessly and secretly through the divorce mill which has been so rudely interrupted.

Hereafter an affidavit from a janitor or hotel clerk that a divorce applicant has established residence in France will be no proof of residence. Getting a French divorce no longer will be a summer vacation task in which dissatisfied people may engage whenever the spirit moves them.

Fifth—Baby Tommy Patricia Parham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Parham, route 9, Box 60, age 16 months, 4,075 votes; receives $10 bank account.

Mrs. O'Quin won a Willys-Knight sedan. Miss Everitt won a diamond ring. Miss Womack won a diamond ring, and Miss Frances Grant and Miss Martha McCrory won wrist watches.

Following the close of the program, J. J. Russell, who has been director of the clinic, and Joe B. Wolfe, president of the Atlanta Lions club, both announced the movement a complete success from every standpoint.

CAPTAIN DIETRICT DIES OF WOUNDS

Interment will be in the local cemetery.

No direct relatives other than his widow survive.

DIETRICK POPULAR AMONG LOCAL SCOUTS.

Captain Will A. Dietrick, who died Saturday night in a Gainesville hospital as a result of wounds received in an altercation with Charles F. Jones at Neel's Gap Wednesday night, was well known in Atlanta, particularly among Boy Scout ranks.

Last summer, during the season at the Bert Adams Scout reservation, Captain Dietrick acted as an instructor in scout craft, teaching the boys various forms of work in leather.

Captain Dietrick was a native of Georgia and resided usually at Hapeville. He was for several years, however, well known in all parts of the country as a chautauqua lecturer. His lectures were in the line of popularizing science and were illustrated with numbers of lantern slides.

About 50 years of age, Captain Dietrick was long a world traveler, and roamed over a large proportion of the earth's surface. Wherever he was the earth's surface. Wherever he went he was interested in work with boys and acted as a volunteer scout master in such organizations in many different countries and sections.

He was never officially connected with the Atlanta scout council except for his work at the camp last summer and while he was at one time scout master for a troop near his home in Hapeville.

Winners in Constitution's "Cow" Figure Contest Are Announced by Management

L. H. Cunningham, of 145 Luckie street, Atlanta, won first place, and C. W. Walton, of Fort Valley, Ga., second, in The Constitution's "Cow" figure contest, the management announced Saturday.

This contest closed, as far as submitting solutions was concerned, on February 8. Five days were given thereafter for those who had submitted solutions but failed to fully qualify to do so. Monday, February 13, was the last day on which qualifying remittances could be sent to The Constitution.

Reproduction Impossible.

In the rules and regulations of the contest it was stated that the winning solution would be reproduced in The Constitution along with announcement of the winners.

When the solution was referred to the photo and engraving department, it was found that on account of the figures being made with a pencil, it was impossible to reproduce the figures. On account of the smallness of the "9's" and the poor grade of paper on which they were written, it was impossible to retrace the "9's" with pen and ink.

The best photographic authorities assured The Constitution that it is impossible to reproduce the solution for the above stated reason.

A few days thereafter three Georgia Tech students, who, by the nature of their studies in the drawing department, had been trained and were known to have especially good eyes, examined the solutions submitted and acted as judges in the contest.

The judging of the solutions or answers submitted was an unusual task, and the greatest care was taken to perform this as perfectly as was humanly possible. The judges and their assistants checked and rechecked the solutions submitted by the contestants, and at last were able to announce the 25 winners.

It was found that Mr. Cunningham had the greatest numer of "9s" in the cow figure and met all the requirements of the contest. Having fully qualified his solution with two annual subscriptions and remittances of $9.50 each, or a total of $19, he is awarded the maximum amount of first prize, which is $2,000.

Mr. Walton had the second largest number of "9s" in the "cow" figure, and the "9s" written therein so as to meet all conditions of the contest, and is second prize winner. He, too, availed himself of the full opportunity with qualifying remittance, and will receive $1,000.

Winners Listed Below.

The winners and the amounts of the prizes they have won are listed below. It will be noticed that many of them won the maximum prizes. Some, however, failed to send the maximum qualification remittance, and are, therefore, awarded prizes according to the qualifying remittance sent, as scheduled in the prize list.

"The winners are being officially notified of their success, and prizes will be awarded within a few days. There were many thousands who participated in this contest, and since there were only 25 prizes to be awarded, naturally all could not win a prize. We know that all those who did enter will realize that all could not be winners," the contest management said.

"Neither The Atlanta Constitution nor the judges had any interest in any individual or set of individuals winning a prize. It was a contest among contestants, and the 25 who sent the 25 best solutions in accordance with the rules and regulations of the contest are the winners of the 25 prizes."

Judges' Blanks.

The three judges were supplied with blanks which read as follows:

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS FOR JUDGING THE COW CONTEST SOLUTIONS.

Cow solution No.——

1. Are the "9's" regular? If the heads of the "9's" or any "9" in the "cow" figure is solid with a tail attached, it is not regular.
Answer "yes" or "no"——
2. Do any of the "9's" touch each other?
Answer "yes" or "no"——
3. Do any of the "9's" touch any part of the border forming the cow?
Answer "yes" or "no"——
4. Can all of the "9's," on close inspection with the naked or natural eye in good light, be distinguished from each other?
Answer "yes" or "no"——
5. Is the correct number of "9's" as written in the "cow" figure stated?
Answer "yes" or "no"——

Method of Judging.

Each judge first examined the solutions, separately and independent of the other two judges, and signed his name to the question blank. After they had each completed their work, the question blanks were assembled by a clerk in the office and attached to the solution. They were then gone over carefully the second time, all three inspecting each solution and examining their answers as to whether or not a mistake had been made, after which the 25 best solutions were selected.

These best solutions were thoroughly inspected to see whether or not a mistake had been made in any of them. Those discarded were again inspected to ascertain whether or not any had been erroneously discarded.

If the figures "9" written in the "cow" figure were irregular, meaning a mere dot with a tail to it, naturally the answer would be "No," and would disqualify that solution. If any of the 9's" touched each other, it would disqualify the solution. If any of the "9's" touched the border of the "cow" it disqualified that solution.

If, on close inspection the "9's" could not be distinguished in good light by the natural eye, it disqualified the solution. If the number of the "9's" written in the "cow" by the contestant was misstated, it disqualified the solution.

For any solution to be passed upon favorably, it had to stand the tests put to it as above related. There were many solutions submitted, however, that would meet every test, but the number of "9's" written in the "cow" figure were below the number of those who won prizes.

The list of prize winners follows:

R. B. ALEXANDER,
L. M. YARETZY.

Honorable Mention.

"There were many good solutions submitted, but not good enough to win prizes," the management said. "The names of the following contestants submitted 'cow' figure solutions that show considerable time was spent, and that more than ordinary ability was demonstrated. Hard work and a well prepared solution, however, as there were but 25 prizes to be awarded, could not win unless the solution rated among the 25 best, and while many of the contestants who submitted solutions did not win prizes, we think the following who submitted the next best solutions are entitled to honorable mention.

"We take this opportunity to compliment the following on the fine work they did on their solutions:

RULES OF THE CONTEST FOLLOW.

1. All bona fide residents of Georgia and adjoining states may take part in this contest, except employees of The Atlanta Constitution and members of their families.

2. Contestants may submit as many different solutions as they desire, provided payment of one of the three amounts designated in the prize list shall accompany each solution, but no contestant will be permitted to win more than one award. Once registered, a solution cannot be changed.

3. The first prize will be awarded to the person having the greatest sum total, which is to be determined by the sum of the figures "9" written in the space designated inside of the border forming the picture representing the cow; to the second greatest total second prize, third greatest total third prize, etc.

4. Any lead pencil may be used. All writing or drawing pens of artists or engineers or their like are barred, as ink cannot be used on this grade of paper without blurring. The figures "9" need not be perfect in shape, but must be complete. Write as small as you like with any ordinary lead pencil of standard make—just so each "9" is fully shaped. Figures cannot touch each other, nor are they permitted to touch any part of the borderline forming the shape of the cow.

5. Copperplate type, shorthand, reproductions or reductions are barred, also duplicates of thes original. Every "9" must actually be made by hand with any ordinary lead pencil of standard make, and must be discernible to the naked eye, meaning clear and distinct to a person of average good eyesight or equivalent. The natural eye by those who do not wear glasses, and ordinary reading glasses by those who wear glasses, only guide allowed in filling in the figure "9." A "9" with either straight or curved tail is permissible.

6. Every contestant must give the correct total of the weight of the cow in the answer submitted by him. Incorrect statement disqualifies the solution. This weight of course is the sum total of the "9s" he has written in the figure representing the cow. This is important! Your name and complete address must be plainly written on margin of sheet on which your answer is given, or blank printed for that purpose, or a blank of your own selection attached hereto.

7. In case of ties, while there is hardly a chance in 10,000 of a tie, as many awards will be reserved as there are people tied. Before any awards are awarded for less correct solutions, another puzzle will be submitted to those tied on the same order of this one, except a smaller "cow" picture, after which should ties still result each contestant will receive the full amount of the prize tied for.

8. Only one prize will be awarded to a person, household or group of persons. Any person or household, or group of persons submitting duplicates are barred.

9. The decision of The Atlanta Constitution must be accepted as final and conclusive in all matters, and participants by sending in their answers agree to accept the decision of the contest manager of The Atlanta Constitution as conclusive and final.

10. The Atlanta Constitution reserves the right to reject at any time any contestant who it believes has violated the rules. The solution of the winner of first prize will be reproduced in The Constitution, together with the published result which will be published as soon as possible after the closing date of the contest.

11. All answers will receive the same consideration, regardless as to whether or not a subscription for the daily and Sunday Constitution be sent in.

12. The contest is open to new and old subscribers alike. The regular subscription rate of $5.00 for six months subscription or $9.50 for 12 months subscription to the daily and Sunday Constitution will prevail. Daily only subscriptions or Tri-Weekly subscriptions not acceptable in this contest. Full amount of subscription must be remitted in every instance. When sent through an agent, postmaster, or otherwise, no commission can be deducted. In column 2 of prize list, six months' subscription there referred to can be either new or renewal; column 3, 12 months' subscription, $9.50, can be either new or renewal. Column 4, requiring two annual subscriptions, one can be a renewal, but one must be new. A new subscription means one who is not now taking the daily and Sunday Constitution, directly or indirectly through any source, and has not within the past 60 days.

13. Subscriptions secured by the means of this contest in Atlanta and suburbs will be delivered by carrier service. In towns outside of Atlanta where The Constitution has carrier delivery service, the paper may be delivered by carrier, upon request of the subscriber or contestant; otherwise the paper will be sent by mail.

14. A person who is now taking the daily and Sunday Constitution, and paying the carrier or agent by the week or month; or otherwise, may send or bring directly to The Constitution a six or twelve months' payment to qualify a solution. Whatever is due such carrier, dealer or agent at that time must be paid to him as the remittance sent us will date from the date it is received. The carrier or agent will be notified by The Constitution of such advance payments. If all arrearages are not paid, the solution may not be considered valid. Renewals on mail subscriptions will be extended for the length of time paid for from present paid date of expiration. All qualifying subscriptions in this contest must be paid in advance.

15. Contest closes Wednesday, February 8, 1928. All solutions delivered in person must be at The Constitution office by 9:00 p. m. of that date, but may be mailed any time before midnight. Solutions mailed at any postoffice in Georgia and adjoining states bearing postmark of no later date than midnight, February 8, 1928, will be accepted if rules governing same are complied with. The contest extends from Wednesday, January 4, 1928, to and including Wednesday, February 8, 1928. Five days will be given thereafter for those who have not fully qualified for the larger prizes to do so, after which no further qualification remittances will be accepted.

The above rules are simple, easy to understand, and is all the information that can be given on the contest except that which appears in the announcement of which this is a part.

FARM OWNERSHIP URGED FOR NEGROES

Athens, Ga., March 3.—(Special.) Next week, March 4-10 inclusive, will be observed by various associations and organizations throughout Georgia as negro farm and home-ownership week," which is being sponsored by the Association for the Advancement of Negro Country Life, it was announced Saturday by Benjamin F. Hubert, executive secretary of the Georgia State Industrial college.

In churches, schools, colleges and at civic association meetings throughout the state efforts will be made to stimulate interest in the projected movement looking toward farm and home ownership by negro citizens.

A report issued by Hubert shows that in 1900 there were 82,822 negro farmers in Georgia, with only 11,375 of that total recorded as owners of land. In 1910 the total number of colored farmers had increased to 122,559 with only 15,608 owners; while in 1920 there were 130,170 negro agriculturists, 16,040 of whom owned the land they tilled.

The latest census, however, taken in 1925, shows a colossal decrease in the total number of negro farmers, only 85,077 being recorded, of which number 11,747 owned property they lived on. The figures showed that Georgia ranked fourth of all states in the number of negro farmers, being topped only by Mississippi, South Carolina and Alabama.

Farmer's Wife Dies as Flames Ignite Clothes

Cartersville, Ga., March 3.—(Special.)—Mrs. Harold Isbell, 21, wife of a well-known young farmer of the Euharlee district, died Saturday afternoon as the result of burns received when her clothing caught fire before an open grate.

Mrs. Isbell was alone at the time of the tragedy. When her clothing became ignited she rushed from the house into the yard, where her screams attracted neighbors a quarter of a mile away. By the time they had reached her she was unconscious, fatally burned.

Physicians summoned from Kingston were unable to render any assistance, pronouncing her burns fatal. She died shortly after their arrival. Funeral services will be held Sunday morning at 11 o'clock from the Euharlee Baptist church, of which she was a member.

Old Guard Will Have Charge Of R. E. Lee Statue Unveiling

The Old Guard, of the Gate City Guard of Atlanta, will act as military host at the unveiling of the memorial to General Robert E. Lee and "Traveler" on Stone mountain, April 9, and will have general charge of ceremonies in honor of the occasion, it was announced Saturday by Colonel W. M. Camp, commander of the Old Guard, in response to the request made by the Stone Mountain Memorial association.

The announcement is regarded as particularly significant, since in years past the Old Guard has sponsored many brilliant military and patriotic events. It is a tradition of the Old Guard that whatever it sponsors must be made a success and on this occasion Colonel Camp announced the organization will throw the whole power of its influence and enthusiasm into making it an event second to none in the history of Atlanta.

Peace Monument Unveiling.

Principal among the notable events sponsored by the Old Guard was the unveiling of the peace monument in Piedmont park in the fall of 1912, which was attended by a distinguished assembly of famous old military companies from the north, and the parade preceding the unveiling was one of the most brilliant and spectacular that ever marched through the streets of Atlanta.

Colonel Camp announces that the same military companies which attended the peace monument unveiling have been invited by the Old Guard to attend the unveiling of General Lee and "Traveler." Among these are the Fifth Maryland Regiment Veterans, of Baltimore; the Ancient and Honorable Artillery, of Boston; the Boston Light Infantry Veterans; the Putnam Phalanx, of Hartford, Conn.; the State Fencibles, of Philadelphia; the State Fencibles Veterans, of Philadelphia; the Richmond Light Infantry Blues, of Richmond; the Amoskeag Veterans, of Pittsboro, N. H.; the Minute Men, of Washington, and the Cleveland Grays, of Cleveland.

Invitations to Notables.

In addition to these, Colonel Camp also announced that the Old Guard will extend invitations to President Coolidge and his cabinet, to the house and senate of the United States, to high officers of the army and navy, to the governors of all the states and their staffs, and to the heads of patriotic organizations throughout the country.

One of the outstanding features of the program will be a military parade through the streets of Atlanta on the morning of April 9, at the conclusion of which the units participating in the parade will be transported to Stone Mountain, where they will act as guard of honor at the unveiling ceremonies.

Dr. George Bolling Lee, of New York, the only living grandson of General Lee, will head the list of notable visitors who have been invited, and Dr. Lee will bring with him his son, Robert E. Lee III, 5 years old, who will give the signal for the unveiling of the colossal statue of his great-grandfather.

Applications by the Old Guard to the railroads for reduced fares already have been made, Colonel Camp said.

Turn Hair Dark With Sage Tea

By JEAN MACON

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product for only 75 cents, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.—(adv.)

Edwin F. JOHNSON SOUNDS THE SOS CALL

Mr. Edwin F. Johnson, in an afterthought of desperation, called his thinning cohorts together yesterday at the Piedmont Hotel to attempt to snatch from Walter E. Harwell in the closing hours of the campaign the victory Mr. Harwell has won in his race for Tax Receiver of Fulton County.

The meeting was attended by at least two County Commissioners, including Mr. Johnson himself. It was presided over by a man who announced for County Treasurer and who failed to qualify. It might be interesting to know why this man decided that it would be more to his interest not to run for County Treasurer and to boost Edwin F. Johnson's campaign for Tax Receiver.

The principal speaker at the meeting was a popular gentleman of elegant manners and lovable disposition and, withal, an astute politician, albeit, slightly worn and weather-beaten and the forlorn hope of all desperate politicians.

The meeting, small as it was, resolved to "assure" the "election of Edwin F. Johnson Tax Receiver of Fulton County as a tribute to his service to the County as a member of the Fulton County Commission." As a County Commissioner Mr. Johnson was lauded to the sky but not a word was said about allowing him to serve out the three remaining years of his term as a County Commissioner to which he was elected by the people, during which he might carry out the recommendations of the present grand jury and THREE preceding GRAND JURIES.

Walter E. Harwell has run a clean campaign. He has attacked nobody's character. Any man's political acts are a legitimate subject of fair criticism. In behalf of Mr. Harwell we have called attention to the fact that the administration of which Mr. Johnson has been a part has been criticized by four grand juries and the fact that Mr. Johnson is trying to take advantage of the very things for which his administration has been criticized. We again call attention to this fact.

Until recent years the politics of Fulton County have not been dominated by machine politics. The people of the County, sensing danger, are now aroused and intend to resume their control over the public administration. Walter E. Harwell when elected Tax Receiver will devote his entire time to the performance of his duties as Tax Receiver of Fulton County and will extend the service to the outlying districts of the County, and will not meddle with other officers. He does not seek to be the dictator of Fulton County. He only seeks to be Tax Receiver, and with the assistance of the good people on his ticket he knows that he can perform the duties of the office satisfactorily to the people as he has administered, for the past nine years, the office of City Marshal of Atlanta.

Let every registered voter go to the polls and vote and let the WHOLE PEOPLE decide the issue, and let it not be determined by Mr. Johnson's Piedmont Hotel clique.

time this newly developed product has appeared on any Atlanta home. The porch and entrance way are capped with cemented tile in artistic pattern.

Still another distinctive feature of the home, and one which was devised and put into execution by the Hood company, is found in the driveway and walks of the model home, which are of broken tile imbedded in cement in arabesque design. The beautiful effect thus obtained adds unusual beauty to the home.

An interesting point in connection with this artistic tile work done by Hood company's experts is that the tile itself is manufactured in the south from Georgia and Tennessee clay by a plant of the B. Mifflin Hood Brick company, which is one of the foremost companies of its kind in the entire country.

Campbell Coal Company.

The Campbell Coal company, which carries so extensive a line of high-grade home-building materials that it boasts ability to construct an entire dwelling if supplied with the lumber, made one of the most important contributions to the Haynes Manor home.

It supplied the magnificent sand-finished Kentucky colonial brick in soft and harmonizing shades of brown with which the home was built, together with common brick used in the interior walls. In addition its experts selected the highly picturesque and artistic builders hardware used in the structure—the door knobs and hinges, knocker and many other items of which will draw particular attention.

The cedar-lined linen closets in the home also came from the Campbell company, the rich, red lumber providing a permanent moth and insect-proof storage space for household linens which will always come forth scented with the aroma of the cedar.

Metal laths used throughout the house, providing an extra secure hold for the plastering, also were supplied by the Campbell company. These are of the Consolidated brand, and the lime, cement and plaster that went on them and in the brickwork also came from Campbell's. Medicine cabinets with solid Venetian glass doors, an outside ash pit and an unbreakable metal door for the coal chute were among other items secured from the Campbell company.

Willingham-Tift Co.

The Willingham-Tift Lumber company supplied all lumber and millwork going into the model home, every foot of the material used from this firm being manufactured in its great Atlanta plant.

The framing is of short leaf pine in best grade and the sheeting is dressed four sides, sound, square-edge boards. Cornices are dressed four sides of B grade yellow pine. Interior trim is B or better yellow pine, kiln-dried and machine-sanded.

The windows are of yellow pine glazed with S. S. B. glass, and doors are of yellow pine stiles and rails with yellow pine single panels, cove and bead.

One of the greatest feats of manufacturing accomplished by the Willingham-Tift company in meeting material requirements for the model home is seen in the artistic, curved stair which leads from the living room to the second floor. In this stairway the treads are of beautiful oak with risers of yellow pine and birch handrail of special design.

The Lowry Company.

Those who are engrossed in interior construction of homes will take keen interest in the two baths of The Constitution's model home. For sheer beauty of fixtures, they are without peer in Atlanta, being equipped with softly-colored bathroom appointments from the Lowry company, exclusive local dealers in the nationally-known Kohler brand.

Both baths are located on the second floor of the home, one being in the front of the structure and the other at the side of the master's bedroom. The front bath is furnished with Kohler fixtures in a delicately beautiful peach shade, and the other is appointed in a beautiful spring green color.

The two baths afford an impressive illustration of how bathrooms may be made things of beauty, restful to the eye and in every way promoters of comfort and satisfaction. The coloring of the fixtures is not a surface treatment but is obtained through a special manufacturing process in the same manner that the old white porcelain finish was manufactured in products of the finest quality.

Another important feature which the Lowry company contributed to the model home, and one which will arrest the attention of every homekeeper, is the Kohler electric sink in the kitchen, which is fitted with an automatically-operated dishwasher. This is an interesting item of the many time, labor and energy-conserving features offered the public in the ideal dwelling.

Capital Electric Company.

Visitors to the model home will not fail to note and admire the beautiful electric fixtures supplied the home by the Capital Electric Lighting and Fixture studios. The living room is lighted with a colonial chandelier in colonial brass finish and simple, delicate design conforming to the motif of the home and of its main room. Four candle side lights to match the chandelier are arranged on the walls of the living room.

In the dining room is another magnificent fixture—a crystal chandelier which catches and reflects the light in its many-faceted, pendant prisms. On the other side of the bouffet is located a bracket light with crystal pendants. The music room is fitted with a smaller crystal central piece of the design used in the dining room, and two one-light brackets are on its walls.

Each of the bedrooms is fitted with a two-light central fixture fastened close to the ceiling in colors harmonizing with the appointments. In addition, the master's bedroom has a one-light bracket on either side of the dressing table.

In the upstairs hall is an old rosette ceiling fixture and at the entrance is a lantern light in polished steel. In the baths are one-light candle brackets conforming to the color of the fixtures. Utility lights are in porcelain enamel, serviceable and easy to keep clean, and in the breakfast room is a lantern with an apple-green shade, the light globe being inside a cylinder with parrot design.

Scagliola and Stucco Co.

A phase of the model home exhibition that will account for much of this popularity is the work in scagliola, built into the house by master artisans of the Scagliola and Stucco company. It has already been noted that the two upstairs bathrooms will be a center of attraction for the visiting throngs, now that the home in on display just as was the case during process of construction. This effect could not have been accomplished without the artistic bathroom walls made from scagliola by a special process of the Scagliola and Stucco company.

For each of the bathrooms a sample of the color selected for the plumbing fixtures was given to the company's experts to enable them to blend the scagliola with the bathroom fixtures. This was done with the deftness of the master artist. The resulting combination of colored scagliola walls and colored bathroom fixtures is an irresistible sight to lovers of domestic beauty.

Scagliola is a marble-like building material that has been used for utility and decorative purposes in the building trades from the earliest days. For a while the art of making scagliola was lost, but it has been regained and the product improved in beauty and usefulness. A special bathroom scagliola has been created by the Scagliola and Stucco company that is waterproof. This is an improvement that has added much to the uses of the product, and made possible the beautiful, economic and sanitary bathrooms to be seen in the model home.

Another feature that has been provided by the Scagliola and Stucco company for the model home is the ornamental scagliola mantel in the living room. This mantel gives an excellent example of the artistic effect that can be obtained in scagliola work. On either side of the mantel, supporting the main top ledge, is a colonial column in the ornamental material. These two columns form a miniature reproduction of the large wooden columns that add distinction to the open portal between the dining room and the living room.

Georgia Power Company.

The Georgia Power company supplied the late model Westinghouse electric stove in the kitchen, one of the most recent additions to the comfort and convenience of the housewife devised by science and one which is rapidly increasing in use and popularity.

This stove is the three-units-and-double-oven-units type, is finished in white and black enamel, and is one of the handsomest and smartest articles with which the model kitchen of the model home is supplied. It is equipped with a clock which is set to shut off the power when the oven reaches a certain temperature, thus allowing the housewife to leave home while her meal is being cooked.

The Georgia Power company also contributed to the home all of its interesting and labor-saving electrical devices.

G. E. Refrigerator.

Another modern convenience and time and labor-saving device which delights the hearts of women who keep homes of their own is the beautiful white enamel General Electric company electric refrigerator, located in the kitchen. This splendid electric refrigerator was supplied by the Alexander-Seewald company, G. E. distributors here, and is an inseparable unit of the model kitchen.

The G. E. refrigerator used in the model home has three commodious racks for storing foodstuffs, two trays for freezing ice cubes and is so arranged that it is easy to keep clean, facile of operation and an unfailing aide in conserving foods properly at all times.

Moncrief Furnace.

Heating engineers who were consulted with reference to providing warmth and comfort for the model home selected a Moncrief furnace for the cemented basement.

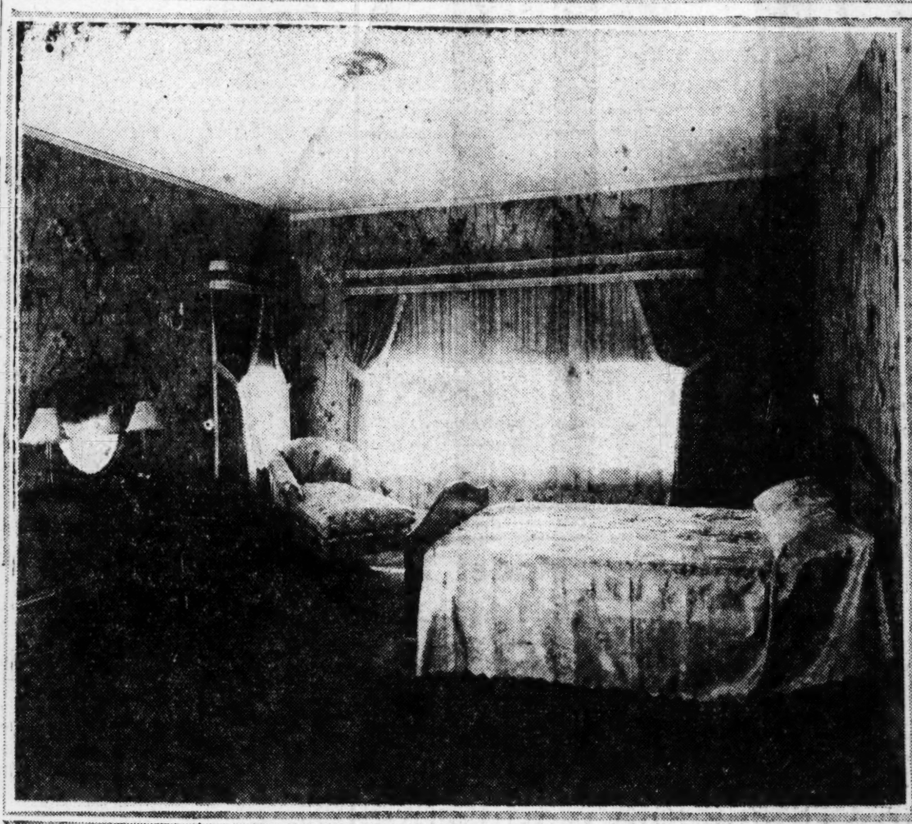

The furnace is a Moncrief boiler-plate steel furnace, model 30-50, the stove portion of the plant being made of boiler-plate steel riveted together and welded with fire brick. Its air-tight construction makes it impossible for smoke to seep into the home. Around the "stove" portion of the furnace is a large air pocket walled with sturdy metal outcasting, and

M. RICH COMPANY DECORATES HOME IN PERFECT STYLE

Every Resource of Great Department Store Placed at Disposal of A. A. Brill, Interior Decorator

Atlantans who visit the second model home of The Constitution in Haynes Manor today will see one of the most perfectly furnished and decorated dwellings ever opened for public inspection and guidance.

The M. Rich & Bros. Co. had complete charge of the furnishing and decorating of the ideal home, and A. A. Brill, interior decorator of the Rich company, directed the entire work.

The effect which he has secured is nothing short of marvelous. The furnishings fit into the general atmosphere of the home so perfectly that they seem to have been built into the structure; the drapes bring out the delicate coloring of the structure and enhance its soft beauty, and the rugs blend into the decorating scheme in a way that only a master could secure.

Mr. Brill, who is one of the foremost authorities of the south on home decorating and beautifying, devoted extensive study and long hours of work to the task of decorating the model home, and every resource of the tremendous stocks of the Rich company were placed at his command. Those who visit the model home will be able to visualize the magnificent results obtained from the masterful touch of Mr. Brill and the cooperation of the Rich company in this educational movement.

Arrangement of Home.

In furnishing and decorating the model home, the Rich company found that the downstairs was composed of a front living room and an adjoining music room, a front dining room, a breakfast room and a kitchen. Upstairs are two baths, a guest room, an upstairs sitting room and the master's bedroom.

Mr. Brill treated the living room in eighteenth century English mahogany in keeping with the severe colonial architecture of the structure. This room was furnished with a beautiful Governor Winthrop secretary; a Chippendale wing chair which is an exact copy of an old chair of that period; a Duncan Phyfe drum table and a copy of an old Chippendale pie crust table with quartered veneer top; a Martha Washington arm chair; a Sheraton card table and a Lawson sofa covered in hand-blocked English linen in reseda.

With these magnificent pieces, he used an eighteenth century Italian architectural painting over the mantle; drapes of old gold satin jaspe stripe with antique gold wood cornices, and three table lamps—one in old English brass with parchment shade, one with Italian pottery base and the third a marbelized directoire column lamp in green.

A rose taupe Wilton rug completes the decorating scheme and makes this room one of the most restful and delightful in the entire home.

The Dining Room.

The dining room, which opens off the living room, is no less impressive in its simple elegance. The dining suite is of Sheraton style crotch mahogany; the drapes are of antique green drapery satin, and the rug is a Gorevan oriental in many soft colors. The silver service is a copy of an early American pattern in keeping with the style of the furnishings, and the mirror above the bouffet is a Chippendale mahogany masterpiece that is an exact copy of a mirror in the American Museum of Art in New York.

The music room, just to the rear of the living room, is furnished with a mahogany grand piano and colonial sofa in subdued colored brocade. With these are used a copy of a Duncan Phyfe card table with characteristic lyre base; a copy of a Sheraton barrel chair covered in old gold damask; drapes of glazed chintz in yellow bound in old gold with green tones; a floor lamp and an Italian pottery, urn-shaped table lamp and a copy of a Sheraton book shelf in crotch mahogany. Rugs blending in tone and texture with those in the living and dining rooms also are brought into use in the music room.

In the kitchen, back of the dining room, are employed English print curtains in red and blue tones; gray and blue marbelized, tile-effect linoleum, and kitchen ware from the house-furnishings department of Rich's. The breakfast room is treated in colorful furnishings and drapes to match those of the kitchen.

Guest Room In Maple.

Ascending the stairs the first room encountered is the guest room, which Mr. Brill furnished in early American antique maple. The four-poster bed with low posts and no footboard is covered with a colorful India print. Opposite this is a chest of drawers with quaint mirror above, and with it is used a copy of an early American table and a maple bedside table. One chair used in this room is a copy of a French provincial chair in brick red quilted petticoat, and the other is a maple Windsor, cone-backed arm chair.

The drapes in this room are of gold silk bound in dark brown, and the rugs are hooked roogs of early American design.

The upstairs sitting room is appointed with a spool mahogany day bed and a copy of a Hepplewhite flat-topped desk in mahogany with a Duncan Phyfe desk chair. The third chief piece is a Salem chest of drawers with a Chippendale mirror. The chairs are a large wing chair in green sateen and a cone-back Windsor. Early American hooked rugs also are employed in this room. The draperies are of white Swiss organdie with five-inch green ruffles.

Master's Bedroom.

The largest room upstairs is the master's bedroom, in which is found a copy of a Hepplewhite, gray enamel full-size bed with a dressing table of gray enamel with a black enamel top and a shield mirror. Accompanying these pieces are a gray enamel chest of drawers, a chaise lounge in orchid satin moire stripe, and an arm chair in glazed chintz. A taupe Axminster rug is used on the floor, and the

The weekly forecast of the weather bureau calls for rains Tuesday and again on Thursday or Friday, coupled with mild temperatures Monday, colder weather Tuesday, and then warm temperatures again. The temperature Saturday ranged from 37 to 57 degrees.

The Washington forecast for all Georgia is "cloudy with rain Sunday night."

HALDEMAN PLANS FLORIDA-DETROIT NON-STOP FLIGHT

Lakeland, Fla., March 4.—(United News.)—Captain George Haldeman, trans-Atlantic flier, will leave here early Sunday morning on a non-stop flight to Detroit, he announced here today.

Haldeman will be accompanied by Ralph R. Devore, of Clearwater, Stinson agent for this territory.

The two will return here in ten days, Haldeman said, and plan for establishment of a passenger air route between Jacksonville, Lakeland, Clearwater and Cuba.

You wonder sometimes why such difference in the appearance of newly painted houses. Perhaps if you could compare the per-gallon cost of the paints used on separate jobs you would find the answer.

Nowhere is quality more pronounced, or the absence of it more evident, than is reflected in the varying grades of paint.

drapes are of green taffeta with knife-edge planting in orchid taffeta.

In the green bathroom are point d'esprit ruffled, tie-back curtains with a glass-top dressing table draped with yellow-flowered glazed chintz, a mirror and a chintz chair.

The peach bath is treated with curtains of old cream organdie with peach ruffles and a black oil cloth valance scalloped and piqued.

Attractive Bric-a-Brac.

An antique oriental rug is seen in the upstairs hall, and throughout the house attractive bric-a-brac is employed to heighten the effect of the furnishings and the drapes.

In decorating the model home, Mr. Brill made his plans conform perfectly with the coloring of the beautiful wall paper, which was supplied by the Baeck Wallpaper company, of Brooklyn, N. Y., one of the most widely-known manufacturers of wallpapers in the world.

The subdued paper employed downstairs is probably the most effective employed in the entire home, while that seen in the bedrooms is colorful and bright in keeping with its surroundings.

Jailed as Suspect In Store Holdup, Man Denies Charge

Edward Welch, 20, of a local hotel, was arrested early Saturday night on Peachtree street near Ellis street by City Detectives John W. Lowe and W. D. McGee in connection with the holdup of a grocery store at 594 Spring street, on the night of February 17.

An indictment was returned Friday afternoon by the Fulton county grand jury, charging Welch and Otis Chalmers, now in custody on another charge, with the grocery holdup.

At police station, Welch denied any knowledge of the holdup and stated to police that he can prove where he was on the night of February 17.

Hardman Opens Emory Lecture Series March 9th

Governor L. G. Hardman will speak at Emory university Friday evening, March 9, on "The Office of Governor," the first of a series of lectures on the government of Georgia to be heard at Emory during the spring.

The lectures are being held under the auspices of the Emory Political Science club, which conceived the idea of the recent Southeastern Citizenship conference held at Emory February 15-18. Every two weeks through May 18, some new phase of the work of the executive administrative departments will be discussed by state officials and department heads of Georgia.

The lectures will be held in the Emory law building beginning at 7:30 o'clock and are open to the public. It is a continuation of the idea of citizenship education begun by the recent conference.

The schedule of the lectures is as follows: March 23, "The Office of Attorney General of Georgia," by George M. Napier; April 6, "The State Department of Education," by Dr. M. L. Duggan; April 20, "Taxation in Georgia," by Tax Commissioner R. C. Norman; May 4, "The Department of Public Welfare," by Miss Rhoda Kaufman, secretary of the state department of public welfare, and May 16, "The Work of the State Highway Commission," by Chairman John N. Holder, of the state highway commission.

Malice Not Indicated In Pedestrian's Death, Supreme Court Rules

Although an automobile driver may operate his car recklessly and carelessly to the extent that he can run down and kill a person but such operation does not necessarily mean that there is malice toward the victim, according to a decision of the supreme court handed down Saturday in the case of state against Tom Wright, appealed from Warren county.

In this case Wright was driving a car that killed Algernon Baker, Jr., on the highway near Warrenton. He was convicted by a jury and given a life sentence.

The supreme court reversed the verdict of the lower court on the ground that the court erred in declining to give the jury a charge of involuntary manslaughter in the case.

An Example in Home Building You Are Invited to See!

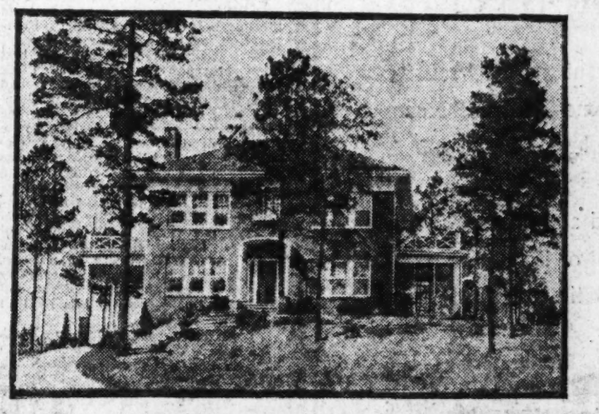

Built to Specification by the Atlanta Realty and Construction Company the Firm Chosen by the Model Homes Committee Because of Its Experience, Skill and Record of Achievements----

The Constitution's Model Home which has been built under our supervision and direction is one of many—examples of satisfactory home construction resulting from a client's affiliation with our organization.

The requirements of this model home were most exacting in detail and because the committee in charge knew of our ability to fulfill each and every detail with the utmost precision — we were chosen for the task.

Our organization during the past year has handled the building of 78 homes in this section. It is an envious record and the satisfaction resulting from each and every transaction may be attributed to the experience, skill and scope of the various services which are rendered.

In offering the public this complete phase of realty and construction service we have harmoniously combined under one head the four big essentials of satisfactory, logical and most economical home building — namely, architectural, material, structural and financial.

Open for Your Inspection . . . TODAY

Architectural.

A complete architectural department works hand-in-hand with your desires. The home of your dreams may be fully realized and the small details after your own liking may be arranged. Plans will be submitted or created, as this department produces the plans for the most intricate projects. This trained corps of experienced architects is at your command without cost or obligation.

Materials.

The vast buying power of the organization as a whole makes possible the most reasonable prices on high-grade materials. Each and every piece that goes into our jobs is carefully selected by men who are aware of values and requirements. This policy alone saves our clients many dollars and also assures them of the quality materials and furnishings that otherwise could not be obtained at such remarkably low costs.

Structural.

A thorough and competent department composed of chiefs of construction, are detailed to the actual building. Nothing is spared to follow the original plans. Specifications are completed to the letter and by following this practice there is a positive satisfaction in the end.

Financial.

One of the most important departments in connection with our home builders' service is the financial division, which arranges all details in the procuring of loans, mortgages, insurance, etc. It functions with absolute stability and knowledge.

You can own the home of your ideals in the locality in which you want to live by communicating with us. Payments can be arranged on a monthly basis like rent.

A Better Home for Less Money.

By serving you from beginning to end, eliminating the profits of each individual transaction, we can give you the benefits of the real estate broker's commission and the unnecessary middle man's share.

Phone us today—let us tell you about the homes we have built —then look them over—get the owners' viewpoints and be convinced of our ability to serve you more satisfactorily and economically.

between these two walls the hot air circulates.

National Products, Inc.

National Products, Inc., dealers in Williams Oil-O-Matic automatic, oil-burning heating units installed the splendid Oil-O-Matic burner in the furnace of The Constitution's model home.

This Oil-O-Matic burner is of the new model Honeywell and controls the temperature of the model home with perfect evenness and comfort. Its ease of operation and highly-advanced nature makes it an important component part of the ideal dwelling.

Building Company.

The prime mission of the model home is to demonstrate the basic principles required in residence construction to obtain beauty, comfort and endurance at the lowest ultimate cost. The years building, experience and expert knowledge behind the movement have proven that it is the least costly and the most satisfactory in the long run to use standard, nationally-known building materials throughout the structure. Another feature of proven importance is to have plans and specifications prepared by an architect.

But it is obvious that all these essentials will not produce a model home unless the actual construction is done with the greatest skill and care. In this instance the Atlanta Realty & Construction company was chosen as builder of The Constitution's model home. This organization has built homes in all sections of Atlanta and to suit all individual tastes without ever varying from the master workmanship that is required of a model home builder. The work of building The Constitution's model home was intrusted to these experienced hands for that reason.

Sirron Nurseries.

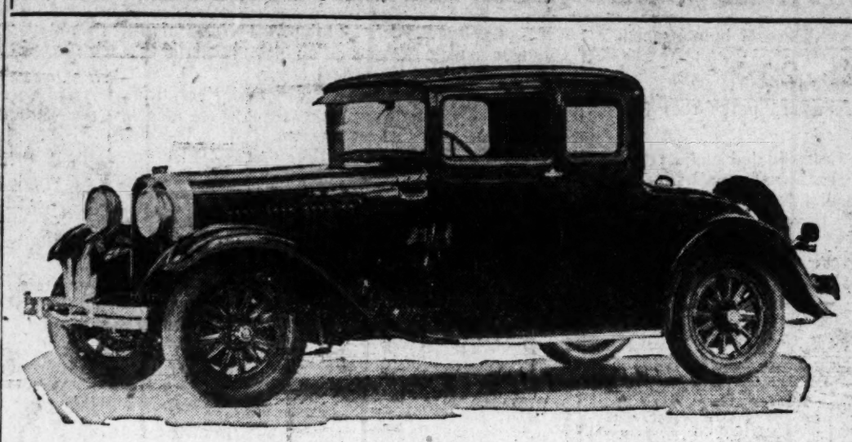

The Sirron Nurseries, widely-known local nursery company, was responsible for the artistic plan of planting flowering and evergreen shrubbery about the model home. Expert landscape artists of the company formulated the plan to bring out the beauties of the rolling lot on which the home is located, and the advent of spring will bring into full force the beauty of the work done by the Sirron Nurseries.

A wide variety of plants was used by the Sirron Nurseries in decorating the front of the model home, these lending distinction and grace to the winding tile walkway and driveway of the ideal dwelling.

Baeck Wallpaper Co.

The Baeck Wallpapr Co., of Brooklyn, which supplied specially-designed wall paper for the home, is a nationally-known manufacturer of fine wall papering. The patterns which were devised for the model home are of the most attractive type, lending an atmosphere of rest or gaiety to the rooms depending upon the use to which they are to be put.

U. S. Treasurer Will Pay Visit To City Today

Frank White, treasurer of the United States, will arrive in Atlanta today by motor to be the guest of F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson, president of the Southern Mortgage Securities corporation, at the Biltmore hotel.

Mr. White, who is perhaps best known through his signature on the United States paper currency, has had an active record in the political, financial and military fields. He has served as governor of North Dakota, is a veteran of two wars, with a distinguished record in each, and has long been one of the dominant financial figures of the middle west.

Becoming treasurer of the United States in 1921, Mr. White has served continuously since. He is a native of Stillman Valley, Ill., and was educated at the University of Illinois, where he graduated as a civil engineer in 1880. The honorary degree of LL.D. was conferred on him by that university in 1904.

From engineering work in North Dakota Mr. White found his way into politics, and after a term in the North Dakota legislature, became a state senator and then governor for two terms.

He served 10 years in the National Guard of North Dakota and commanded a battalion of North Dakota volunteer infantry during the Spanish war. Volunteering his services at the outbreak of the world war, he was commissioned a colonel of the Forty-first division in 1917, and served overseas in 1918, being decorated by the French government.

Mr. White organized and was president of the Middle West Fire Insurance company and the Middle West Trust company of Valley City, N. D. He also was extensively interested in farming and banking. He is a member of the Cosmos Club of Washington, the Sons of the American Revolution, the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Delta Tau Delta, and has been grand commander of the Knights Templar of the Masonic order.

Air Mail Test Flights Start In Next Month

The drone of powerful whirlwind motors will be heard along the Atlanta-New York air mail route within the next month, when test flights of the Pitcairn Aviation company are started in order to prepare pilots to carry mail along the New York-Atlanta division of the New-York-Atlanta-Miami air mail route.

The actual operation of the mail service is scheduled to start within the next two months, when Pitcairn Mail-wing planes will be operated on regular schedules along the lighted airway. The work of lighting the route to New York has practically been completed, together with the construction of emergency landing fields.

When the mail routes from Atlanta to New York, Miami and New Orleans are all placed in service, this city will become the junction point of aviation for the southeast, it is pointed out. The Pitcairn company has provided a well-equipped hangar and repair shop at Candler field to service their planes on the New York and Miami routes. A New Orleans company holds the Atlanta-New Orleans air mail contract.

Beacon lights at regular intervals along the New York-Atlanta route will guide the air mail pilots in night flying, while well-defined markers will act as guide posts during the day time. Plans are under way to have towns along the route identify themselves to airmen by large signs painted on the roofs.

The Atlanta-Miami air mail service will not start until late in the fall, because of the work necessary on the lighting of the route. No date has been set for operation of the New Orleans route.

AVIATOR, MISSING, REPORTED SAFE

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 3.—(AP)—Bill Lindley, local aviator, today received a telegram saying that Robert Watson, aviator, who had been reported lost between Charlotte, N. C., and Daytona Beach, was safe in Unionville, N. C. No other details were given.

A young woman friend of Watson had reported him as missing when he failed to appear after making an engagement to see her here last week.

Twelve square feet of shelf area!

GENERAL ELECTRIC Refrigerator

You will notice that the General Electric Refrigerators are unusually roomy. The model illustrated—designed for an average family—has twelve square feet of shelf area. This means that you have a shelf a foot wide and twelve feet long to store your food. In no other refrigerator can you get such great shelf area for the same over-all size.

The General Electric Refrigerator has no belts, fans or drain-pipes. It is unusually quiet. It never needs oiling. All its machinery, and a permanent supply of oil, are enclosed in an air-tight steel casing. All the assembling is done at the factory, where it is tested and re-tested. We never see the machinery—you never see it. Quietly, automatically, it does its every-day job....and does it well.

For fifteen years the scientists and engineers of General Electric worked to perfect this refrigerator—to make it simple, quiet, economical to run. How well they have succeeded you will realize when you come in and make a careful study of all the models.

Use of Combined Sidings Adds Grace to Modern House Design

Horizontal and Vertical Clapboards Used To Good Effect in Today's Plan; Plentiful Light and Ventilation Provided.

B. L. PORTER MOORE
President, Home Owners Institute, Inc.

As conveniently snug and homelike as it appears, this gracefully designed house would be a source of deep and lifelong satisfaction to any family that built it. Its good design is as apparent in the unusual but efficient interior arrangement as it is in the well proportioned, carefully detailed exterior. Here, as in many cases of fine design, the structural lines are worked out in a way that emphasize their good appearance through adherence to tasteful simplicity. The designer is Frank S. Carson, registered architect, of Ann Arbor, Mich. His plan contains 28,000 cubic feet, divided into seven main rooms, two baths, lavatory, garage and sleeping porch.

This plan is one selected for publication from more than 300 submitted in an architectural contest sponsored by the Arkansas Soft Pine bureau and conducted by "Pencil Points" magazine.

The exterior treatment, an unusual combination of vertical and horizontal pine siding, is in complete harmony with the quaint board fence and its decorative end posts, which blend nicely with the vertical lines of the lower house walls. An alternate plan might utilize wide pine clapboards or shingles for the horizontal siding.

Skillful arrangement of the interior gives rooms having a splendid degree of light and ventilation, assuring a cheerful atmosphere through all seasons of the year. The many windows of the living room make it certain to be bright and airy, and the dining room is so placed as to afford a glimpse of the open fire on the living room hearth.

Bedrooms Form Suite.

Upstairs two front bedrooms connect through a doorway, forming an attractive master suite. The doorway might easily be omitted if desired. Two baths and the downstairs lavatory give that convenience which only comes with complete utilization of modern plumbing equipment.

Among the features of equipment recommended for inclusion when building are the built-in chimney-fed incinerator, the automatic heat regulator, provision for cedar-lined moth-repellant closets and complete electric laundry equipment in the bright, modern basement.

An outline of the specifications recommended for the proper construction of this house is as follows:

Masonry—Concrete footings under all walls, as shown on drawing. All foundation walls to be of poured concrete or concrete blocks made with Portland cement. Concrete to be mixed with waterproofing compound. Chimney of common brick; all flues lined. Fireplace selected brick; provide ash dump with clean-out door in cellar.

Incinerator—Built-in incinerator to be installed in chimney, with receiving hopper door located in or near the kitchen for disposal of garbage and trash.

Carpentry—All framing lumber, exterior millwork and interior trim shall be of soft pine, well seasoned and specified in accordance with the standard grading rules; edge grain soft pine, maple or oak floors; steel bridging for floor joists; interior doors and built-in kitchen cabinet as required in detailed specifications.

Hardware—Owner shall furnish all finishing hardware for doors and windows, for closets and casework. The contractor will furnish a correct list of hardware and is to put it on in a careful, workmanlike manner. All hardware on exterior openings to be of brass or bronze.

Casement Windows—Steel casement windows may be used at owner's option.

Plastering and Lathing—Three-coat work over metal lath is recommended. A less expensive job may be obtained through the use of one-half inch of plaster over flat rib expanded metal lath or wood lath. Insulating lumber or plasterboard may be used if desired by owner.

Metal Work—Gutters, rain-pipes, valleys and flashing to be sixteen-ounce copper.

Roofing—Roof of slate-surfaced, copperclad or rigid asbestos shingles; to be laid in accordance with manufacturer's instructions.

Painting—Strictly pure white lead and linseed oil in proper proportion, with zinc oxide where desired, or a good grade of ready-mixed paint shall be used. Interior trim to receive two good coats of flat paint and one coat of flat enamel. Finished floors to be varnished or waxed throughout as directed.

Electrical Work—Complete system of electrical wiring from meter to all outlets, including panel boards, junction boxes and all other fittings. The installation must be in accordance with the rules and regulations of the national board of fire underwriters.

Plumbing—A complete system and fixtures ready to use shall be provided, as shown on plans and in accordance with local regulations. Brass piping for hot and cold water lines. Gas or coal fired hot water heater. Where sewer connections are not available use of reinforced concrete septic tank is recommended.

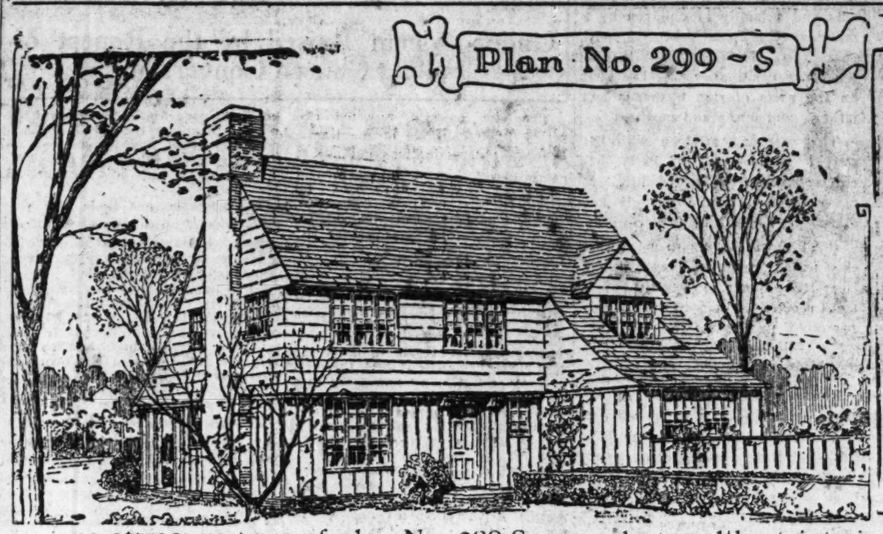

The Work—The floors and wainscot in bathrooms, with built-in china accessories.

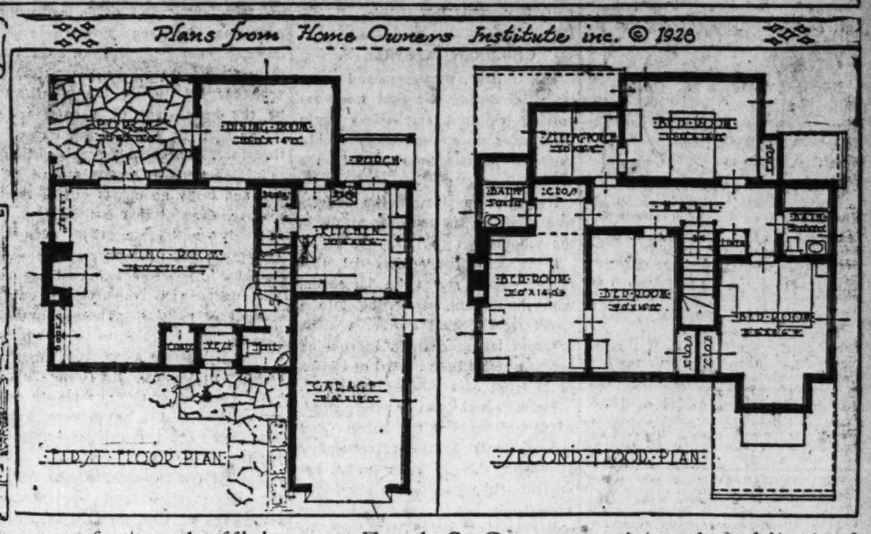

Heating—Steam, hot air or hot water boiler; coal, oil or gas fired.

Temperature Control—Heat regulator with eight-day or one-day clock thermostat, limit control on boiler or furnace and electric or spring motor.

Insulation—Throughout with insulating building board (or insulating quilting if preferred) used as plaster base on second floor ceiling operates as roof insulation.

UNUSUAL CLAPBOARD USE FEATURES GRACEFUL PLAN

The attractive lines of plan No. 299-S conceal a wealth of interior comfort and efficiency. Frank S. Carson, registered architect of Ann Arbor, Mich., designed this graceful home. Complete blueprints and specifications of our house plans, ready to build from, are available to our readers at low cost.

ADAIR-SENTER SUIT SETTLEMENT RATIFIED

An order ratifying the compromise settlement effected Friday between W. D. Hoffman, trustee for Adair & Senter, Inc., plaintiff, and S. A. Lynch, the S. A. Lynch Enterprise corporation, et al., defendants, was signed Saturday by Federal Judge Samuel H. Sibley. The settlement was approved Friday by Judge Joe Abbott, referee in bankruptcy, the terms calling for a payment of $7,500 by the Lynch interests to the estate of Adair & Senter, and the withdrawal of claims of $600,000 against Adair and Senter by Lynch.

THE MODEL CAR
for
THE MODEL HOME

Were greater beauty their only advantage, the new engineering principles of Dodge Brothers Victory Six would still be revolutionary.

Were greater safety The Victory's only advantage, it would still command the gratitude of a life-loving world.

Were greater economy its paramount feature, the fact would still remain that The Victory has made possible 21 miles per gallon at 25 miles per hour FOR A SIX.

But these are incidental to the basic Victory achievement.

You must DRIVE the car to know about that!

You must take a corner faster than you ought, a cobble pavement faster than you thought, before The Victory secret begins to reveal itself.

And you must unleash the full, sustained speed of the car before the idea takes full hold!

Victory design is unlike that of any other vehicle in the world—and Victory performance is equally radical and remarkable.

To examine the one and experience the other will prove an event that we urge you not to postpone.

Quieter than the kitchen clock

64 Engineers cooperated to develop this simplified, quiet refrigerator

The Georgia Power Company is pleased to announce that it now has on display at all of its stores the new General Electric Refrigerator.

Stand three feet away from a General Electric Refrigerator, and you probably won't know whether the motor is on or off. It actually is quieter than a clock. This is just one of the results of the General Electric process of simplification.

This new-day refrigerator never needs oiling. It uses very little current. It has an all-in-one unit that is hermetically sealed to keep efficiency in—and trouble out.

Over a period of fifteen years 64 engineers worked toward this great electrical achievement. Only an organization with the world-wide facilities and resources of General Electric could have put so much manpower and so much money behind the development of a single product. Now General Electric backs this product with their unqualified guarantee . . . and then, Georgia Power Company makes it a double-guarantee!

MODEL HOME OPENS TODAY.

Today The Constitution's model home in Haynes Manor will be formally opened to serve as a public demonstration of approved material standards in residential construction.

It is the second of a series of model homes being sponsored by The Constitution to foster the type of home building that will safeguard the purse of the home seeker of moderate means.

Thousands of Atlantans visited the first model home when it was placed on exhibition for a period of four weeks. A repetition of this interest in improving home comforts and in stimulating home ownership, can be looked forward to during this exhibition.

Home ownership is the ultimate test of good citizenship. For this reason it ought to be encouraged by every organization that has the permanent welfare of the nation at heart. But the righteousness of the institution itself is not sufficient to insure its posterity. There is no institution that can weather adverse competition unless it is economically sound at bottom.

A house of shoddy construction, improperly planned and built of inferior materials, is an economic loss to the owner and the community. Such a house represents a false value from the start.

The institution of home ownership is handicapped in its competition with more recent modes of living when wasteful methods of construction are permitted to gain headway through their apparent cheapness. Only by practicing sound economics in construction can home ownership be made inviting for the average family.

The lives of good citizens are usually built in their homes; the more permanent and sacred the home the more substantial the citizen.

The campaign for building better homes, being sponsored in Atlanta by The Constitution, endeavors to demonstrate the real economies of using standard, nationally-known materials, with architectural planning and building workmanship of the highest grade, which are apparent when repair and replacement costs are reduced to a minimum.

THE LOWELL INDICTMENT.

President Lowell, of Harvard, seems to have brought down a storm of criticism from public school superintendents and teachers by his recent utterances in Boston relating to the growing tendency to substitute frills and furbelows in schools for the concentrated mental training necessary to properly equip boys and girls for higher education. Among other things the veteran educator said:

"What we need is a good mental training, an accurate and thorough habit of mind, not a frittering away of the attention on a multitude of small matters of which the pupil does not get enough to develop consecutive thought."

This statement is so fundamentally sound that it is difficult to conceive of any one disagreeing with it. While grammar schools do not train their pupils to the degree that they may enter accredited colleges or universities, it is nevertheless true that standard high schools are expected to thus prepare them. But do they? In many instances, yes! But on the whole they do not. There are entirely too many side issues to the modern elementary school, especially in the cities. There is a wastage due to a daily accumulation of irrelevant activities, some of which are dissipating. There is undeniably too great a frittering of attention—too great a lack of concentration.

We do not have to go to the city schools in the north or west to prove that fact.

Wholesome recreation is desirable. Athletics should be a part of every school program. Athletic games constitute recreation. But every observer of present day school life in many of the cities knows that the tide toward a distraction from concrete mental training to frivolous frills is running too strong.

CHILDREN IN STREETS.

The traffic tragedies and near tragedies during the past week involving children emphasizes again that under no circumstances should they be permitted to play in the streets.

It emphasizes further the imperative necessity for teaching safety in the schools.

It is particularly essential that these young minds be impressed with the hazard of darting into a street from behind another vehicle, or from taking chances in running across a street in the midst of traffic, or in front of a moving vehicle.

Teaching a child to be safety-minded should begin in the home. That is fundamental. But the parent should also—and this is even more important—rigidly enforce a restriction against playing in anyway, whether roller skating, or chasing balls, or what not, in any part of motor traffic.

It will be too late to give these matters of precaution proper and restraining thought after the child has been killed or maimed.

Any analysis of the safety campaigns leads to the municipal playground as a solution of the problem. Children must play. They should play. Every city should provide ample public facilities for the purpose. Most of the detached homes provide opportunities for outdoor playing.

Surely, of all the places where children should not play, or be permitted to play under any circumstance, is in a street alive with moving vehicular traffic.

THE REPUBLICAN PICTURE.

Mark Sullivan, the noted Washington political commentator, in his analysis of the republican pre-convention race, as of the day, sees Secretary Hoover the leading figure in the picture, with former Governor Lowden, of Illinois, second in widespread and definite support. He declares that Vice President Dawes could have nation-wide support, but declines to be an avowed candidate.

Of Lowden the commentator says:

"Next to Hoover stands Lowden, the only other avowed candidate who is running in anything other than a strictly local sense. Lowden will have all or substantially all the delegates from several states in the farming area and some delegates from practically every state where farming is the chief economic interest. Lowden is the only candidate who is running as the leader of a definite cause; namely, the demand that farming be relieved of its present subordination in the country's economic structure. Lowden, in addition to his delegates from the farming states, will have some support from the south, based upon an affection for him which is a growth from his long association shoulder to shoulder with conventions for practically 30 years."

It will be recalled that at the national republican convention in Chicago in 1920 the late General Wood and Governor Lowden were the leading candidates in the early balloting, with Hoover, Johnson and Harding following with relatively the same number of votes.

It was early discovered that General Wood's vote had quickly reached its peak. The campaign for him was spectacular and noisy, but headquarters decorations, music, buttons and scores of pretty girls wearing his colors could not budge him an inch nearer the goal.

The Hoover and Johnson headquarters were both colorful and noisy, but neither had a ghost of a chance from the beginning.

The party leaders of the old guard determined to nominate Lowden. On the other hand, the bitter political antagonism of Thompson, then Chicago's mayor—as at present—began to bear fruit, and some charges as to funds from the Lowden management getting into the hands of two delegates from Arkansas stirred up a quiet uneasiness among party leaders as to its possible effect in the election campaign, with the result that on the night before the convention's final day, at the Blackstone hotel, the party leaders decided to replace Lowden with Harding, another of the old-guard senators. The latter was nominated.

The Harding headquarters had practically been deserted, and his manager, Daugherty, had almost given up the contest when the sudden change in the situation made him the nominee and subsequently the president of the United States.

It is only fair to say that Governor Lowden personally knew nothing of any funds having been sent into Arkansas. As a matter of fact, it is not improbable that the managements of all the pre-convention candidates spent money in various states to secure delegates.

Since his term of office as governor expired, Lowden has devoted his time largely, and without compensation, to helping in the organization of cooperative marketing organizations, and for two years has been the leader of the movement for legislation in the interest of federal control of commodity surpluses.

It can be seen, therefore, that Mark Sullivan is entirely correct in his survey as to this Illinois leader who will very evidently be a factor in the Kansas City convention.

There is a close alliance, in views on farm relief and other national problems, between Lowden and Dawes. They both will not be candidates, and it will be the natural sequence for one or the other to be the beneficiary of a combined strength at the proper time. Dawes, therefore, while not seeking the nomination will be a convention factor, and is by no means out of the picture, even at this writing.

It is noticeable that Mayor Thompson has now begun a "draft Coolidge" movement in Chicago. The purpose is obvious to any student of politics. Thompson no doubt hopes, thereby, to swerve the Illinois delegation away from either Lowden or Dawes. He is the "big boss" in Cook county, by reason of his control of the negro vote, but how far he can get with his scheme remains to be seen.

As the commentator points out, the other announced republican candidates at this time, Willis, of Ohio; Curtis, of Kansas, and Watson, of Indiana, cannot be considered as of more than local strength, with Hoover contesting Willis in Ohio for the delegation of the latter's own state.

DO PAVED HIGHWAYS PAY?

According to figures received and made public by the Georgia citizens' committee on highway problems, the savings in operating expenses by motorists using the North Carolina system of permanently paved highways, approximates $99,000,000 a year—an astounding sum when we stop to comprehend it.

Basing the compilation on experiments conducted by engineers, the analysis estimates that a saving of 3 1-2 cents a mile is effected by automobiles operating over paved roads as compared with second class earth roads. This estimate takes into consideration the depreciation of the car and the cost of fuel.

Figuring as a minimum that the 500,000 cars from North Carolina and other states using North Carolina's concrete highways average 500 miles a month thereon, the North Carolina road advocates show a total monthly mileage of 250,000,000 running miles or three billions of miles in a year.

Using the figures obtained through experiments of engineers, the saving in all costs a car at 3 1-2 cents a mile, it was shown, reaches the stupendous saving to motorists of ninety-nine millions of dollars a year on the operation of automobiles on North Carolina's concrete roads over the total cost of equal operation if made on the second class earth roads prevalent in some states.

The state of North Carolina, according to its balance sheet, has $151,556,672 worth of state highways. It is said to exceed all southern states except Texas in miles of surfaced roads and is led by only six other states in the United States.

The passenger cars, auto trucks and busses of North Carolina, it was stated, are paying all the costs of bonds issued for building the roads. Not a penny for the program of construction, reconstruction, maintenance, or "overhead" comes out of the general taxes of the state as the interest and amortization as well as construction, maintenance and executive expenses, are all paid from the yearly license fees and gasoline tax.

North Carolina farmers, the report made public says, lead in the number of owned automobiles in all southern states, except Texas, and it costs on an average but $127 a family a year for running a car. That the family car is not only popular on the farms but also in the smaller towns is proved by the fact that the highest per cent of their use—over 60 per cent—is in the towns of 2,500 population and less. Many manufacturers reported that their operatives drive daily from five to fifteen miles to and from their work since the roads were paved.

AS TO PARIS DIVORCES.

The hotels and cafes of Paris may suffer by reason of the present legal regime in France that has put an end to easy divorces for rich Americans, but the new order of things will be hailed with entire satisfaction by a great majority of the people in this country.

Until the recently established policy of enforcing rigidly the law as to "permanent residence," it had been the custom for several years for many American seekers of divorce, both husbands and wives, to journey to Paris, register at a hotel, start proceedings and either come home shortly thereafter unencumbered, or as new wives and husbands of possible third parties in the divorce schemes.

The refusal of the Versailles court to grant Bainbridge Colby, of New York, a divorce, will give such wide publicity to the new obstructions in the Paris divorce path that thousands of Americans, perhaps, will be saved time and expense, and in giving them opportunity to "think it over" may result also in holding together and sacred many home ties.

The easy Paris divorce has heretofore resulted in many flagrant injustices to innocent people. It has promoted immorality and has gone far at tearing at the very heart of the wealthy American home.

People have not forgotten the unprovoked abandonment of a good wife and a family of children by a millionaire industrial executive some years ago. They have not forgotten many other abuses of the kind on the parts of rich husbands and fathers, and wives and mothers.

The average American who has sought a divorce in Paris has reached the meridian of life. In many of the cases a triangle had already developed in this country.

It will be satisfying to many that the former cabinet member and later law partner of Woodrow Wilson, received a jar in his widely exploited purposes.

FINE CAROLINA EDITION.

Newspapers, at one time or another, issue all kinds of special editions, commemorative of anniversaries, of trade seasons, of outstanding events, etc., and it has been left to the Kingston, N. C., Daily Free Press to issue a "hospitality edition," celebrating the completion and formal opening of a fine new 12-story hotel in that splendid city of the eastern section.

The edition is more than a yearbook of the marvelous agricultural an. industrial achievements of the city and of Lenoir and adjoining counties. In a stirring and informative contribution by Governor McLean it also carries a concise record of some of the progressive accomplishments of the state at large.

The "hospitality issue" contains 40 pages, and is finely illustrated and printed.

The magnificent support shown by the business interests of the section through display advertising emphasizes the confidences held by the community in Editor Braxton and his competent staff of coworkers.

"SCANDALOUS NEGLECT."

Regarding the reapportionment issue, with which the census committee of the house has been wrestling, Speaker Longworth is quoted as saying that greater efficiency may be expected from a house membership of 435, as at present, than from one of 540, which would result from a quota that would prevent the loss of any member from any state. The speaker is of the opinion—and it is a sound one—that the reapportionment should be made on a strict application of mathematics, thereby letting the states lose or gain in representation as they show gains or losses in population. The house on Friday passed a bill for the existing membership reapportionment to be based on the forthcoming 1930 census.

Commenting on the position of Speaker Longworth the Brooklyn Eagle recently very correctly said:

"This phase of the reapportionment issue is debatable. The scandalous neglect of its duty by congress is not debatable. The census of 1920 has not been acted upon, and it is now 1928. We still have a house based upon the enumeration made early in the present century. It follows that the basis of representation is grossly unjust to the states that have been growing. And as a corollary of this, the unprogressive states, allowed representation far in excess of what they ought to have, are becoming a gravely hampering force against progressive legislation on several lines."

Congress has not only shown a "scandalous neglect of duty" in this matter, but it has flagrantly violated a mandate of the federal constitution which provides that reapportionments shall be made following each ten-year census.

The Constitution has referred repeatedly to this "scandalous neglect," and has pointed out the reason, which is known of all who have given the matter thought.

In 1920 the republicans secured complete control of congress. In that year a census was taken.

Since that time every effort at reapportionment has failed for the reason that republican state representations would thereby be reduced while democratic state representations would be increased. The outstanding increases in population, as developed by the 1920 census, were largely in democratic states. Hence the fight to avoid the reapportionment. The present plan to delay reapportionment until after the 1930 census cannot be justified. Certainly the unofficial estimates as to losses and gains are necessarily mere guessworks.

One thing, however, is certain—congress should show a proper respect in this matter for the constitution and for the institutions of government.

George Washington's outstanding characteristic has little impress on the Jacksonville Times-Union, as it told in its issue of February 22 that a her with a Florida pedigree laid an egg that weighed over a pound.

Two taxpayers of Indianapolis have asked for a receiver for the city, just as if they were not complaining about the receiver they had.

The Pan-American conference adjourned without discussing what would be done with the south pole after Commander Byrd discovered it.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL

Undue Alarm Raised by the Report of Failing Church Conversions.

The fact recently reported that nearly 1,200 churches of the leading Protestant denominations did not report a single conversion during the last year, has excited general comment and brought forth specious reasons for the sensational disclosure.

But the real explanation has been largely camouflaged or avoided. That reason is that the mass of persons now-a-days has swung away from respect for and confidence in sectarian theologies. The plain intelligent and thinking man of the Main street crowd is not impressed by discussions and divigations having to do with the religious dogmas that the ancients invented.

* * * *

Modern Faith Is in Fundamentals.

Much as professional dogmatists may deplore it most of their creeds are outworn and obsolete to the alert and practical minds of modern men. With them the seeming paradox obtains that fundamentalism is the true modernism.

Men of sense, whether highbrows or lowbrows, are at one largely, in the conviction that religion is actually what the Master declared it to be—that is, a way of living, and not merely a way of profession to believe this or that theory of theology, or practicing this or that form of public worship.

They demand now to see the effects of one's faith reflected and realized in one's behavior in all the incidents and emergencies of daily intercourse. For in all relations of life they have found that actions reveal faiths and that mere assertions of faith are too generally belied by actions. So the demand is becoming universal—"show me your faith by your works!"

* * * *

The Fault With Preaching.

The intellectuals, who were fewest, but were influential, used to complain that the rank and file of preachers were undertrained. They were chosen, it was claimed, too much upon the candidate's belief that he was under a "divine call" to preach the gospel. His personal conviction was perfectly sincere and his earnest enhusiasm could not be questioned. But in action he failed to measure up to the intelligence of the growing popular education.

Realizing that, the church authorities sought the remedy in education itself and began to set up standards of academic and collegiate equipment for accredited preachers. And that new emphasis reacted to produce preachers trained to dogmatics and to believe in the power of polemics. Spiritual values were insensibly sapped by the desire to show superior knowledge of history, science, ethics and politics, and thus evolved the modern preacher with richer head than heart.

* * * *

Ancient Faiths Become Uncouth.

It does not take the canny preacher of today long to discover that much of the theology contained in the ancient writings of "the fathers of the faith" has become obsolete; that the educated, sophisticated man and woman in the congregation in front of him refuses to accept the old formulas of dostrinal creed and insist upon believing contrary things that conscience and experience convinces them are actual facts.

For example, one finds now very rare cases of an intelligent devotional person believing the doctrine of "original sin," or that "in Adam's fall we sinned all!" Stuff like that they regard as monastic rot and spiritually hoot at it. Their real faith is that God made all things good. They do not believe that He crowned His creation by making man crooked, but that He made man in His own likeness and upright!

* * * *

Not a Necessary Evil.

In that belief they understand that men sin today exactly in the same way and for the same reasons that Lucifer sinned in heaven, and Eve and Adam sinned in the garden east of Eden, and Billikins sinned last night in that Decatur street speakeasy.

The true doctrine about sin is becoming universal. It stands on the Scriptural declaration that "all unrighteousness is sin." It does not any longer stand upon the notion that dissent from some ecclesiastical dogma, or violation of some church's disciplinary rule of conduct, constitutes a sin requiring a substitutional Redeemer—accessible only through a plenary penitence, confession and regeneration. All that sort of stuff has gone into the discard with men who can read the revelations and think for themselves.

* * * *

Faith in God Not Failing.

It is my lot to go about a great deal among men of intelligence and character and I do not find that faith in God, and in Christ, and in spiritual realities, is failing among them. On the contrary, it seems to me to be vitally increasing, and the mere fact that it does not express itself by registering on the church rolls in the character of a "conversion" is not important. The "conversion" has already occurred in the conscience and conduct of the individual. It needs no tag.

Hence, the surprise that many churches report "no conversions" is statistical silmply. It by no means imports the moral somnolence of consciences or the decadence of vital religion. As a matter of observation and contact it impresses me that the men and women of today have more and better religion than those of two generations past.

* * * *

Where We Are Headed.

It impresses me that we are heading into an age wherein righteousness will be the dominant note and demand in the religion of the people. They are coming to believe truly that Christ is "the Sun of Righteousness" and by His light and life-principles the whole world must walk and act to be right with God, their creator and determiner of their eternal destiny.

The thinking world is coming daily to a firmer belief that the peace, fraternity and prosperity of all things worth while depend upon advancing the time when "righteousness shall cover the earth as the waters cover the deeps." And men generally have ceased to regard that as a "religious dream," but as an oncoming age to the advancement of which they must contribute their personal faith and conduct.

The churches must help that era in or be submerged by its inflowing tide.

TEXT AND PRETEXT

BY M. ASHBY JONES

Wanted—A Public Conscience

I am quite sure, that in the long run, public opinion is the arbiter of our social, commercial and political life. It makes laws and afterward determines whether they shall be executed. The verdict of juries is born out of public opinion. Social customs and standards register the thought and taste of public opinion. This mysterious something which we call public opinion, however, does not necessarily have any moral quality. It may be nothing more than the expression of men's desire for prosperity or safety, wealth or comfort, or only the expression of a standard of good taste.

Public Opinion.

So we must face the fact that there may be a public opinion without a public conscience. That means that the sentiment of a community may prohibit certain things, not because they are morally wrong, but because they are "bad form," bad business, or injurious to wealth or comfort. Here public opinion is seeking to protect property and prosperity, wealth and comfort, while there may be no provision whatsoever for the protection of character. Yet no one will dispute the fact that, fundamentally, the safety of every interest of society fests upon the moral quality of its citizenship.

An earnest study of the life of our cities today leads one to raise the question whether we are not rapidly drifting toward a social condition where we have a public opinion which is not backed by a public conscience. The calendars of our courts are crowded with a sikeningly long list of men and women charged with every kind of crime from bootlegging to gross and bestial murder. There is no question as to the criminal statutes under which they are tried, and, if convicted, these statutes provide sufficient penalties. But as a matter of fact, they are not to be tried by these statutes. They are to be tried by public opinion.

Juries are selected from our citizenship, and express in their judgments and verdicts that average moral standard held by the people of the community. They are inevitably the revelation of the average moral sentiments and convictions of their environment. The outcome of many of the nation-wide advertised criminal trials of the past year is a shocking revelation of the cheap sentimentality, low-grade sense of justice, and feeble consciousness of social welfare, of society.

A Sporting Proposition.

Before we begin blaming our laws, criticizing the police, or condemning our court procedures, we should examine carefully the democracy which is back of them all. Our newspapers are always a sensitive reflection of public taste and attitudes. It is, to my mind, supremely significant that our papers dramatize with spotlight effectiveness the most horrible of these criminal proceedings. In this way, our public becomes an audience, the criminal the leading actor, supported by judge and attorneys. The whole procedure is transformed from the serious purpose of a search for justice in the interest of public welfare, to that of an artificial stage setting for the entertainment of the public audience. For that reason, these trials depend for their results almost entirely upon the technique of the players. Doheny and Fall, posing in the center of the stage as "old pals," absorb the interest of the audience, of which the jury is only a representative, and the supremely important interest of the welfare of a nation is forgotten.

In place of a public conscience, we have a widespread sentimentality, which is probably best expressed in the popular slogan, "be a sport." Throughout well-nigh every phase of our social life, the edict has gone out that you must be a good sport. That demand has been substituted too often for the demand, that you must be a good citizen, a good friend, or a good husband. When one coldly analyzes the sentiment back of that demand, it is the slogan of the gambler. It is a dare to take a chance against conventional standards and legal requirements. It is for this reason that if the criminal plays his part well the audience applauds, and the bootlegger, and even the murderer of his wife, may become a hero.

An old prophet once said, "Woe unto them that call evil good and good evil." I do not insist that we should keep necessarily the same moral code that our fathers and forefathers had. Every generation must, in some real sense, establish its own moral standards. But the deadly danger which we face is the actual destruction of the moral code itself. I fear a moral blindness, an actual inability to make a moral distinction. The issue before us is not so much what is right and what is wrong as the question whether there is such a thing as right and wrong. For the safety and salvation of civilization itself, we must rediscover the moral distinction and put a virile conscience into our public opinion.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

BY DR. S. PARKES CADMAN.

London, England.

To what do you attribute the long continued supremacy of Great Britain as a world power?

She was not a world power until after Lord Chatham's administration, Nelson's sea victories and Wellington's triumph over Napoleon at Waterloo. But she has had a considerable place in the world for nearly a thousand years.

This is due in large measure to her succession of gifted men in peace and war, from William the Conqueror to Gladstone and Beaconsfield. The list of these celebrities is too long to be recited here. One instance, however, is typical of the rest. Edmund Burke was the Shakespeare of the political world. From his speeches you may learn the secret of Britain's expansion as from no other literature known to me.

Washington, D. C.

I have always understood that Macaulay was a first-class conversationalist, much given to monopolizing the entire attention of the social groups in which he moved. Was he really as brilliant and well informed as his biographers claim? Was not his learning of a more or less ephemeral type which received undue applause because of the mediocrity of speech in the Victorian drawing rooms and banqueting chambers?

Whatever Macaulay's merits were it cannot be correctly said that they shone by contrast. The circles in which he moved were renowned for their genius, learning, wit and humanness. If he was in many respects first among equals, as he was, this fact entitles him to your serious consideration.

To be sure, his age had its drawbacks, some of which took their pronounced form in him as one of its leaders. His philosophical views were often superficial and he showed unfamiliarity with a few higher intellectual realms. But his general knowledge was unsurpassed and his powers of expression copious and forceful.

As a child in the nursery he told Hannah Moore, who inquired about him after he had been scalded, that "the agony had abated." As a college graduate his powers of memory were amazing. He heard a fellow student recite a poem which he had composed and fifteen years later Macaulay repeated it, word for word. It is probable that with the exception of Joseph Scalinger, who learned Homer in six months, no man of letters has had a better memory than Macaulay. It was "wax to receive and marble to retain."

He read enormously and had at his instant command what he read. Although he makes few direct references to the Bible, his books reveal his intimacy with it. They teem with Scriptural quotation, proverbs, maxims adapted to the situation, and in his essay on the strength of the money they had obtained by preying upon Great Britain in the most awful crisis of her affairs. Here is a pretty kettle of fish! Comment is restrained by the recollection that we have our own troubles in prominent political circles.

You have referred in your column on several occasions to Bossuet, who was, I believe, a Frenchman and a bishop of the Roman Catholic church. Can you tell me as a Jew a little more about him?

Jaques Benigne Bossuet (1627-1704) was a contemporary of Louis XIV and one of that monarch's favorite preachers. He was appointed tutor to the Dauphin, for whose instruction he wrote his discourses on universal history, in which, as in the pulpit, he united the dry light of argument with the fire and heat of passion. His three sermons delivered at the funerals of Henrietta Maria, widow of Charles I of England; her daughter, the Duchess of Orleans, and the great soldier Conde, placed him not only first but alone among the preachers of his age.

Court life did not attract his high-minded devotion, which found a more congenial field in the bisphoric of Meaux, to which he was called in 1861. Here he entered upon those efforts in behalf of Christian unity which have become historic. His controversies with Protestants and Jansenists revealed him as a superb apologist for organized religion as inherent in the Roman hierarchy.

His masculine intellect, powers of language, courageous writings, just appraisal of the temporal world and appreciation of eternal verities explain his lasting influence. There were spots on his sun, but it was a sun, not an ordinary star, and it shone far and wide. If you can find the two studies of Bossuet by Sir J. Fitz-James Stephen, published in 1892, by all means read them.

Halifax, N. S.

Is it true that the honors of the British peerage have been sold and bought by men of wealth and the proceeds devoted to the funds of political parties?

Yes. Lord Rosebery charges that Mr. Lloyd George has filled his personal war chest as the head of the depleted liberal party with funds obtained by the sale of titles. "The Morning Post," of London, reiterates the accusation and calls on Mr. George to tell the tale of his trafficking in honors. He retaliates in kind.

"The Banker," a prominent British journal of finance, asserts that many recipients of knighthood are gross, illiterate profiteers of doubtful reputation, vulgar in their lives, who were shoveled into the ranks of the aristocracy on the strength of the money they had obtained by preying upon Great Britain in the most awful crisis of her affairs. Here is a pretty kettle of fish! Comment is restrained by the recollection that we have our own troubles in prominent political circles.

Every Telephone Operator Knows Labor Leader Frayne's Number—Old-Fashioned Method of Treating Hydrophobia—Modern Maiden's Prayer.

BY CHARLES ESTCOURT, JR.

(Written Exclusively for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance.)

New York, March 3.—Union labor officials and agents are about as hard a group of men to reach by telephone as any in the city. Such words as federation, international, brotherhood and association figure in the proper titles of their organizations, and the listing in the telephone book is not exactly uniform.

One exception. You can't miss Hugh Frayne, general organizer, for years and years, of the American Federation of Labor. The telephone is in his name and also that of the A. F. of L. Few having dealings with either need to look it up. All of the women secretaries in all of the offices of the locals, of whatever trade, call "Wisconsin 2214" glibly when the boss says, "Get Frayne."

Since 1909, when he was sent to New York, Hugh Frayne's honest, friendly face has been agreeably familiar in the artificiality of Times Square. Here, among the actors, salesmen and promoters he has long had his office. In the old days his short, compact figure was often seen alongside the massive person of Samuel P. Gompers, between the A. F. of L. office and the Hotel Continental, a couple of blocks away, where the labor chiefs hang out.

Hugh Frayne, who went to work at eight years picking slate from coal in Scranton mines and never went to school more than one term, is a man of large affairs. He is consulted about all big union moves.

HOW TO TREAT HYDROPHOBIA.

M. P. Prout, printer for 63 years and still at it, was telling about his early experiences.

"When I was only ten," he said, "I went to work for a man named Van Gilder in Brooklyn. One day I saw him pick up his little dog and kiss it. An hour later he had hydrophobia. His wife sent me out after the druggist. They were in love and I knew it. He told me to see a judge in the city hall and get an order to shoot or smother—"

"The dog?"

"No," Mr. Prout went on, serenely, "the printer. Well, the judge said to smother him and I watched the druggist do it with a couple of mattresses."

Mr. Prout, who also remembers walking on the frozen East river with his Sunday school teacher, Henry Ward Beecher, and drifting a mile on a cake of ice while hanging onto the minister's coat tails, says he is positive about the smothering.

SKYSCRAPER MILK DELIVERY.

Twenty milk delivery routes are included in the midtown section between Thirtieth and Fifty-second streets and from Fifth avenue, six blocks over to the East river. To residences and apartment houses in only part of this territory, the delivery of one milk company averages 330 quarts daily, and that's the highest milk delivery concentration in the world.

To one apartment house, at 227 Park avenue, just north of the Grand Central terminal, the daily delivery is 170 quarts, and there's another record. Then one company delivers at the Graybar building, an office skyscraper, four pints of cream, one quart of buttermilk and thirteen quarts of regular milk.

It must take many cows, contented and otherwise, to supply the milk consumed every day in the city's office buildings. Some goes to executives, stenographers and others accustomed to lunch in their offices, and much of the milk is taken between meals by business people trying to gain weight.

THE MAIDEN'S PRAYER.

Maybe the girls do want us, bless them. After reading smug stories about girls preferring careers and college graduates spurning the men, it is both comfort and satisfaction to come across a copy of a circular letter addressed "Dear Daughter of Eve," and marked "Very Confidential."

"If Eve had behaved herself," the letter insists, "we would all be living in the Garden of Eden today. Now it was easy for her to get the wrong idea about things. She had no girl friend, no woman's club, not even a magazine. Is it surprising she got into trouble?

"The world today holds thousands of wistful Eves. For some unknown reason they have lost their kingdom. They have been banished from the Garden or they have never quite entered it. Every woman has the right to romance . . . Charm in a woman is what fragrance is to a rose. Cleopatra had a large share of it, and so did Helen of Troy. Why shouldn't you?

"You can afford to lose your manicures, or a pair of chiffon hose, or some new gloves, but you can't afford to let Betty steal your sweetheart, because she was wiser than you and bought this book."

TESLA'S MIND WORKS.

When Nikola Tesla was a boy, in a border village of Austria, he tried to fly with an old umbrella and as a result passed six weeks in bed, while the neighbors thought it a pity that his parents, one a Serbian priest, the other famous in the country for needlework, should have such a flighty son.

Well, The Skyliner has had the pleasure of dining with Mr. Tesla, now seventy-one, and is in a position to say that some of the waiters consider the inventor a little odd, although they are also in awe of him. Hearing his dreams of wireless transmission of energy and wireless control of ships and planes, they eye him strangely.

But this Mr. Tesla, whose various inventions, such as the system of alternating current power transmission, can scarcely be explained in ordinary language, has just won a patent dispute over his combination of airplane and helicopter. His proposed machine, "the flivver of the air," Mr. Telsa calls it, rises vertically, and can be flown through a window.

Mr. Tesla is a man who dreams seriously, as an inventor, of the weird control of power, speed and so on that the most highly imaginative authors use in their most fantastic fiction.

A BLIND OPERA FAN.

A blind man, in the silk business, attends opera almost every night. He buys standing room, but the Metropolitan ushers know him and usually give him a seat from which he would have a fine view of the stage, if he could see.

This man began to be an opera-goer years back, when his sight was sound. He remembers the old settings and costumes and imagines them again, when he hears the music. Actually he sometimes imagines wrong, for since he lost his vision there have been changes. The dragon in "Siegfried," for example, is less uncouth than in the old days.

But if the blind man misses a few scenic improvements, he is also spared the sad spectacle of old romantic favorites grown fat and bulky, so that they waddle about, singing a love duet, instead of moving with the lost grace proper to sweethearts.

Atlanta's Public Schools

What They Are Doing—What They Are Trying To Do.

This is the seventeenth of a serics of articles on the Atlanta public schools, prepared under the direction of the Personnel association of Atlanta. They are published to inform the parents and public about the schools and their work. The entire system will be discussed.

Arithmetic in the Elementary Schools.

Of all the sciences, of all the subjects generally taught in the common school, arithmetic is by far the oldest. Long before man had found himself an alphabet he counted in some simple way by using his fingers, with pebbles on the ground, or upon notched sticks. In the course of time the writing of numbers has undergone many, many changes. A most interesting study is the growth of this subject. The subject matter of arithmetic is always undergoing change and what may have been important 25 years ago may be relatively unimportant today, due to social and industrial developments.

In days gone by arithmetic was taught for arithmetic's sake and was more or less a barren, abstract subject lacking motive or interest. It was taught because it was one of the three "Rs," regardless of the needs of life.

The purpose of education is to learn to do well those things which we need to do in life. The modern methods in arithmetic place the emphasis upon those problems which life will require and which are really essential to serve the needs of everyday life.

Use of Arithmetic.

The question arises as to how we shall know what arithmetic is actually used in life. Many scientific studies of the everyday uses of arithmetic have been made and the kind actually used in social and business activities of adults has been determined. The result has been that an effort has been made to teach the arithmetic that is really essential to serve the needs of everyday life. Many topics have gained or lost in importance because of social and industrial changes.

Our aim in teaching the children of our city this subject has been not only to perform mathematical operations with speed and accuracy, but to think in terms of the general affairs of life. An effort is made to cause the problems to grow out of the pupil's own interest, thereby giving him a real desire and a motive for his work. We attempt to make pupils happy in their work, thus insuring thorough work and right attitudes. We lead them to work together as a cooperative social group, thereby creating as nearly as possible the same situation that the pupil will meet in life.

The teaching of arithmetic has been simplified in recent years by dropping from the course of study those topics which the pupils will seldom encounter and stressing those that are most common in problems of business, industry and the home. Even kindergarten children may be introduced to the simplest of these skills. Simple counting, such as number of children needed for a game, number of bottles of milk used, number of pupils absent, etc., are things the kindergarten child feels the need for in his activities. Number work is also an essential agency in developing obedience, punctuality, truthfulness, responsibility and many other virtues through the social activities. The work of the first two grades is informal with a book in the hands of the teacher only. Number for the little child is language therefore number work is oral and has to do with the pupils' activities such as buying and selling in his play store, banking his money each week, planting his school garden and in keeping his school calendar.

Interest Based on Need.

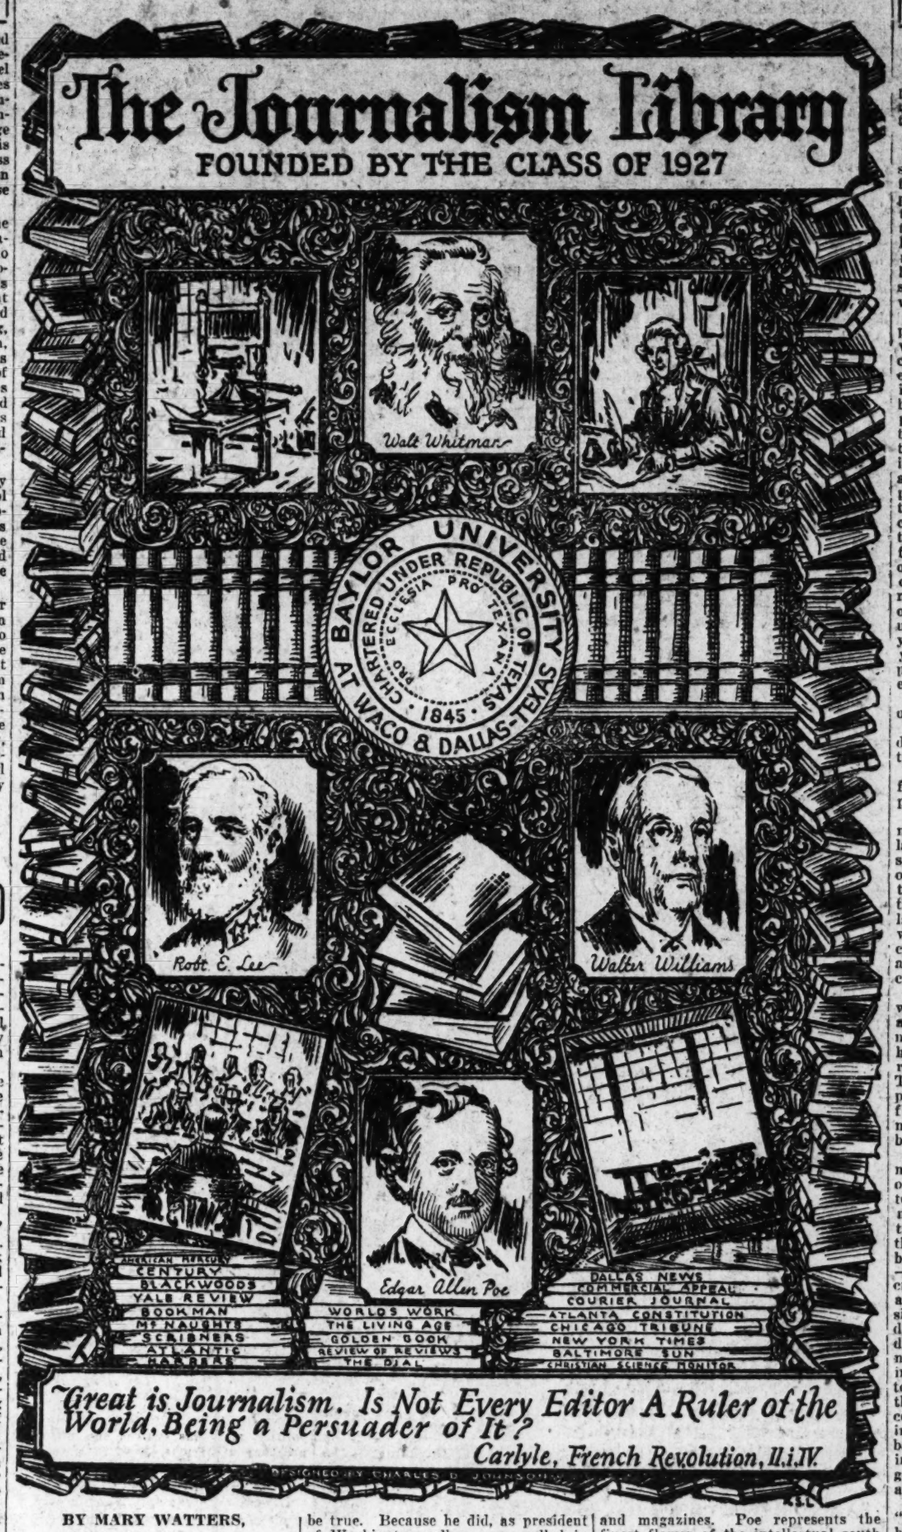

The pupil will be intensely interested in the subject if he feels a need for it. There must be a demand created for it, before the pupil can feel the need for it. A teacher utilizes all social activities that lead to number experience. She arouses a consciousness of the need of a knowledge of number and a desire to have this knowledge. Much of the abstractness of the old style arithmetic has been done away with by means of these modern-day methods.

The aim of arithmetic is the same for all grades and groups while materials and methods vary according to the abilities of the pupils. In the upper elementary grades an attempt has been made to acquaint the student with arithmetic as it is actually used in life. In his problems in banking, in his budget for the school kitchen, in his school percentages, in athletics and health records, in his building of puppet stages or real houses, he sees arithmetic no longer as an isolated subject, but one that grows out of his activities and he feels a definite need for fractions, long division, denominate numbers, percentages, etc.

Standardized tests have greatly benefited teachers, schools and school systems in the teaching of this subject. By means of these the pupil's attainments, progress and needs are discovered and through drill work and practice materials his weaknesses are corrected.

In conclusion I might say that our one big aim in teaching this subject in the elementary school is to adapt it to the needs of everyday life. First, we attempt to arouse the pupils' interest and curiosity, thereby making them feel the need of the subject and then we endeavor to organize our instruction according to the abilities of the pupils. When you hear a child say, "I like arithmetic," you may feel assured that he is learning to do well those things which he will actually need to do in life.

Artistic Journalism Bookplate Pays Signal Honor to The Constitution

BY MARY WATTERS,
Of Baylor University.

The Atlanta Constitution has been placed in the group of eight leading American daily newspapers in the bookplate designed recently by Dr. Charles D. Johnson, head of the department of journalism of Baylor university, Waco, Texas, for the books of the journalism library founded in that institution on May 31, 1927. In this journalism library, the first in the southwest, beside the portrait of Robert E. Lee hangs that of Henry W. Grady, editor of The Constitution from 1880 until his death in 1889. This portrait, taken just before his death, was a gift of the present editor to the journalism library.

The work of Henry W. Grady alone would give The Atlanta Constitution a leading place in the annals of American journalism. Grady, a native Georgian and a graduate of the University of Georgia, the oldest state university in the United States, chose journalism as a profession while he was yet in the university. He never deserted it. It is altogether fitting that the school of journalism there should be named in honor of Henry W Grady.

Journalism Faced Difficulties.

In the troublous time of reconstruction southern journalism faced a difficulty such as it has never since been called upon to face—the problem of achieving material reconstruction out of physical devastation and of reconciling the social and spiritual attitudes of the two sections so lately emerged from fraticidal strife.

No man realized this difficulty more clearly or faced it more courageously than Henry W. Grady. As an orator of the matchless southern order of Alexander H. Stephens, John C. Calhoun and Robert Y. Hayne, he spoke of southern problems from Dallas, Texas, to Boston, Mass. As a journalist, and particularly in his all-too-brief editorship of The Atlanta Constitution, he worked untiringly for a new south, seeking to interpret the south intelligently to the north at a time when feeling threatened to rule out reason. Even in this controversial period his death was proclaimed in the north as a national calamity.

If Grady could return today, he would see the fruits of his efforts—Atlanta the heart of a new south, material and intellectual, and his paper, The Atlanta Constitution, still a leading force for its continued progress.

Work of Journalists.

This new south, so eloquently heralded by Henry W. Grady, has been, for more no doubt than most people realize, the work of journalists. Robert E. Lee foresaw that this would be true. Because he did, as president of Washington college, now called in his honor, Washington and Lee university, he recommended to the trustees of that institution that they establish a department of journalism. From this recommendation came the establishment there of the first department of journalism in the United States on March 30, 1869. His work has borne much fruit. There are today 55 schools and departments of journalism in American colleges and universities that send out each year 1,400 young men and young women ready to enter the profession of journalism.

As a fine and final product of the material new south, with leisure for introspection, there is evidence today of a widespread recrudescence of sectional self-consciousness seeking expression and promising to restore to this section the intellectual leadership that it held before the civil war. The Baylor journalism library bookplate is a significant feature of this revival.

Tribute to the achievements of yesterday, hope in the progress of today, and suggestions of the possible developments of tomorrow—all are combined in this bookplate. The old south of Robert E. Lee and Edgar Allan Poe receives merited recognition. The new south of Georgia and Texas, of Atlanta and Dallas, figures prominently in the forecasts for the future.

Evolution of Journalism.

The evolution of journalism in its mechanical organization is represented by the transition from the old hand press, cherished relic of the infancy of printing, to the modern rotary power press, gigantic engine of mechanical power. In social organization the solitary editor, picturesque in his lace frills and wig, with his faithful pen and ink pot, has given place to the city editor in conference with his many reporters, whose ever-ready typewriters stand obedient to a more intricate and more rapid journalism of the present.

Personality, ever the most effective agent of constructive journalism, is given a foremost place in the bookplate. The group chosen here is representative of journalistic progress in its various aspects and relationships. Foremost is Walt Whitman, journalist, poet, protagonist of freedom of speech and of the press, ideals cherished by Americans, but so difficult of attainment. Whitman is not of the south, but in a peculiar sense of America. In his journalistic achievements, however, the south may lay claim to him, for some of his best work in this field was done in New Orleans.

Edgar Allan Poe, son of the old south, pride now of the new nation, was long in receiving a deserved first place among American poets and prose writers, although early recognized abroad as the first American poet and almost worshipped by the artistic French. As creator of the short-story in America he holds high place in the development of the magazine as a field of journalistic expression. He was himself the editor of two magazines and contributor to newspapers and magazines. Poe represents the finest flower of the intellectual south and serves as a beacon light to point the journalist to the highest pinnacle of artistic and intellectual achievement.

Place of R. E. Lee.

The work of Robert E. Lee in encouraging university education in journalism has been mentioned above. Certainly it gives him a place in this rostra of personalities. Lee, known and loved throughout the land as the exponent par excellence of the civilization of the old south, is less well-known for his effective work as an educator in the building of the new south.

Dr. Walter Williams, dean of the school of journalism in the University of Missouri, has accepted the mantle of Lee in promoting journalistic education in the United States. In 1908 he organized in the University of Missouri the first school of journalism in the United States. He has been dean of that school since its organization and is now internationally known for his work in journalistic educational administration.

In the heart of the bookplate is the seal of Baylor university, established in 1845 and pioneer of higher education in the southwest, just as the University of Georgia, established in 1765, is in the southeast. Baylor university, in her promotion of journalistic education during the past five years—the organization of a separate department, now ninth in enrollment in the United States, the institution of the first southwestern journalism conference, which was held there in April, 1927, the founding of the first journalism library in the southwest, and the creation of the first journalism library bookplate, is a foremost example of the new day ahead in journalistic education.

Tragic Incident Recorded.

One feature of the bookplate, the three books just below the seal, records a tragic incident that has peculiar significance for Baylor university, but which, because of the bond of sympathy uniting men everywhere, aroused nation-wide concern. These books, the three volumes of the Immortal Ten, contain newspaper stories of the Rund Rock catastrophe of January 22, 1927, in which ten Baylor university men met their death in an automobile wreck on university business, and the letters and telegrams of sympathy which came from Baylor friends the world over.

Above the seal is a shelf of books representing the morgue of information. The encircling border of books is suggestive of their intrinsic value to the journalist—books on science, philosophy, history, poetry, religion, government, economics and social organizations.

Journalism in its national and international achievements in the realm of literary art is suggested by the group of fourteen leading magazines—the Century, Blackwoods, the Yale Review, Scribners, the Bookman, McNaughts, Harpers, Atlantic, American Mercury, Dial, Golden Book, Living Age, Review of Reviews, World's Work.

Things New and Old About the Bible

BY REV. W. P. KING

THERE IS THE DEFENSE OF WAR.

1. There is in the first place the practical defense of war. The various groups who receive profit from militarism are eloquent advocates of war.

Those whose livelihood is involved in war may be expected to create a war scare. The munition makers are very fervent in their patriotism. They are prophets of the certainty of wars for the future because they desire that their future profits shall be certain. If war to these "patriotic" citizens meant financial loss or loss of life by a gas attack they would become so pink in their pacifism that Tolstoi would look like a rampant militarist.

They have a super-abundance of proxy patriotism. They are more than willing to furnish the guns and receive the gains. Their militarism after all is mammonism. Their patriotism is located in the purse. They have no interest in the cultivation of peace so long as it interferes with their vested interests. The jingo politician finds his opportunity in appealing to the provincialism, partisanship and baser prejudices of the people. His politics and official position and patriotism all blend into one. He advocates the urgency of military preparation provided it means a preparation for his political position. He keeps one ear to the ground and both eyes on the main chance. The yellow newspapers see red. What if the rest of the world should combine against us and we should not be ready? The yellow newspapers see the peril of the yellow races, whereas our greatest peril is the yellow metal of commercial exploiters.

2. There is the theoretical defense of war.

First. There is first the theoretical defense of war from the viewpoint of the state.

There is the false argument that fighting armies are analagous to a police force.

A police force is in opposition to a man or group of men who disobey law. In war it is not a question of superior nations suppressing the acts of violence of a criminal nation, but the superior nations fight among themselves. There could be no similarity to a police force unless there was an international alliance and a combined military force of the nations arrested the aggressive movements of a criminal nation.

The comparison between the present war system and a police force is an absurdity. Any man whose head is not filled with sawdust and who uses his head for anything except a hatrack should know better than that. The analogy could only be correct if policemen engaged in a free-for-all fight among themselves, and for good measure killed thousands of innocent bystanders.

Favorite watchwords are preparedness and self-defense and it goes without saying that in the absence of international understanding the old method of preparedness will be continued. But there is the fallacy of the whole theory of preparedness. To be prepared the United States would have to have greater military strength not only than Germany, France and England, but greater than all possible combinations. Any nation to be prepared would have to be stronger than all possible combinations, which reduces it to an absurdity. The race of preparedness is the race to death. The only real preparedness must result from international relationships so that the nation is strong with the strength of the entire group; I am an advocate of this kind of preparedness, and it is the only preparedness which will prevent war. Europe was bled white before the late world catastrophe in behalf of preparedness as the preventative of war. And yet the hoary falsehood continues.

In the early stage of society the only self-defense of the individual was his invidual ability to fight, but I much prefer that self-defense which the courts of law throw about me. So it must be with nations.

Reactionaries suppose that everything has to continue as it has in the past. I wonder that some people do not break their necks looking back on the past. It is not a mere idiosyncrasy—I like to use a shorter word when it will do as well or better, it is idiocy. There are those who are always looking back on the past, but who never learn any wisdom from the past. They are like the old negro who said, "My mind kinder comes and goes," only their minds mostly go. A poor shell-shocked soldier replied to an inquiry by saying, "I am getting on very well; I sleep and eat and feel all right; I don't have any mind, but I don't seem to miss it."

There are a number of controversialists today who do not use their mind and who do not seem to miss it.

Second. There is the theoretical defense mainly from the viewpoint of the church.

The heresy of the orthodox is nowhere more manifest than in their advocacy of war.

The defender of war imagines that he has scored a tremendous argument when he says, "Righteousness must come before peace." He has simply started his mouth going and left it without any supervision. His falseness is not in his words, but in the application and meaning which he gives to them. When did it come to pass that righteousness must be established by the unrighteousness of war? This assumes that war makes righteousness. War is the force of might, and might never makes right. This is to continue in the present day to hold to the philosophy of "tooth and fang and claw."

"The anti-militarist says that to go on with the war system, perfect it, let it have its way, is to make a colossal mistake. His growing protest over the institution of war is its folly, ignorance, stupidity, insanity. With the power to destroy property and kill people fast reaching its climax, with the world a neighborhood, and with the Christian view of life—all this makes war to the anti-militarist to be, not only the repudiation of morals, but the prohibition of straight thinking, the abolition of good sense, the triumph of imbecility."

Ancestors at Any Price

BY JANE SCOTT WOODRUFF

A long sojourn in Geneva, Switzerland gave opportunity for much investigation of unfrequented bypaths, and one afternoon when exhilerated by spring sunshine our "trio" turned from the Rue du Commerce with its bustle and present century airs, penetrated a veritable "hole in the wall," when, presto change! we found ourselves in another age.

It is truly remarkable to leave behind you the human voices, the grinding of traffic, the flaunting of fashion, and to step into the sepulchre of the past with its history and traditions. The narrow streets, the tall, gloomy houses, the appalling stillness, the very atmosphere itself redolent of flat wine and stale cabbage—all sure to speak of the long ago.

After climbing the Rue d'Enfer (Street of the Inferno) which is a refutation of the idea that it is a wide, easily-traveled road, we went through another mural aperture, whereupon we found ourselves in the street of All Souls which leads directly into the Street of Paradise. Here were great walls of living rock, which on many occasions long ago had been the defense of the Genevese. In thus making our way from one street to another we frequently passed through dark passages, and it was easy for us to imagine an affrightened populace in times of siege making their escape by means of these secret tunnels.

* * * *

One which we encountered, however, seemed almost too forbidding for the bravest of us to enter. It was dark and narrow, so narrow that two people could not walk abreast. While we stood hesitating at the entrance, a slip of a girl came forward, a child of hardly more than ten years, who told us not to be afraid but just to follow her. This we did and enjoyed the comedy.

On the street in which we found ourselves at the end of the tunnel, there was a quaint old fountain where four women were washing clothes at its stone trough and, incidentally, exchanging bits of neighborhood news. Two snow-white pigeons flew down at that moment and perched on the fountain brim, where they began cosily to plume themselves in preparation for another flight.

Turning thence into the Grand Rue we saw a tall, uninviting house around the doorway of which had once played a little child whose philosophy was destined to revolutionize the teaching of children. Over the door was the inscription: "Here was born Jean Jacques Roussian, the 20th of June, 1712." This was Roussian whose tomb is one of the shrines in Paris, he of such tremendous brain, such magnificence of precept, but alas, such poverty of principle.

After a few more intricacies of approach we attained our morning's objective which was a certain shop where antiques were bought and sold; and even though it had been a favorite haunt of ours, there seemed a spice of adventure in seeking it for the first time through such a labyrinthian past.

The antiquarian himself is a strange looking person in thorough harmony with his surroundings. He is thin to the point of emaciation, while his long hair stands out as though from contact with a galvanic battery, thus giving his head the appearance of being three times its normal size. This collector has a habit, they say, of going to a house of mourning and the more prominent the family the more certain his visit, to ask if they would care to dispose of their furniture, pictures and other family heirlooms. This occurs before the funeral when hearts are easily touched.

* * * *

Whatsover may be the method in which these treasures are gathered together, this ship is filled with beautiful and interesting relics. There are massive pieces of richly carved furniture, old hangings, silver, rare porcelain, paintings, etchings, miniatures in ivory of various celebrities, in fact there are hundreds of things in which such a shop would naturally abound. But the genuineness of them all! What if we did once see this antiquarian brush the dust from a "genuine Watteau," only to reveal the name of an unknown copyist? Such cases of "mistaken identity" are too trivial to upset the poise of an established antiquarian.

In our rounds of the shop on this memorable morning our attention was attracted by several new display cards. One of these carried the legend: "Ancestors for Sale Here."

Almost startled by this unique way of providing oneself with a visible family tree, we inquired if we might so much as look upon the face of an "ancestor," even though we had not the price to possess one. Immediately there was brought forward an age-dimmed portrait of a much beruffled gentleman in magenta velvet costume.

The antiquarian, meanwhile, eyed us closely, desiring to see American reaction to his cleverly devised plan for appealing to even the worst case-hardened of relic hunters. One by one he showed us other ghastly gentlemen and ancient dames, some of the canvasses being so patched and darned as to have the appearance of genuine antiques. No one need despair, for here was an opportunity to provide oneself with illustrious-looking ancestors at a merely nominal cost.

RETAIL SHOE PRICE ADVANCE PREDICTED

A. H. Geuting, president of the National Shoe Retailers' association, Saturday issued a statement to the retailers of the United States, the keynote of which was that the retail price of shoes throughout the country must inevitably advance to maintain the same quality.

Mr. Geuting pointed out that while there is a constant increase in the population of the world with an increase of 10 per cent in the last decade in the United States alone, that the United States will suffer more than any other country through the scarcity of leather since in our country, the head of cattle has decreased 33 1-3 per cent.

"Just put two and two together," Mr. Geuting said, "and you have four. One year ago there was a visible stock of 12,000,000 hides in the United States, today the visible stock has decreased to 3,000,000.

"Demand is increasing proportionately with the increasing population here in America, but further than this, the demand is also increasing in Europe where in the poorer countries, wooden shoes and shoes of straw, particularly in tropical districts, are being increasingly abandoned in favor of leather footwear.

"More than this, there is an increasing demand in the same ratio in all those trades that employ leather as raw material for the manufacture of such things as belts, bags, sport coats, sport hats and multitudinous articles of wearing apparel as well as for industrial uses."

AMERICAN RADIATOR COMPANY EXPANDS

The American Radiator company, $100,000,000 corporation, with headquarters in New York, again has entered Atlanta by the lease route. A warehouse carrying a complete stock of the company's products, located at 199 Oakland avenue, has been leased through the Adair Realty and Trust company.

Opening offices at 232 Peachtree street five years ago, this company has served the southeast, increasing comfort in thousands of homes and public buildings through the distribution of its heating products. The present expansion is due to increased demand for heating equipment throughout the south, officials state. Showrooms and warehouses are also being opened in New Orleans, Birmingham and Memphis, all being under jurisdiction of the Atlanta office.

Over 100 men work out of the Atlanta office, covering the entire southeast. Martin A. Rooney is manager of the southern branch.

The American Radiator company operates as the world's largest manufacturer of heating apparatus. A complete sample line is carried in the company's beautifully-decorated showroom here.

In the New York Theaters

BY PERCY HAMMOND

New York, February 3, 1928.

It appears that "Maya," the doleful allegory about sex-life on the Marseilles waterfront, is to be barred from further participation in the sorrows of our theater-going. Rumors of its unseemliness have been overheard by the district attorney, an investigation was made by one of his censors, who decided that it was not up to the standard of Broadway respectability. The order for its exclusion therefore went forth and it has joined, or it is soon to join, the little band of dishonored dramas regarded by the tribunes as inimical to Times Square virtue. Of course, there are whispers that the movement was begun by the promotion department of the producers in an ill-advised effort to stimulate attendance by a public notoriously not interested in fallen ladies and their wares. At any rate, "Maya," a traditional French masterpiece by Simon Gantillon, has been damned as a felon.

Since I am not among those who enjoyed themselves at "Maya," I look upon its troubles with an ignoble indifference. Although its sordid panorama was glorified by a sentimental symbolism, it was still to me a dull paraphrase, showing some ugly brothel-girls in what Earnest Bold, the translator, calls "the dreary discharge of their lamentable duties." Notwithstanding the emblematic haloes that crowned them as dark angels of the heaven that "draws men to women," they were little more than hopeless, unhappy insects. I admit a snobbish preference for those sins in the drama that are draped in the tragic, crimson curtains of the Park avenue and Mayfair elite. The habits and significance of woeful Magdelens, drearily discharging their lamentable duties in shabby Mediterranean bagnios, seem, however, to minimize the importance of the cosmic urge, and to make it even cheaper upon the stage than usual. It requires a tremendous courage to announce these confessions, in view of the fact that "Maya's" banishment has been protested by an imposing group of better-class theatergoers in a gentle remonstrance to the authorities.

If the district attorney ostracizes "Maya" on the grounds that one of his assistants believes it to be a tedious play, I am with him, pen, ink and paper. But if he outlaws it as a temptation to New York dramalovers to embrace a life of shame—as a medium destructive to Broadway morals—he is all wrong. In few plays has sinful Desire been illustraded more unattractively; it presents a hideous example of depravity in its elast lucrative aspects. It purges with pity and terror those who are not bored by it, and one ventures to bet that its performances have not caused the loss of a single soul. Why the bailiffs should chase "Maya" up the alley as a banefcl influence and welcome "The Shanghai Gesture" to their firesides is another problem in the general inconsistency of censorship.

Yet it may be due to the vigilance of our policemen but the drama of today is so uninjurious. The most careful parent may entrust his child to the theater, sure that the district attorney is on guard to prevent the happening of anything hurtful to innocence. Mr. Tuttle is to the stage what Major Campbell is to liquor, a rigid disciplinarian, ready to pounce upon and put an end to infractions of the rules. He has made it as difficult to see a disorderly play as Major Campbell has to buy a disorderly drink, and between them they have removed practically all the dangers that used to beset unwary citizens of the metropolis. I did not realize until I had read Paxton Hibben's delightfully ghoulish biography of Henry Ward Beecher that the drama in pre-censorship times was the black sheep of the arts. Now that it is so nice and well-behaved, it is hard to believe that before the civil war it was an ornery debauchee, contaminating everyone who came in contact with it. Mr. Tuttle may be glad that he does not have to cope with the roguish shows prevalent in 1850.

LUKE REVIVAL OPENS TODAY AT GORDON ST.

Judge Roscoe Luke, of Thomasville, Ga., will open his series of revivals at 11 o'clock this morning at the Gordon Street Presbyterian church. The revival will last until Friday night and services will be held every night at 7:30 o'clock.

Judge Luke is widely known as an evangelist throughout this section. He has conducted several successful revivals in Atlanta, one at the Baptist Tabernacle and one at St. Paul's church.

The music, vocal and instrumental, will be in charge of William Beck, a noted choir leader.

Gordon Street Presbyterian church is the fourth largest Presbyterian church in Atlanta and is especially noted for its choir and congregational singing.

A GLORY DEPARTED

BY ERNEST NEAL
(Poet Laureate of Georgia)

The hillsides around the village
With armies of trees sublime;
Gigantic oaks and hemlocks,
Proud sentinel-monarchs of time!

Thru centuries had they stood there—
Planted by God's own hand—
But man with his axe has felled them,
For greed had need of the land!

Now gone is the kingdom of beauty,
And where is the gold can pay
The cost of restoring the splendor
Torn from the hillsides away?

Here's a sigh in fond recollection
Of charms that over me hung—
The trees on the hillsides whispering,

Each quivering leaf a tongue.
That breathed of secrets primeval—
In rustlings and soughings I heard—
'Twas only the woods could tell them,
They shrink from the touch of a word.

HOOVER LEADING G. O. P. CANDIDATE

the phase of turning to the minor candidates Curtis would probably have the first consideration. Curtis, although running in his own state, Kansas, only will have a small number of scattering delegates, chiefly from adjoining states like Oklahoma and possibly Colorado. Watson will have merely the delegates from his own state of Indiana, with possibly a scattering additional one here and there. Willis will have only delegates from his own state of Ohio, and certainly not all of them—quite possibly not even half of them, because Hoover's name has been entered in Ohio and the support of him in that state is such that he is certain to have a considerable number of the delegates.

We come next to Dawes, who, if he were an avowed candidate, would stand next to Hoover, and actually stands next to Hoover even though he remains out of the race. To understand the relation of Dawes to the situation it is best first to consider the nature of the campaign.

Hoover Against the Field.

The campaign consists of on the one side Hoover and on the other side the field—the field of avowed candidates, Lowden, Curtis, Willis and Watson. It is frequently said the field is a combination against Hoover, and this is true enough. Sometimes the word "conspiracy" is used instead of "combination." "Conspiracy" in any literal sense is not justified. The union of the four others in the field against Hoover is a natural consequence of the conditions. They must unite their efforts against Hoover before any one of them has a chance. Doubtless there is among them and their managers and supporters a good deal of conferring and concerted action, but no more, doubtless, than there is among the friends and supporters of Hoover.

It is sometimes said of the four who compose the field against Hoover that some of them are in the race only for the purpose of helping defeat Hoover. Of some of the field this is certainly not true. Lowden is a candidate in as much good faith as Hoover is; indeed, Lowden was in the race before Hoover became a candidate. Nor, as to any of the others, would it be safe to say that he is running only as part of a plan to defeat Hoover. No one can guess the state of mind a man can get into once he is "mentioned for the presidency." Moreover, every one of these four has at least some chance for the nomination. If once Hoover is "held" by the combination each member of it will have at least some degree of chance in the ensuing chaos on the convention floor and the ensuing negotiations outside the convention.

In the judgment of Washington, Curtis, of Kansas, is as earnest about his candidacy as any one could possibly be. Willis, of Ohio, is credited with equal earnestness, though those who give him this credit usually do so with a smile. Watson, of Indiana, in the judgment of most observers, comes closest to the assumption that his presence in the race may be due less to hope of his getting the prize than to a wish to defeat Hoover. Watson's opposition to Hoover is exceptionally violent.

On the outcome of the struggle between Hoover on one side and the combined field on the other depends the status of Vice President Dawes. In a sense Dawes does not get into the picture until Hoover is out of it. Dawes will not become a participant in the race until after the convention is in session and many ballots have been taken—and then only on the condition that Hoover is "held" or defeated.

In the present stage of the struggle Dawes is a friend of Lowden—an intimate, personal friend of long standing, who not only would refuse to advance himself at Lowden's expense, but will do all he can to further Lowden's fortunes. If Dawes were actually in the race in the present stage he would probably have more delegates in sight than Lowden. But Dawes resolutely refuses to be in the race, refuses to enter his name in any primaries and refuses to let his friends work for him. Only after it is certain that Lowden has no chance will Dawes enter the picture.

This, if it comes to happen at all, will come after the convention is in session and after Hoover is prevented from getting a majority. The theory, the hope of the opposition to Hoover, is for the four men who compose the rest of the feld, Lowden, Curtis, Willis and Watson, together with some uninstructed delegates opposed to Hoover, to gather up a little more than a majority of the delegates. With this majority they will go into the convention and hold Hoover for a sufficient number of ballots to demonstrate that he canont win over the combination. (This, let it be understood, is set down as the hope of the opposition to Hoover; it is not set down as a prediction or even necessarily a likelihood.)

Enter Dawes.

At this point enters Dawes. The expectation is that after Hoover has been "held by the convention" for several ballots thereupon the field, Lowden, Curtis, Willis and Watson, or the managers or supporters of them, will swing their delegates to Dawes. It is presumed that almost all the Lowden delegates—and there will be probably upward of 200 of them—will be available for Dawes, and that most of the delegates controlled by Willis and Watson will be equally for Dawes. As to Curtis' delegates, they will not be available for this purpose. In the case of Curtis, his delegates, after Curtis is through with them, will go not to Dawes but to Hoover. Kansas is a strong Hoover state and there is something in the nature of an understanding among the republican leaders of Kansas that they shall go to Hoover when they are through supporting Curtis.

At this point in the situation as it will then be Dawes will be extremely formidable. Dawes would be formidable now if he were in the race. Dawes would be now and will be when and if the "break" comes more formidable than any one of the four who compose the field against Hoover, and possibly more formidable than all four combined. Dawes has a gift of friendship and republican leaders and workers all over the country who have been associated with Dawes for more than a generation are extremely devoted to him. Dawes has been a republican worker, aside from his career as a banker, for more than 30 years; as a young man in his late twenties Dawes managed the campaign in Illinois for McKinley in 1896.

Moreover, Dawes is popular with the senate—and this fact is testimony to his fundamental attractiveness of personality. Dawes began his vice presidency, during the first five minutes of his tenure of the office, with a violent and sensational denunciation of the rules of the senate. At that time one of the commonest reactions throughout all Washington was to smile grimly about what the senate would do to Dawes, how the senate would "tame" him, the individual members of the senate, such as Reed, of Missouri, and Johnson, of California, who would flay Dawes for his impudent denunciation of the senate rules.

All that was the prediction. The fact, as it turns out, is that most of the senate admires Dawes and likes him. Dawes never abated a whit from his denunciation of the senate rules—he carried on a crusade against them up and down the country; nevertheless the senate forgave him. Individual senators, notably — and strangest of all—Reed, of Missouri, sought occasion to pay tribute publicly to Dawes' fairness as a presiding officer and his courage as a fighting man.

All these and other factors will make Dawes extremely formidable if the convention should take the turn that brings him into the race—that is, if Hoover should be "held" during the early ballots.

There will be, then, at one stage of the convention—assuming it gets that far—a tug-of-war between Hoover and Dawes. If either wins, of course, that ends it. If this tug-of-war is inconclusive then there will be conferences and the opposition to Hoover will try one after another of compromise candidates; probably Curtis, of Kansas, would be among the first to be tried out. A list of the possible "dark horses" who might emerge at this point might conceivably include Dwight Morrow, the friend of Coolidge and the present ambassador to Mexico. Mr. Morrow's name is introduced here to make the list of possible "dark horses" meticulously complete.

Possibly the name of Charles E. Hughes should also be mentioned. Mr. Hughes has said he would not accept and in saying that has used the form of words traditionally recognized as conclusive. Nevertheless, there are some who cling to the notion of nominating him, and since his recent showing at Havana his name has been repeated. His name is included here to make as complete as possible the list of potential "dark horses" who might emerge at a chaotic stage of a protracted convention—assuming it is that kind of convention.

For purposes of clarity the relation of President Coolidge to the convention is omitted to this point. Mr. Coolidge is not a candidate and will not be. Nevertheless, with frequent recurrence, his name is drawn into the picture and the prediction is made that at some stage of the convention, either at the very beginning or possibly in a deadlock between Hoover and Dawes, or possibly in the chaos following failure of that deadlock to be solved, the prediction is made that some one will propose to renominate President Coolidge as the solution of the convention's difficulties, as in all respects, the best thing the party can do.

As to this, of course, the only answer lies behind Mr. Coolidge's close-locked lips. The best judgment and the practically universal judgment of Washington is that Mr. Coolidge's determination not to be a candidate in 1928 is absolute and final. The most dependable assumption is that if any of these contingencies involving the drawing in of Mr. Coolidge's name seem about to develop it will be recognized in advance by Mr. Coolidge earlier than by anybody else, and that Mr. Coolidge will take, sufficiently in advance, whatever step is necessary and appropriate to prevent the use of his name and to prevent any delegate from voting for him. A frequent guess is that if any of these contingencies seem to be approaching Mr. Coolidge will repeat, more emphatically than he did before, the phrase that he used in speaking to the republican national committee in December: "My wishes will be respected."

A frequent guess, possibly in some cases overcynical, is that those republican leaders who continue from time to time to resurrect Mr. Coolidge's name as a possibility do so as part of the mechanism of preventing Hoover from getting a majority. For example, in a given state the overwhelming popular choice, assuming Mr. Coolidge is out of it, may be Hoover; in such a case an obvious device for the leaders of the state if they do not want to be for Hoover is to assert that Mr. Coolidge is not out of it and that they are going to support him. It is entirely reasonable as arts of politics go to assume that this is the motive on the part of some who still talk of the possibility of giving the nomination to Mr. Coolidge. It is also a fact, however, that such talk can in many individual cases be in complete good faith, because nothing is clearer than that most of the republican leaders and most of the republican voters as well would prefer Mr. Coolidge if he were available above any other candidate.

The sum of all this about Mr. Coolidge is that the practically universal judgment of those best qualified to know or infer is that Mr. Coolidge by his own choice is out of it—completely and finally out of it—and that if any further steps seem necessary to keep him out of it Mr. Coolidge will take the steps. For example, of all public men one of those most likely to be for Mr. Coolidge and to want him in the white house is Senator Gillett, of Mr. Coolidge's own state of Massachusetts—and Senator Gillett has stated that he regards Mr. Coolidge as not available and that he, Senator Gillett, is for Hoover.

All-Atlanta Film Romance

:: CONSTITUTION MOVIE PRESENTED THIS WEEK ::

To Be Featured by Howard

Atlanta this week will see the first all-Atlanta film romance, produced from a scenario written by an Atlanta girl which was selected in a contest sponsored by The Constitution, and acted by a cast exclusively of local talent.

"Front Page Stuff," written by Miss Marion Wolff, will be featured all this week on the screen of the Howard theater. It is a stirring story of love, romance and of the activities of newspapermen.

Featured in the cast of the picture are Miss Louise Huddleston, Miss Frances Tarpley, Winston Jones and Hugh Lewis and Grady Barron, and according to reports from those who have previewed the picture, Atlanta is slated to see in the histrionic performance of these Atlanta boys and girls some of the most uniformly good acting that the screen has brought to Atlanta.

Seevral shots of the picture were taken on the stage of the Howard theater right before the eyes of the audiences of that house, but that was only a trifle compared to the actual work necessary to completion of the film.

A number of scenes were made in The Constitution building, and many other exterior views were taken. Frequently the company worked until 3 o'clock in the morning and then went home and tumbled into bed to arise at 9 o'clock and go out "on location" for more work.

Miss Wolff's story, selected from more than 300 manuscripts submitted by Atlanta writers, was declared by the director of the film to be one of the best he had seen, and the result aut picture is declared to be exceptionally good.

The picture, "Front Page Stuff," is an example of how modern movies are made in Hollywood. Practically every feature or program picture is a "quickie," and since the all-Atlanta film was made in the short space of one week, it can readily be styled a "quickie."

"Front Page Stuff" will be shown in addition to the feature, "Sadie Thompson," starring Gloria Swanson and "Dixieland," featuring Edith Griffith and Tom Mack, on the stage.

DANDRUFF
Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—(adv.)

Hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes and callouses lift right off! You'll laugh—it is so easy and doesn't hurt a bit!

Just drop "Freezone" on any tender, touchy corn. Instantly it stops aching; then shortly you just lift that old bothersome corn right off with your fingers. It works like a charm, every time. Seems magic!

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store. Try it!

Shake up Health!

FOREMOST Dieticians say More Milk and Malt for the Growing Child —Abundantly rich in Lime and Iron, the producers of Firm Bone, Sound Teeth, Strong Tissue and Rich, Red Blood.

ALL food authorities agree that present-day diet is unfair to the average child. It is low in calcium (lime), over-rich in phosphorus (meat) and short in certain growth-promoting substances known as vitamins.

Is it any wonder, then, that so many children are soft-boned, have crumbly teeth and month after month are underweight?

What makes soft-boned children—food with too little lime!

What makes pale, anemic children—insufficient iron!

Milk is the master-builder of bone and teeth because of its abundant richness in lime.

A single ounce—just a single ounce—of milk contains more lime than a pound of beef and nearly as much as a pound loaf of white bread.

But milk falls short in one respect. It is deficient in iron. And iron is required to make those red blood corpuscles, those rosy cheeks and to keep the blood stream free of injurious acids.

Malt, on the other hand, is a great reservoir of iron —hence, a magic maker of rich, red blood.

What a great Health Team!

Loft Chocolate Flavor Sweetened Malted Milk gives you this unrivaled health drink—in the most delicious form!

Lime for the bones—butter fats for energy—vitamins A, B and C for growth and the development of nerve and brain force—and iron for the blood!

So Easy to Make

Take three teaspoonfuls—add just enough hot water to make a paste—Then a tumbler of milk—a lump of ice (if desired cold)—and shake briskly to a creamy, velvety smoothness.

Don't confuse this peerless malted milk with chocolate powder substitutes. Where Loft uses pure rich creamy milk as a basis, most others use skimmed milk —and you know "skimmed" means that all the vitamin-laden butter fats so important to your child have been extracted.

For your Child's Sake Do This—

Don't wait until sickness compels attention to your child's diet or until the doctor has to prescribe malted milk. Act now. Buy a can of Loft Chocolate Flavor Sweetened Malted Milk at your grocer's or druggist's today. Begin to fit your child for man's estate. Hahn Breaks World's Record; Cornell Wins Meet

Carr Smashes Vault Mark At New York

Cornell Grabs Early Lead To Win Annual I. C. A. A. A. Games.

BY ALAN J. GOULD.
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

New York, March 3.—(AP)—Lloyd Hahn, rugged Boston A. A. star, ran the greatest half-mile in track history tonight, shattering the world's indoor record as well as surpassing the outdoor mark by winning a special race in 1:51 2-5 in connection with the I. C. A. A. championship games held here.

Hahn's performance smashed to smithereens the 24-year-old indoor mark of 1:54 3-5, made on March 19, 1904, at Buffalo, N. Y. It also surpassed the outdoor record of 1:51 3-5, established at Stamford Bridge, London, in 1926, by Dr. Otto Peltzer.

Dr. Peltzer, the German champion, was a spectator tonight as Hahn circled the fast intercollegiate track four times in probably the greatest race of his career.

Hahn had two opponents in his special attack on time, but he ran the last three laps virtually alone after Sam Martin, of the Boston A. A., had set the pace for the first furlong. Pinkie Sober, the third starter, withdrew under the hot pace, but Martin stuck to the finish, coming in 30 yards behind the flying Hahn.

Long Standing.

Hahn clipped the long standing indoor record, made by Eli Parson, of Yale, by three and one-fifth seconds. This feat was all the more remarkable in view of the fact that Parson set the record, which had resisted attacks for so long, in a relay race. Relay marks no longer are considered for individual records.

Hahn surpassed Parson's mark in his first race this winter, in Brooklyn, but it was not allowed because the track failed to have the required inside border.

The sturdy Nebraskan was fit as a racehorse tonight. His clubmate, Martin, was in the race simply to furnish early pace and he did it by stepping the first 220 yards in 26 1-2 seconds. Martin dropped back shortly afterward as Hahn, his swift pace unchecked, shot to the front. While the crowd of six thousand stood and cheered, Hahn steadily widened the gap between himself and Martin as he scored his finishing thrust against time.

"Easy."

"It was an easy race," said Hahn afterwards. "I felt as fresh as a daisy afterward. I knew the track was lightning fast and felt I could get that record."

Hahn's furlong times, after taking the lead from Martin, were 54 1-5 seconds for the quarter, 1:22 for 660 yards and 1:51 2-5 for the half. He abandoned his previous plan to continue on to 1,000 yards.

Mr. Pletzer was high in his praise of Hahn's fast feat and expressed the hope that he and the American would hook up in the Olympic 800 meters and stage a record-breaking duel. The German was among the first to congratulate Hahn.

CORNELL TEAM TOPPLES HARVARD.

New York, March 3.—(AP)—To a record-breaking tune that saw four meet records shattered Cornell returned to track and field glory tonight by capturing the seventh annual intercollegiate A. A. A. A. indoor championships, ending Harvard's two-year reign.

The veteran Jack Moakley's big Red team won its first I. C. A. A. A. A. title since 1922 by nosing out Georgetown and Yale in a hot three-cornered struggle for points.

N. Y. U., with Sol Furth doing spectacular double duty by taking second in two events, the hurdles and broad jump, sprang a surprise by finishing fifth in the team battle, only a point behind Harvard, the 1926-27 champions. The Violet tallied 13 points and Harvard 14 to land in fourth place.

Cornell tallied in only four events altogether. The Ithacans scored in the two-mile run, shot put and one-mile relay, in addition to their sweep in the weight throw.

Georgetown's chances of victory were blasted by a surprising and record-shattering triumph of the Syracuse one-mile relay team over the Hilltoppers.

The husky anchor runner of the Syracuse quartet, Ray Barbuti, uncorked a dazzling burst of speed on the last lap to pull away from Eddie Hoctor, Georgetown ace, and break the tape in 3 minutes, 21 2-10 seconds. The Orange team clipped its own meet record by two-tenths of a second.

Barbuti, in one of the greatest races of his career, was clocked in 48 seconds flat for his anchor quarter-mile. The world's indoor record for the quarter is 49 3-5 seconds so that it was small wonder Barbuti's amazing speed ran his rivals into the ground. Hoctor, the Georgetown anchor, just had enough stuff left to nose out Durkin, of Holy Cross, for second place, fully 15 yards behind the flying Syracuse flash.

Failure.

Sabin Carr was considerably below the world's record height in the pole vault. He had set 14 feet, 4 inches as his goal but had to be satisfied by displacing the former meet mark with his vault of 13 feet 3 3-4 inches.

The complete team scores:

Cornell, 21; Georgetown, 20 1-2; Yale, 19 1-2; Harvard, 14; N. Y. U., 13; Dartmouth, 11 1-2; Penn State, 11; Holy Cross, 10; Brown, 7 1-2; Columbia, Penn and Union, 7 each; Princeton and Syracuse, 5 each; Boston college, Bowdoin and Haverford, 2 each.

Champ Breaks Arm.

Memphis, March 3.—(AP)—Chasteen Harris, state golf champion and semi-finalist in the southern amateur golf tournament last year, was suffering today from a broken right arm, which will keep him from defending his title this summer. His arm was broken while cranking an automobile. Harris won the state title at Knoxville last summer.

GIANTS WORKING OUT AT AUGUSTA

Clay Rushes Tech Squad For Opener

Baseball Team Rounding Into Shape; Wycoff Works Out During Week.

With the sun shining down on Grant field and indications of clear skies for the past several days, the George Tech baseball squad has done much work with the bat. Every day for the past week Kid Clay has had his squad out early, getting all practice possible, as only three weeks remain before the opening game of the 1928 season.

Saturday aftrnoon Clay divided his men up into two teams and had an impromptu game.

On one team was Catcher Jimmy Stevens, Frank Speer playing on the initial sack, "Red" Terrell on second, "Doc" Smith at short, Ed Crowley on third and Captain McCash, Bob Parham and Frank Waddy covering the outfield.

This combination worked to perfection, not only in batting, but in quickly disposing of the other squad. The Smith to Terrell to Speer play looked somewhat like the Reeves to Denicke to Wycoff combination of some few years ago.

Third Sack.

Ed Crowley has been going well this season in practice and his work with the bat improves every day. This is Crowley's last year on the squad and indications are that he will top his exceptionally good record of previous seasons.

In Shorty Smith, Coach Clay has one of the best shortstops in the southern conference. Shorty is an exceptional base runner and is no less than a wizard when it comes to covering ground in the short field.

Doug Wycoff, the slugger of two years ago, who took the championship away from the University of Georgia by knocking a home run in the tenth inning at Spiller's, was again in a Tech uniform, getting a little workout along with Coach Clay's men the past week. Doug, however, does not intend to play ball this season.

Base sliding has been emphasized by Clay. "Kid" has had his squad doing a little of this every day and they are rapidly progressing in the dusty art.

The flingers looked good in the practice game Saturday afternoon. Dick Florrid, "Iron-Head" Gaston and Carney were looking the best and handling the ball as if they had been throwing it for several months. The Tech club is very fortunate in having so large a number of good pitchers this season and much will depend on them as the opening day of a hard schedule draws nearer and nearer.

Pete Fowler Joins Cubs' Mound Staff

Avalon, Santa Catalina Island, Calif., March 3.—(AP)—Heavy rain kept the Chicago Cubs indoors today at their spring training camp here and also put a damper on the intra-club baseball game which was to have been played this afternoon.

If skies clear tomorrow, the Cubs will get into action against the nine from the U. S. S. Tennessee. With a naval band and a free gate, it is expected that the two teams will have a big crowd of tourists for the meeting.

Pete Fowler, left-handed pitcher, purchased from Atlanta, reported to Pilot McCarthy. This gives the Cubs five southpaw twirlers, Weinert, Hansen, Jones, Nehf and Fowler. It is expected this list will be clipped to three.

274 Runners Await Race Start Today

Pyles' Los Angeles-New York Run Attracts Fast Men.

Los Angeles, Calif., March 3.—(AP) Two hundred and seventy-four pairs of hardened feet which their owners hope will carry them across the nation, were rested and massaged here tonight for the start tomorrow of the Los Angeles to New York foot race.

They will have nothing to do for the next two months or so but eat, sleep and run the approximately 3,000-mile jaunt.

The one who makes the best time will bank $25,000. The runnerup will take $10,000; third man, $5,000; fourth, $2,500, and the next six, $1,000 each.

Instructions.

Go as you please, but get there if possible, are the general instructions to entrants between controls, the main rule being that each must reach the night control by midnight. The next morning survivors will start together, each man's time being recorded for the final tally when the leaders hit New York.

The admitted speed merchant among the entrants is Nicholas Quamowahu, of the Hopi Indian tribe. He won the New York-Long Beach marathon last year.

The slowest man is said to be Arthur Newton, of Rhodesia, South Africa, to trek to Los Angeles for this event. With Newton the first 50 miles are the hardest; he does not get steam up until he has passed that distance. He broke the 100-mile running record in England last January.

Oldest Hoofer.

The oldest hoofer of the lot is Charley Hart, 63, another Britisher, who held the record that Newton smashed. Guisto Umek, of Trieste, Italy, and Philip Granville, Hamilton, Ontario, walking champion of Canada, are among the heel and toe experts.

Three Finlanders are outstanding contestants and Juri Lossman, of Esthonia, who finished second in the Olympic grind of 1920, and Harry Bramowitz, walker of the Bronx, N. Y., are expected to make a strong showing.

HAWK-EYE-ING SPORTS

BY DICK HAWKINS

Flinging Bee.

Rell Jackson Spiller will start his flinging bee at Ponce de Leon park about Monday morning. Under ordinary circumstances it might be called baseball practice, but this year it will be a flinging bee. It must needs be that, what with 19 pitchers on hand, including William Chenault Munday, Jr. All the other men who are supposed to be playing at third base, shortstop, second, first or in the garden will not be able to do anything but catch for the pitchers.

Rell Jackson believes in the law of averages. Like the young man who stood on the corner—that's the wrong story; but anyhow Rell Jackson believes in the law of averages and is confident that out of several dozen pitchers he can find one who will hurl and hurl for the old Crackers, come what may. What he is looking for is a pitcher who will die for the old team. Last year he had two or three of those but the trouble was they DID die and failed to fall over.

A glance at the other points on the field reveals little to whoop with joy about, but, on the other side, there is nothing to set up loud lamentations about. At third, Gilbert is far above the average. That position is taken care of if Walter comes through as everyone has reason to expect. At shortstop, Mills has many possibilities, though his unfortunate experience of last season left little to judge from. Cueto has passed his most useful stage and will be a weak link if he is used. Then, Corgan is coming from Brooklyn.

Around the keystone Old Man Brainard is an uncertain quantity. He is no longer young but has been a whiz bang in the past. There is always Uncle Bert, who is also past the age of sassafras but still able to make his head do what his failing legs will no longer perform. Johnny Jones, from Syracuse, is a younger man and plays at the keystone when asked to do so. He may get the assignment, at least until Brainard shows up.

Poole and McCrone will stage a scrap for the initial sack. There is some question as to the ability of either to swing the job like some of the others the Crackers have had in the past.

Outside the base lines there is a great mystery. Frankie Zoeller has not yet signed and Paul Strand is an unknown quantity. He is nearing the class of the has-beens and may have another year or two of Class A baseball in his system or he may not. Tremper is another uncertain quality and it is not certain that Tom Angley will not be used in the outfield.

In this case, however, Tom will have to double up on two jobs, for the only other catcher ready to report is Johnny Brock, and even Johnny can't do it all. It is probable that Billy

Mississippi Quintet Wins S.I.A.A. Title

Moccasins Bow to Choctaws in Final Game of Tourney, 44 to 40.

BY HORACE C. RENEGAR,
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 3.—(AP) A band of sturdy Choctaw braves from the campus of Mississippi College tonight scalped the University of Chattanooga's basketball stalwarts, 44 to 40, to win the championship of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic association.

The boys from Clinton, however, faced a serious bombardment of their basket before ascending the throne, the 'Noogans dropping goals from all angles to keep at the heels of their highly-favored foes.

Peeler, Branch and Lee, of the Choctaws, however, were not to be denied, this trio, one a forward, another the center, and the third a guard, locating the hoop frequently and managing to keep their quintet in the lead from the start.

Lee carried his battle down the court continually and slipped five goals through the loops in addition to keeping the ball out of danger most of the time. The shots the Moccasins did make were mostly of long-range caliber, Holland throwing no less than four baskets from the center of the court.

Hundreds of followers of the Chattanooga team kept up a constant din from the start of the game, their fervor reaching its height as the game neared an end and Lotspeich, center, found his "basket" eye again. In all, the 'Nooga center sank seven baskets.

In the playoff for third place, Birmingham-Southern defeated Louisiana Tech, 37 to 27.

33 Players to Report For Initial Practice

Gilbert and Zoeller Not Heard From as Opening of Spring Grind Starts on Local Lot.

BY BEN COTHRAN.

Business at Colonel Rell J. Spiller's place was brisk Saturday.

The store was being swept out and aired for activities which begin Monday morning at 11 o'clock when Bert Niehoff, manager of the Crackers, holds the first workout of the year. When everyone checks in there will be 33 ball players disporting themselves in various parts of the dell.

All of them, however, won't be in Monday. You should, by this time, know ball players. It'll be next Saturday before every Cracker is in town and getting bed and meals at Mr. Spiller's expense.

Saturday morning the fire in the stove at Rell's office burned briskly. "Silver Bill" Stickney and Ray Francis held forth in the outer office. Bill, Cracker road secretary, had just returned from Alabama where he spends the winter, looking not a day older. Bert Niehoff was in Auditor Frazer's office and from the remarks that came drifting out, Bert was learning something about keeping books.

Riddance.

Meantime Colonel Spiller was ridding himself of news hungry sports scriveners, giving out the revised Cracker roster which embodies 33 men who have been given contracts, and a scattering of amateurs and semi-pros desirous of working out with professionals.

During the morning it developed that Mr. Spiller has on his list enough pitchers to just about supply the southern league.

There are 18 flingers, nine of them port-siders. Out of this bunch, Niehoff is certain to cull three or four, left-handers. Give Bert that many southpaws, good ones, on his club, and he is perfectly satisfied.

Among the left-handers are listed Sherry Smith, Ray Francis and Leon Williams. Sherry Smith, though slightly aged, is a good pitcher as his record in the majors while with Cleveland, bears him out. Smith is at his home in Mansfield, Ga., and will motor in about Tuesday to begin work. Ray Francis was with the Crackers last season and traded at the end of the season to Boston. The deal fell through and now Ray is back with Atlanta. It was thought at first he would be used for trading purposes but he prevailed upon Mr. Spiller to keep him here. Saturday morning Ray announced to all present that he was in the best of shape and ready for the season. He looked it.

Right Handers.

Among the more outstanding right-handers—we say outstanding with knowledge gained from a perusal of the records—are Russell Pence, acquired during the winter from Dallas, Art Olson, Red Bates and Tom Rogers, left over from last season.

Brooklyn, with whom the Crackers were affiliated when Macon, was jointly purchased last fall, will come through with players for all positions. Two pitchers, Ray Moss and Leon Williams, will be left here when the Dodgers pass through on their way north.

Tom Angley and Johnny Brock are the only prospects in sight for catching right now. There's a semi-pro by the name of Miller who will be given a tryout. He may be needed. Frankie Zoeller, diminutive left fielder, hasn't signed his contract, nor has he written Mr. Spiller any insulting letters. Zoeller, in fact, hasn't written anything at all.

He probably will show up. Then again, he might not. That would leave Bert with Paul Strand, outfielder from Portland, and Ray Tremper, promised from Brooklyn. Billy Rhiel will be back this season if he doesn't make the grade with the Dodgers. But if Zoeller doesn't show up and Rhiel stays with Brooklyn, that leaves Bert with two outfielders, and anybody can tell you that a club needs three. Good ones.

Tom Angley, because of his heavy hitting proclivities, can be used in the outfield. He may do this, coming in once in a while to relieve Johnny Brock behind the plate.

Worry.

Then, too, there's cause for worry in the infield. Jim Poole and Stuffy McCrone will have to settle first base among themselves. At second the Crackers have Fred Brainard. But he won't be here until the middle of May. That leaves Johnny Jones, a shortstop from Syracuse, of the International league, who can also play second. Then, if necessary, Bert says he can probably make out for a few games.

Shortstop, at present, has three candidates in Manuel Cueto, of last season; Ollie Mills, purchased from Savannah, in the Southeastern, and Corgan, coming from Brooklyn. The latter has a very good record behind him and will be of aid to the Crackers.

Walter Gilbert is down on the books to play third, but he hasn't yet been heard from. Mr. Spiller is expecting him Monday, however.

That's the Cracker layout for 1928. It looks good—on paper. Paper work, however, doesn't win ball games. But you will probably see something better at the dell this season than a second division ball club.

Cracker List

Pitchers: Sherrod Smith, Art Olson, C. W. Blethen, Ray Francis, Frank Werre, Tom Rogers, Red Bates, Frank Chilton, R. Dudley, J. H. Adcock, Carl Spencer, Russell Pence, Bull Rauch, William Chenault Munday, Jr., Carl Nemitz, Ray Moss, Koupel, Leon Williams.

Catchers: Tom Angley, Johnny Brock, Miller.

First Base: Jim Poole, Stuffy McCrone.

Second Base: Fred Brainard, Johnny Jones.

Shortstop: Manuel Cueto, Ollie Mills, Corgan.

Third Base: Walter Gilbert.

DECATUR GIRLS WIN N. G. CAGE CHAMPIONSHIP

The girls' team of Decatur High school defeated Nelson High by one point, 20 to 19, Saturday night on the court of the Decatur school gym for the championship of the north Georgia girls' tournament, which began last Thursday.

It was a close, exciting battle throughout, with Decatur trailing until the final quarter. At the end of the first quarter Nelson was leading by 9 to 7. The half found Nelson on top, 16 to 12, and at the end of the third quarter it was Nelson, 16; Decatur, 14.

During the final period of play Decatur unleashed a whirlwind offensive that brought the girls into a tie and then one point in the lead, which was enough for victory and the championship.

Semifinals.

In the semifinals, played Saturday afternoon, Decatur defeated LaGrange by the same score in the championship game, 20 to 19. Nelson turned in a 19-to-10 win over the Duluth High school girls.

Eva Bradford, center on the Nelson team, was high scorer of the tournament, with 48 points, and was awarded a sweater. Evelyn Martin, forward on the Decatur squad, won second prize of two basketballs, scoring 47 points.

Ethel Faulkner was awarded a gold medal, being adjudged the best all-round player of the tournament.

The tournament began Thursday with 13 teams entered and was sponsored by the Decatur High school.

10 Games Booked For Mercer Bears

Macon, Ga., March 3.—(AP)—Ten games have been arranged for the Mercer baseball team's schedule, starting early next month, it was announced tonight, and negotiations are under way for return games with Georgia, Auburn and Fort Benning.

Practice will start Monday for the Bears.

The schedule to date:

April 6-7—Georgia, in Macon.
April 9-10—Oglethorpe, at Atlanta.
April 13-14—Tech, at Atlanta.
April 27-28—Oglethorpe, at Thomasville (Rose show feature).
May 21-22—Auburn, at Auburn.

Finals Postponed.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 3.—(AP)—Postponement of the final round of the spring golf tournament here because of the illness of Robert Harlow, one of the finalists, was announced today. Harlow was stricken with an attack of ptomaine poisoning after his match yesterday with E. E. Scofield. He was scheduled to meet W. F. McPhail, of Boston, in the final round today. The match will probably be played tomorrow afternoon, it was stated.

Lanier High Repeats In G. I. A. A. Tourney

Macon, Ga., March 3.—(AP)—Lanier High school, of Macon, won the G. I. I. A. basketball championship here tonight, defeating Savannah High by a score to 29 to 27.

Savannah was leading at the end of the first half by a score of 17 to 14.

More than 3,000 persons crowded into the municipal auditorium to witness the championship battle, many of them coming from Savannah and other cities.

Lanier began the scoring after the opening of the game, but throughout the first half neither team was more than 3 points ahead, Savannah having that advantage at the end of the half.

But the spectacular feature came in the last minutes of play, the score being tied and Savannah having the ball in Lanier's territory. A foul was called. Vernon Smith, of Lanier, missed a foul shot, but Dave Mountford rushed in and flipped the ball into the basket for 2 points.

Neither side was able to make any headway before the final whistle blew.

At the conclusion of the contest trophies were presented to the Lanier and Savannah teams.

Swimming and Cross-Country Records Broken in Meets Here

Records Fall As Tech Beats Y Tank Team

440 and Relay Marks Broken in Water Meet Here.

BY ROGER PAGE.

Two southern swimming records were broken Saturday night as Georgia Tech's tankmen outpointed the strong Knoxville Y. M. C. A. crew by 43 to 17 at the A. A. C. before a large audience.

After a bad start Captain "Red" Holleman, of the Jackets, finished in the 440-yard swim a whole lap ahead of any, making the distance in 5 minutes 35 seconds, clipping five seconds from the old record held by himself.

The relay record was also broken, the Tech team composed of Rahner, Holleman, Wardlaw and McKinstry making the 200 yards in 1 minute 44.2 seconds. This southern record was also held by Tech.

For the Knoxville crew, Captain Mitchell and Briscoe starred. Briscoe won first place in the 50-yard dash in fine style, finished second in the 100-yard dash and was on the relay team.

Summary.

Fifty-yard dash: First, Briscoe (K.); second, McKinstry (T.); third, Wardlaw (T.); time, 26 seconds.

Four hundred and forty yard, free style: First, Holleman (T.); second, Mitchell (K.); third, Chaffin (K.); time, 5:35 (new southern record).

One hundred yard breast stroke: First, Harris (T.); second, House (T.); third, Ogden (K.); time, 1:18 4-5.

One hundred yard free style: First, McKinstry (T.); second, Briscoe (K.); third, Wardlaw (T.); time, 59 seconds (tied southern record).

One hundred yard backstroke: First, Simpkins (T.); second, Hagerty (T.); third, Gugas (K.); time, 1:18 2-5.

Fancy diving: First, Harris (T.); second, Lewis (K.); third, Shekleford (T.).

Two hundred yard relay: First, Tech (Rahner, Holleman, Wardlaw and McKinstry); second, Knoxville Y. (Mitchell, Chaffin, Gaston and Briscoe); time, 1:44.2 (new southern record).

J. P. C. QUINT PLAYS GULF ON MONDAY

What gives every promise of combining all the thrills of a championship battle looms Monday night at the gym of the Jewish Progressive club when the five of that organization engages the Gulf Refining quint in a post season encounter. Just to add attractiveness to the bill the J. P. C. Reds, that organization that has caused such havoc in the prep ranks of Atlanta, will play a picked five the church league.

The very keen rivalry that exists between the J. P. C.'s and the Refining team argues for an exceedingly tough struggle. Both teams are understood to be in excellent shape and eager for the opening whistle.

Judging from the advance sale of tickets the attendance at this game may break all record at the club this senson.

S.S.A.A. Officials To Meet Tuesday

A confab of officials of the S. S. A. A. is to be held at the A. A. C. Tuesday evening, at which time plans for the coming baseball season will be discussed.

It is expected by President Pup Phillips and other officials of the association that an unusually large entry list will be turned in before the season gets under way. Westminster, Grace, Druid Hills, Gordon Street Presbyterian and quite a number of other strong amateur nines will be included in the three leagues that are contemplated by the association.

6-Day Bike Race To Start Tonight

New York, March 3.—(United News.)—The forty-fourth international six-day bicycle race will start in Madison Square Garden at 9 o'clock Sunday night with 15 teams entered.

The team of Reggie McNamara and Charlie Winter, of New York, is among the favorites. Paired with Fred Spencer, Winter won the last race.

Spencer will ride with Bobby Walthour, Jr., and this team also is picked to finish among the leaders.

THE STRANGE TALE OF FIVE CHIP SHOTS MADE IN 14 HOLES

BY WHITNER CARY.

Ever hear of any man, woman or child sinking five chip shots during 14 holes of play on the same afternoon? Probably you never have. Yet, according to unimpeachable evidence, this feat was performed just recently by T. T. Williams, of this city, over the Ansley Park golf course. Now go no with the story.

Mr. Williams, or "Tolley," as he is known to his hundreds of friends and countless golf opponents, is the same man who some five years ago electrified the golfing fraternity at East Lake and other bunkered sections of Atlanta by changing from a left to a right-hand style of play. It is said on good authority that this change was brought about through a most humiliating defeat at the hands of Tess Bradshaw, who will be remembered by the older inhabitants of this city as a golfer of considerable ability in the gay nineties.

Immediately following his massacre at the hands of Bradshaw, "Tolley" took a most solemn and awe inspiring vow that never again would he hit a golf ball from the port side.

Faithful.

That he kept this vow and that his game showed marked improvement is a matter of court record. But never in the wildest dreams of either himself or his luckless opponents did the sinking of five chip shots in one round form a part.

The miracle began at the fifth hole at Ansley Park. In company with Ben Jones and Ed. Ansley, "Tolley" had started out in a threesome that gave every indication of being a peaceful and tranquil affair. Then came the fifth hole. With the ball resting in the grass about 25 feet off the carpet, "Tolley" took his stance, lifted his eyes toward heaven and shot. The roar of anguish from his opponents told him all too well that the shot had found the can.

The sixth and seventh holes were played in orthodox fashion, but on reaching the eighth the gods of the lower regions again smiled upon "Tolley's" mashie and his chip from near the green wandered in the hole. By this time relations in the threesome were considerably strained, but not enough to prevent the start of the second round.

Dissatisfaction.

It would naturally seem that any man who had succeeded in canning two chip shots in one afternoon would be satisfied, but not Tolley. With the angry and envious glances of his two opponents forming a solemn background, he addressed his chip shot lying about 20 feet off the green at No. 1. A moment later his third miracle effort had gone home. Words fail to describe the scene.

With his two opponents in a highly nervous state, the match continued. Came the fifth hole again. Once more the trusty blade of "Tolley's" mashie hit the ball, once again the gods of the lower regions smiled and once again the peace and quiet of Ansley Park was rent wih the agonizing shrieks of those who have had the misfortune to see a chip shot made against them. The end was not yet in sight.

Again the eighth hole and for the second time that afternoon "Tolley" sank a chip on this hole. Let us mercifully draw the curtain on what followed. At last reports "Tolley" was able to be about, thereby proving that the sinking of five chip shots in one afternoon is either not a justifiable cause for murder by your opponents or that Ben Jones and Ed Ansley are two of the most tolerant golfers walking the course today.

Several Bulldog Grid Stars on Injured List

Week of Hard Scrimmages Finds Boys in Good Shape—Initial Baseball Game Three Weeks Off.

BY BOB SHERROD.

Athens, Ga., March 3.—The end of the fourth week of spring football in the Georgia Bulldog camp finds several stellar players on the injured list. Among these are Theo Frisbie and Cree Stelling, both letter men at the tackle position last year, and Dickens, powerful halfback on the 1927 freshman team and one of the most promising prospects for next fall's varsity. While the injuries of the two tackles are not of a serious nature, Dickens is suffering from a broken shoulder and has made his exit from the spring training camp for the remainder of the period.

Buzz Collins, fast second-string end of last year, is still out with his injured knee and may have played his last game of college football. It will be remembered that he was hurt in the Tulane game of 1927 and when he first attempted to play this spring the injured member tricked him again.

Boys Show Up Well.

The fourth week has seen three hard scrimmages take place on Sanford field, two of them with very satisfying results. Among those who have shown up to advantage, according to Coach Mehre, are: Fat Bryant and Maffett in the line, and Krank Dudley and Buster Cook in the backfield. Bobby Hooks, who has probably shown up better than any man on the field thus far, has been absent from practice for the last few days when he has been entered in the conference boxing tournament at Charlottesville as Georgia's light-heavyweight. Hooks has been the star of the Georgia mittmen this season, having won all of his bouts, some of them by knockouts. He is also a star member of the swimming team.

The spring football session will end on Friday, March 16, when the letter men and non-letter men will engage in a regular game. The game should prove rather interesting as there are several former reserves among the letter men who have shown much improvement. On the side of the wearers of the "G" will be seen Boland and Langford, centers; Jacobson and Haley, guards; Lautzenhiser, Stellings and Frisbie, tackles; Palmer, end; Johnson, quarterback; Hooks and Dudley, halfbacks; McCrary and Rothstein, fullbacks.

Opposing them will be the non-letter men, numbering among their ranks Hollis Morris, center; Bennett, Rasnake, Joselove, Ringel Hill and Whelchel, guards; Bryant and Huff, tackles; Martin, Nixon, Red Smith, McTigue, Mafett, ends; Paris, quarterback; Cook, Hill, Waugh, Myers, halfbacks; Jackson, Gerinew and Cox, fullbacks.

Martin, Jacobson and Johnson are playing baseball at present with Coach Dill White's clan.

BASEBALL SEASON OPENS SOON AT GEORGIA.

With only two weeks remaining before their first game, the Georgia baseball team is fast rounding into shape. The first battles of the season take place on March 19 and 20 when the Red and Black nine faces Ohio State in Athens in their annual series.

The squad has played several practice games between the remnants of last year's team and the newcomers. The fielding is as good as midseason but the batters are a little weak as yet. Coach White, however, is well pleased with his prospects for the coming season.

Leading Pitchers.

It seems just now that Lefty Stewart and Jack Waller, letter men for two years, will do most of the Bulldogs' pitching this season. Other moundsmen who have shown up well are Lefty Murdock, Jack Parks and Garland Davis.

Pat Keating, Skeet Johnson's understudy last year, is the most likely looking of the catchers. Contenders for the same position are Andy Kingery, Ray Edmundson, Henry Gorman and others.

Only one man is lost from last year's infield and this group seems to be intact. With Tom Nash at first, Rush Freeman at second, H. F. Johnson at third, and Glenn Chafin at shortstop, the Red and Black should be well fortified. Joe Martin has been showing up well at third.

The outfield is likewise well fixed. Three of the heaviest hitters in years are covering the outer gardens in the persons of Roy Jacobson, Chick Shiver and Flowers.

Greenleaf Proves A Sensation Here

Ralph Greenleaf is no small potato at the game of pocket billiards. You may put that in your pipe and smoke it. Friday he created a sensation with his exhibition game at York's billiard parlor and Saturday he prolonged the sensation by running 125 points in just four consecutive innings.

His runs averaged 31 balls and scored as follows, 22, 36, 28 and 39. He played both days before a packed house.

Chicago, March 3.—(United News) Ten of the best pocket billiard players in the world are holding daily practice here in preparation for the national championship pocket billiard tournament which opens Monday night.

The title play will continue until March 17. Entrants include: Frank Taberski, Schenectady, N. Y., titleholder; Erwin Rudolph, Chicago, and Ralph Greenleaf, New York, former national champions; Harry Wood, Duluth, northwest champion; Crafino Lauri, New York, New York state champion; Peter Durocher, Chicago; Andrew Ponzi, Philadelphia; Joseph Concannon, Washington; Pasquale Natalie, Baltimore; Harry Oswald, Pittsburgh.

Under new rules in force this year games will consist of 150 points each instead of the former limit of 125 points. Pockets have been widened one-half inch.

The increased width may result in a new high run record. The mark now is 101, held by Greenleaf.

Dates Fixed For Exhibition By Bob, Watts

Augusta, Birmingham, Columbia, Chattanooga, Atlanta on Program.

Although such matters as dates have not as yet been completed, it looks as if Augusta, Birmingham, Athens, Columbia, Albany, Chattanooga, Macon and Atlanta will be the cities in which Bobby Jones and Watts Gunn will play spring exhibition matches to help raise funds for the expense of the American Olympic team.

Some weeks ago Al Doonan, southeastern member of the National A. A. U., asked Bobby and Watts if they would consent to play a series of golf matches during the early spring to aid the association in raising money to defray the expenses of the American Olympic team in this year's invasion of Europe. Both Bobby and Watts consented provided the matches could be arranged in such a manner that not much time would be taken from the work of the former or the studies of the latter.

Immediately following the announcement that the two great players had consented to give their services in a series of matches, Mr. Doonan was deluged with requests from clubs in cities as far north as Rochester and as far south as New Orleans to have Bobby and Watts visit them.

As it was impossible to play more than a limited number of matches and these in cities easily reached from Atlanta, it was out of the question to accept a great many of the invitations.

After careful consideration it was decided to accept those from the cities above mentioned.

A schedule is now being worked out and at an early date will be announced. The first of the series of matches will be played the latter part of March. Others will follow through April and early May.

GWINNETT "V" WINS BASKET CHAMPIONSHIP

Athens, Ga., March 3.—(Special.)—A dynamic finish late in the fourth quarter gave Lawrenceville the northeast Georgia High school basketball championship here tonight when the Braselton quintet was defeated, 16 to 13.

With Braselton leading 13 to 10 at the end of the third quarter the Lawrenceville five braced for a final effort. Gheesling sank a snowbird to cut the lead to 1 point. Three minutes later and with three minutes to play Jackson, Lawrenceville running guard, looped a long one through the basket and gave Lawrenceville the lead by a one-point markin.

A minute before the gun Harris dropped in a long one to sew it up for the Lawrencevillians.

The first half was all Lawrenceville's, the Gwinnet county lads playing the larger Braselton team off its feet. It was six minutes before either team scored and 12 minutes before Braselton scored. The first half ended with Lawrenceville on top, 8 to 3.

The all-around play of Braselton for Braselton was one of the features of the game.

He was later selected by tournament officials as the player most valuable to his team.

Posey, of Lawrenceville, proved to be the premier standing guard of the tournament. Jackson and Harris contributed much to their team's victory, while Boggs, at center, was a headliner for Braselton.

In the battle for third place the two teams, which were eliminated in the semifinals, Eastonelle won over Mansfield, 41 to 23. Three players did practically all the scoring.

In the free throw contest the Colbert High aggregation won the team trophy, sinking 308 out of a possible 420. Colbert was followed by Eastonelle, Franklin County, Commerce and Arnoldsville. Keith Griffith, of Colbert, was the individual winner in the senior division, getting 49 out of 60. Vaughan, of Ila, was second with 48. Smith of Commerce and Matthews, of Eastonelle, tied for the junior free throw championship with 38 out of 45 each. They were followed by Adair, of Franklin County; Bird, of Ila, and Davis, of Dacula.

A.A.C. Reds Win Over All-Stars

In a game that was interesting from start to finish, the A. A. C. Reds soundly trounced the Epworth All-Stars last night at Wesley court before a fair-sized crowd. The final score was 42 to 26, the Reds having the long end of the score at practically all stages of the game after the first three minutes of play. The All-Stars soon were on the short end of a 27-18 score at the helf.

During the second half the All-Stars were held to four field goals, the Red guards being very stingy during this period. The Reds were slowed down somewhat during the second half due to numerous substitutions, negotiating the rim for only 15 points during this session.

The winners displayed a better team in every department of play and gave a fine exhibition of passing, shooting and guarding. The shooting of Strickler and Woodall and the work of Govan and Wilkes was outstanding for the Reds.

In a preliminary game the girls All-Stars of the Epworth association defeated the St. John's girls in a close game, 18 to 15. Miss Torres, Miss Busk and Miss Cawthorn starred for the winners while Miss S. Barker was oustanding for the losers.

Petrel Nine Is Hit Hard By Injuries

Massey and Taliaferro, Keystone Combination, Are Lost to Team.

BY FRED McEACHIN.

During the past week the Petrels of Oglethorpe have accomplished much on the baseball diamond.

Taking advantage of the spring weather Coach Anderson has had his candidates working out regularly each day on Hermance field. After nearly ten days of work the Petrel nine is beginning to round into shape in spite of the untimely blows which have hit camp since training got under way.

The biggest problems confronting Anderson at the present time are the vacancies around the keystone sack left vacant because of the injury of Taliaferro and the loss of Massey, who goes to the Columbus club of the Southeastern league.

Flashy.

Taliaferro and Massey formed a flashy combination at second and short last year and their absence will be keenly felt by the Petrels' infield machine. Taliaferro received a fractured shoulder in a spring football scrimmage last week and it is barely possible that he will be able to appear in the early season games.

First base is another cause of worry. With the absence of Rip Chestnut to hold down the bag the infield will be even more weakened. There are several likely candidates out to fill this berth, among the most prominent, Bass, Clement, Laird and Mims.

Batteries.

The battery combinations seem to be left intact with the exception of Linsey Vaughn, veteran hurler, who received a broken thumb on the gridiron during the spring scrimmages. He is expected to be able to join the squad before the season is half over. "Wild Boy" Thompson will hold down the receiving job in his capable manner. The moundsmen who will see much service are Sims, Hutson, Lawson and York.

The outfield seems to be very well filled with Captain Boswell and two sophomores, Asa Wall and Duke Turner. This trio is expected to come through with high batting averages. The hot corner will, in all probability, be held down by Amos Martin, a graduate of last year's freshman team.

FAMOUS PROS AT MIAMI FOR MEETING

Miami, Fla., March 3.—The cream of America's professional golfers are gathering here for the annual international four-ball team matches, which will be contested on two local course March 10 to 13, for a purse of $5,000. Sixteen combinations are being formed, and the field that will tee off next Saturday at the Miami Country club represents the pick of the world's linksmen. Play the first two days will be over the Miami C. C. course, while the last two days of competition will be over the Miami Municipal layout at the Country Club estates.

To date 13 teams have been formed, and two players are awaiting choice partners, they being the veteran Mike Brady, a national open championship finalist several years ago, and Joe Kirkwood, the Australian trick shot wizard. Their playing mates will be named in another day or two.

The international amtches have attracted the foremost professionals ever since their inception four years ago. It has developed into one of the most important tournaments on the entire golf calendar, and the increased purse this year makes it even more attractive than ever.

Heading the list of entries is the combination of Tommy Armour, national open king, and Bobby Cruickshank, the diminutive Scot, with the great record. These two won the major portion of the purse last season, defeating Walter Hagen and Jock Hutchison after a play-off in the finals. Hagen is the only noted player missing from the coming tournament, and he has persisted in his determination not to play golf during this winter season.

One of the favorite teams for the $1,500 that will go to the winning duo is composed of Gene Sarazen and Johnny Farrell, youthful New York luminaries. Sarazen won the national open in 1922, and twice had held the professional crown. He is the Nemesis of Hagen in match play, having defeated the Haig more often than any man in the world. Gene has been playing the best golf of any professional the current season, and has successfully defended two championships in Florida this winter. Farrell is recognized as the premier medal player of America, and holds the world's record for winning major tournaments in one season—with a string of eight in 1927.

Hahn Plans World Tour After Olympic Games

Falls City, Neb., March 3.—(AP)—Lloyd Hahn, middle distance ace who has announced his intention of quitting the track after the Olympics and retiring to a farm, may wind up his running career with a trip around the world starting at the finish line at Amsterdam next summer, he told friends on a recent visit to his home here.

Hahn's racing campaigns already have carried him across the United States many times and to England, Holland, New Zealand and Australia.

Hahn, who holds four world's records, is approaching 30, but believes he is in a better physical condition than a decade ago. He does not want to turn professional and is eager to begin the business of making money by assuming active management of his farms here.

Dodging Work Made Horse Great Jumper

New York, March 3.—(AP)—Billy Barton, American-bred contender in England's classic grand national steeplechase March 30, learned to jump some seven years ago by clearing high fences around the Aqueduct race track in efforts to run away from his trainers.

The horse became adept at clearing the high barriers to escape being compelled to run a mile or so with a jocked on his back. As a flat racer he was erratic and temperamental, but when finally sold for $2,000 to Howard Bruce, of Baltimore, and used as a hunting horse he steadied down and proved perfectly tractable as well as fast and skillful over the obstacles.

CHICK RIDLEY'S RINGER SCORE AT EAST LAKE TOPS ONE OF BOBBY'S

BY WHITNER CARY.

Many, many years ago those golfers in Atlanta whose joints are now creaking with age and whose eyesight is dimmed with the increasing years, used to marvel at the feats of Chick Ridley, Decatur's most distinguished disciple of the mashie on a golf course. It is not improbable that in many homes today in our fair city sedate grandfathers sit around the fireside and regale their grandchildren with bedtime stories of how the Pride of Decatur used to shine on a golf course.

Those Phillips twins of Ole Miss, Cary and Ary, responsible in the main for the Mississippi team's performance in the southern conference tournament last week, have done things like that before.

The general run of college athlete has performed brilliantly at some high school before he goes to college. The Phillips boys not only performed well in high school but they scintillated. It was on the Florence, Miss., High school team.

No we had never heard of Florence, either. Not until we began investigating the past record of the two Ole Miss stars. It develops that Florence, if you count the expected births for the next ten years, has a population of something like 200 souls. But back in 1924-25 the town put out a basketball team that only one or two in the country could beat.

The team played outdoors, on the ground. No hardwood floor, especially constructed for the best interests of basketball. Cary and Ary weren't quite as large then as they are now. Nor were any of the other members much larger. The team's uniform consisted of maroon jerseys, khaki pants and a baseball cap. Each man wore his cap in every game, bill to the back. Cary played his regular position of forward and Ary at guard. In the same way they played in those four tournament games here. Work of such caliber enabled the Florentines to defeat everything in Mississippi available in the way of opposition.

Then the boys were invited to the national high school tournament in 1924, held yearly at Chicago. They went. Upon reaching Chicago and the tournament, the boys kept on going until the semi-finals were reached. There they were defeated but were the talk of the town before they did go back to Florence to tell the home folks of the big city.

Came 1925 and another basketball season. The Florence team was intact, so far as having Cary and Ary was involved. So the team went to the tournament in 1925 and this time went as far as the final round, before being eliminated.

That year marked the end of high school days for the twins so they trekked up to Oxford to enter the university. They created quite a ripple during the freshman year. Last year they appeared on the varsity and then this year—but you know that already.

Ole Miss is coming back next year with practically the same team. One man, Captain Lila Lee, at center, will be gone. Coach Hazle has, however, another man to take care of that position. "Lila," with his extra height, gave the Mississippians a decided advantage at center, and he'll be missed. But Cary will be there to make those peculiar, twisting jumps of his in the air just in front of the basket. And when he makes that jump, it usually brings points.

Ary Phillips will be in his guard position to make those flying trips down the floor, pushing the ball ahead of him. During the tournament one of the war correspondents on the press bench stated while Ary was making a spectacular dash down the floor: "He must have that ball tied to his hand, because no one can take it away from him." Well, maybe he did. But he is a guard for any man's team.

It was a team with worlds of ability but possessing a greater quantity of fight that won the 1928 southern conference tournament. The Auburn game proved that. And Ole Miss will prove troublesome next year, very likely.

The name of Chick Ridley was once as feared in southern golfing circles as the name of Babe Ruth is today a nightmare to American league hurlers. The old cry in any Dixie tournament was, "Who is going to stop Ridley?"

That cry is now but an echo of an almost forgotten past. The days of his greatness are but a memory. His rotund form, once the feared sight of countless southern golfers, now ambles around the golf course in the fashion that behooves a man who has walked the heights, who has tasted often of the championship beverage and who is now content to let others show the way while he basks in the glory of yesteryear.

War Horse.

Yet the old war horse of a hundred tournaments and a thousand battles made one dying gasp just two weeks ago. Gathered his totterin, form together for one Herculean effort and by one gigantic and inspired endeavor wrote his name once more on Atlanta's golfing scroll of fame. How did he do it? By getting a two at number three at East Lake. You will immediately inquire, "What is so remarkable about that?"

Fellow citizens, this is what that two at number three meant. It meant that Chick Ridley's ringer score over the East Lake course computed since the mind of man runneth not to the contrary was exactly 46, that this figure topped the ringer score of Robert Tyre Jones by one shot and that until the said Robert Tyre Jones nicks one stroke off his card the name of Decatur's favorite golfing son will stand in ringer circles above that of the Iron Duke.

Up to two weeks ago, when Chick got his deuce at number three, he and Bobby were tied for the ringer honors at East Lake. But now the British open and American amateur champion is trailing the ancient Chick by one stroke. Whether he will take the lead during the coming months rests upon the knees of the golfing gods. But what is known is that Chick Ridley leads in ringer score the greatest golfer of the age.

Comparison.

A comparison of the cards shows that Chick has made three of the holes in one while the Iron Duke has but one of this variety to his credit. Bobby, however, gains a stroke on Chick at number seven where his deuce looms against Chick's three. Both have made number 11 in one stroke. Chick's other holes in one were the second and eighteenth.

The two cards follow:

										Total
Rid.	3	12	3	3	3	3	3	3	3	46
Jones	3	2	3	3	3	2	3	3	3	47

From this it can be seen that they are tied at 23 for the first nine, while their cards for the second side are identical save for the eighteenth hole.

Those knowing the hardships to be encountered on the East Lake course may well marvel at the sight of that 46 and 47.

It may be that the cryptic sentence, "Ridley wins," will never be flashed over a southern telegraph wire. It may be that the pride of Decatur will never even grace the charmed circle of the finalists. It may be that a cruel fate, slightly aided by Father Time, will prevent the name Ridley from being in that select group known as the semi-finalists. But whatever the future may hold cannot dim or tarnish the present glory of leading the world's greatest golfer in ringer score over his own course. That fact should be some consolation to old Chick when he reaches the age when he is preparing to hand in his passports to Charon and begins to take the final jaunt over that placid and supposedly gloomy stretch of water known as the River Styx.

Headquarters Wins Fort Bowling Title

The Fourth Corps Area headquarters team won the bowling championship of the 22nd infantry bowling league with a good number of pins ahead of any other competitor. Second place was won by company F, 22nd infantry with headquarters company 22nd infantry in third place. The corps area team wins the silver individual prizes donated by the athletic officer of the 22nd infantry.

Master Sergeant George Foster, of the D. E. M. L. recruiting detachment, won the individual trophy for the best three scores made from the time of the opening of the bowling season until the present time. There is no other bowler anywhere near Sergeant Foster, who outdistanced his field. The names of the members of the corps area team follow:

Warrant Officer Oscar A. Shubert (captain).
Colonel Paul Giddings.
Warrant Officer Claude Hinkley.
Master Sergeant George Foster.
Staff Sergeant William Connor.
Alternates.
Staff Sergeant George L. Scates.
Warrant Officer W. M. Handley.

Hyatt, Pitt Cage Star, Has Welch's Number

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 3.—(AP)—The university of Pittsburgh's athletic lucky number is 10, it would seem, for Gibby Welch, all-American back, carried that numeral on his jersey and now Charley Hyatt, about as great a sensation in basketball, sports a big number "10" on his shirt.

Welch kept Pitt in the running throughout a football season minus a defeat in regularly scheduled games. Hyatt, by his brilliant work at forward, is one of five reasons for the great record of the Panther basketball quintet which has defeated the best teams of the east and middle west.

Owens Sets New Mark To Cop Event

Furlow Places Second in Long Run; Many Prizes Are Awarded Runners.

BY ROGER JAGE.

The Georgia Tech cross country record fell Saturday afternoon when C. H. Owens, of Aldrich, Mo., broke the tape in 20 minutes 6 seconds, after he left on the long run of about three and a half miles to the water works and back, cutting off 23 seconds from the previous record.

Second place went to James Furlow, who was only a few yards behind the winner. Rock Rowe was third to return, and from then on the remaining three hundred men who participated filed in.

Owens, who is a junior co-op at Tech, allowed Rowe to lead all the way out to the water works, and on the home stretch he cut loose. Rowe was the expected winner by a large majority at Tech, but two dark horses outran him.

The record was held by Charles Woolfolk, a freshman of last year, who made the course in 20 minutes, 29 seconds. Rowe was second last year.

The winner was presented a large and beautifully decorated cake by Miss Jane Tway, who made the presentation in behalf of the Kosme society at Tech, sponsor of the race.

Adler's and Bond Brothers, clothiers, also presented ties, shirts, and wearing apparel to the first men to return after the long race. In addition to these 135 home-made cakes were awarded.

This is an annual race at Tech and it is a custom that all freshmen enter. Over four hundred men started on the run as the gun fired.

TARHEEL PUGS WIN S. C. RING CHAMPIONSHIP

Charlottesville, Va., March 3.—(AP) The University of North Carolina with a total of 20 1-2 points won the southern conference boxing championship here tonight. Virginia, defending champion, registered 15 1-2 points to come second, with Florida offering 13 points to win third place. Georgia and Virginia Poly trailed with 8 and 6 points, respectively.

Miller, of Florida, won the finals over Coley, of North Carolina, in the bantamweight class tonight after an extra round. The featherweight final was won by White, of North Carolina, over Jester, of Georgia, by a 3-round decision.

Captain Gilmer, of Virginia, after an extra round was returned winner over Spoto, of Florida, by decision.

Weed, of Virginia, won the welterweight final over Curry, of Georgia, by a 3-round decision. Captain Butler, of North Carolina, won the conference consolation over Hillsman, of Virginia Tech, by forfeit.

Brown, of North Carolina, defeated Query, of Virginia, in 3 rounds for the middleweight conference crown, while the conference consolation was taken by Captain Tucker, of Florida, from Pattie, of Virginia Tech, by the 3-round decision route.

Florida Camps.

New York, March 3.—(AP)—Four clubs of the International league will train in Florida this spring—Buffalo at Palmetto, Reading at Lakeland, Baltimore at Auburndale and Newark at St. Augustine.

New Orleans Boy To Fight Attaway Here

No More Draws for Ringside Club, Says Matchmaker Mayson.

Stiles Attaway, sensational young Atlanta middleweight, who has lost but one fight since he turned professional, has been signed for the main event of the Friday night card at the Ringside boxing arena, according to announcement Saturday by Matchmaker Jimmy Mayson.

Attaway will be matched with Pete Stimetti, New Orleans battler, who has a very impressive record in the ring, in the main bout of the next show. The New Orleans boy is said to be one fast and clever scrapper and should give the Gainesville scrapper plenty of trouble.

Training.

Attaway has been in training for some time and is reported to be in the best of shape. He will begin Monday to taper off for his fight with the New Orleans boy. Stimetti will arrive here some time during the first of the week to begin work for the bout.

In addition Mayson announced that the Ringside arena has hit upon a system of making draw verdicts impossible in matches on their programs. In case of a tie at the end of the scheduled number of rounds the fighters will be required to fight an extra round and if they break even in that stanza still another extra period will be required.

The novel arrangement should make it more interesting, both for the fighters and fans, Mayson believes.

MULLEN HOME, CONFIDENT OF TITLE BOUT

Chicago, March 3.—(AP)—Confident he will land the lightweight championship match between Sammy Mandell and Jimmy McLarnin, for a June or July date, Promoter Jim Mullen returned from New York today, though without McLarnin s signature.

"Pop Foster, manager of McLarnin, told me in New York," said Mullen, "that the only reason he had signed with Tex Rickard was that he did not know I alone had Mandell's contract.

Will Box in Chicago.

"McLarnin promised me that if Rickard is unable to sign Mandell for a title match for May 4 he will box Mandell in Chicago for me. I don't think Rickard has a chance of signing Mandell for the champion has already signed with me. I know he wants to defend his title in Chicago."

The lightweight title match is to be one of the headliners of the greatest summer boxing program Chicago has ever seen, Mullen said. Besides Mandell, he has Tony Canzoneri, the featherweight champion, and Mickey Walker, the middleweight champion, signed for Chicago matches. Joey Sangor, of Milwaukee, is the leading candidate to oppose Canzoneri, and Ace Hudkins is the prospective challenger for Walker.

Mullen has other strings to his bow in the lightweight field. Billy Petrolle, the Fargo Express, with a tremendous following in the northwest, has been signed, if McLarnin passes up his shot at the leightweight crown. Petrolle and the champion fought in an overweight match last year, but Mandell rallied and carried off the decision.

Mullen has also signed Freddy Mueller, a Buffalo, N. Y., lightweight.

M'LARNIN OFFERED $17,500 FOR FIGHT.

Detroit, March 3.—(AP)—Olympia arena has offered $17,500 to Jimmy McLarnin for a bout with the winner of the Bruce Flowers and "Spug" Meyers match scheduled for next week.

McLarnin recently scored a knockout over Sid Terris, lightweight contender, in the first round of their bout at Madison Square Garden. McLarnin has not yet made his reply to the Olympia promoters for the bout, which is proposed for some time in April.

Amateur League For Vadosta

Valdosta, Ga., February 25.—The spring meeting of the amateur baseball league will be held in the next few days, according to a statement from Archie Livingston, of Madison, Fla., the president.

This league is composed of from six to eight north Florida and south Georgia towns, furnishing baseball for the fans during the summer without going into financial breakers by trying to maintain paid teams. The league players are home products, and they get no pay. They are mostly high school and college boys and their experience in the league develops them into baseball players of some ability. At the end of the season when all expenses have been paid if there s money left it is divided equally between the players.

The league schedule does not begin until after June 1 because of the closing of schools and colleges but for the remainder of the summer they play at least three games every week in each of the league towns. The members of the league include Valdosta, Quitman and Thomasville, in Georgia, and Madison, Perry and Monticello, in Florida, with two others towns to be selected.

Georgia Looked On as Tough Foe Of Yale in 1928

New Haven, Conn., March 3.—(AP)—The Tad Jones brand of football will be played by Yale next fall, but it will not be super-conservative, Marvin A. Stevens, newly chosen head coach, said today in his first formal outline of his plans as successor to Tad Jones.

The new coach defended the Jones football policy of conservatism, said the present game is "all right," has nothing wrong in it, and predicted that Yale will have a "tough time, physically and psychologically" next fall.

"Next fall the Yale team will play the game as Jones taught it," said Mr. Stevens. "The teams which are expected to give Yale the hardest tussles are Georgia, Army, Dartmouth, Princeton and Harvard, because each will come 'set' to win. For this reason I expect it will be hard for Yale to win all its games. I rather think Yale faces as hard a task as any football team in the country."

JACK SHARKEY WORKS HARD FOR RISKO GO

New York, March 3.—(United News.)—Jack Sharkey, of Boston, will make his second attempt of the winter to fight himself back into the front rank of the heavyweight contenders when he meets Johnny Risko, of Cleveland, in a 15-round bout in Madison Square Garden, March 12.

Headed for a bout with Gene Tunney last summer, Sharkey temporarily passed out of the heavyweight picture amid cries of "foul" in the seventh round of his fight with Jack Dempsey, at Yankee stadium.

After a six months' layoff, Sharkey returned to competition against Tom Heeney in the first heavyweight elimination bout of the winter. After ten rounds of slovenly fighting, Sharkey was awarded a draw when many critics thought he lost.

Working Hard.

Realizing his mistakes in training for Heeney, Sharkey is working for Risko with the same enthusiasm as he showed in conditioning for Harry Wills, Mike McTigue, Jim Maloney and Dempsey.

This will be the second bout between Sharkey and Risko. Sharkey took a ten-round decision from the Clevelander in Boston two years ago.

Never a serious heavyweight contender, Risko is getting his first chance at the big money. In his last appearance in New York Risko defeated Paolino. He holds victories over Jack Delaney, Paul Berlenbach and Joe Sekyra, Dayton, Ohio, light-heavyweight, and lost a close decision to Tom Heeney in Detroit.

The New York state athletic commission today ruled that Sharkey and Risko must complete their training in the vicinity of New York city. Chairman James A. Farley advised Secretary Bert Stand to advise them to arrive here not later than Wednesday. Sharkey is down to 193 pounds and plans to enter the ring about a pound lighter.

T. CANZONERI WILL DEFEND TITLE IN N. O.

New Orleans, March 3.—(AP)—Tony Canzoneri, who recently defeated Benny Bass for the world's featherweight championship, will defend his title here April 16 against an opponent yet to be selected, Frank Edwards, local boxing promotor, announced today. Edwards said he arranged for the match by telephone to New York with Sammy Goldman, Canzoneri's manager.

Edwards said no restrictions were placed on him in selecting Canzoneri's opponent, other than Ignacio Fernandez, Filipino fighter, who holds a tentative agreement for a bout with the champion to be staged in Chicago.

Canzoneri's appearance here will be his first as a professional. He was born and reared in New Orleans, once serving as a bootblack. He moved to Brooklyn, where he now lives, with his parents, several years ago.

Van Ryn Loses In Tourney Upset

Ithaca, N. Y., March 3.—(AP)—Julius Selligson, of Lehigh, sprang an upset today by defeating John Van Ryn, Princeton star and sixth on the national ranking list, in the final match of Cornell university's indoor intercollegiate tennis tournament. The scores were 6-0, 8-6, 6-8, 6-4. The victory of Selligson, who is nineteenth in the national ranking, gave him possession of the William A. Larned cup, the singles trophy at stake in the two-day tournament.

John Van Ryn and Kenneth Appel, of Princeton, intercollegiate outdoor champions, defeated John Whitbeck and Malcolm Hill, of Harvard, in the doubles final, 6-2, 6-2, 6-1.

THE STRANGLER STRANGLING

Of course, boys and girls, you might have a nightmare something on this order, but it will never actually happen to you unless you become a wrestler and get a match with the loving sort of man pictured above, who is Ed (Strangler) Lewis, and, according to reliable reports, world's heavyweight wrestling champion. Tuesday night Mr. Lewis will disport himself in an Atlanta ring and the disporting will be done with Paul Jones, Atlanta favorite, as a playmate. Paul is well liked by Atlanta's wrestling-loving citizenry, and is a good opponent for Lewis. John Contos says that if Lewis doesn't apply his head-loek quickly and effe ctively, then Jones is liable to be the next world's wrestling champion. Well, all right then, if it's that kind of a match.

COWBOY KID, AND MILLER MIX MONDAY

Having two draws and three decisions to his credit in previous meetings, Cowboy Kid, local negro holder of the southern featherweight title, will again mix blows with Kid Miller, the sixth of the series at the colored Elks Rest, Monday evening.

The two have met on five occasions and on all were fast with a bitterly fought struggle taking place. Miller has battled Happy Hunter, King Soloman, Tiger King and Alabama Kid, losing only the scuffle with Happy Hunter.

Herbert Moore and Charley King have finished training, eager to engage each other in the main bout of the show.

Happy Hunter beat King on a close decision while he has won over King Soloman, Tiger King, Alamaba Kid and others.

Moore has engaged in quite a number of sessions, winning over Battling Moon, Cliff Jones, Willie Sims, King Soloman, Battling Mims, Billy Hooper, Happy Hunter, with only Moon, Hooper and Hunter barely able to win a decision. Moore was a sparring partner of the late Tiger Flowers.

Two other fast prelims are on the show. Gene Thomas and Johnnie Henton mixing and Paul Williams meeting Lightning Howard. A battle royal is planned and Hooper is trying to secure a boy from the Atlanta university to meet Battling Henry.

Indoor Sport Card Closes at Pennsy

Philadelphia, March 3.—With the exception of intercollegiate championship meets in wrestling, boxing, fencing, swimming and gymnastics, Pennsylvania will conclude its indoor sports program during the coming week.

The basketball team, one of the real surprises of the season, will conclude its campaign with two games during the week. Yale will be met in a return engagement in New Haven on Wednesday and Princeton will oppose Captain Connell and his teammates in the Palestra on Saturday night.

Indications point to the Palestra being filled to its capacity when the Tigers travel to this city. Mid-winter class reunions will be held during the day with the basketball game in the evening the main attraction,. Princeton students and alumni have taken a huge block of tickets to cheer their favorites.

In the first meeting between the two teams Princeton led at the half 12 to 4. It looked like a rout of Captain Connell and his teammates. In the second half Pennsylvania came through with a rush to win 26 to 23 in one of the most exciting games of the season.

Schaaf, who will probably break the modern scoring record in the Intercollegiate league, was the only veteran on the team at the start of the season and hopes for a successful season were not bright. But Eddie McNichol and his assistant, Lon Jourdet, worked out a combination of substitutes and new men that have proved the surprise of the east.

At the same time the cagemen are winding up their season the other teams will be finishing theirs. The fencers meet Princeton and Hamilton in a triangular meet at Tigertown, the boxers, freshmen and varsity, engage Yale at New Haven, the wrestlers tussle with Lehigh at home, the swimmers match their skill against Columbia at home and the gymnasts battle the middies at home.

The SPORTLIGHT by Grantland Rice

THE END OF A RUT.

The lightweight parade has been one of the features of pugilism.

It has known such fighters as McAuliffe, Lavigne, Joe Gans, Nelson, Owen Moran, Wolgast, Welsh and Leonard.

But it dived into a miry rut when Leonard retired. Through a series of mysterious whirls the so-called championship finally came to Sammy Mandell, who promptly began practicing quick starts for the storm cellar. In place of looking for the best challengers in sight and proving his place, as well as earning big money. Mandell made a joke out of the class that had known some of the featured names of boxing.

Mandell by now may be a pretty good fighter or he may be a dud. Nobody knows. He has been about as active as a swamp stump. But if he can get safely by one Jimmy McLarnin he will prove at least that he isn't a poke. It has taken McLarnin to bring back new interest in one of the greatest of all divisions. He can box, and he can hit. There hasn't been a good lightweight championship party in four or five years. There should be another oldtime affair this spring when the slashing McLarnin piles into Mandell.

THE ALTITUDE RULER.

There may be some doubt as to whether Nurmi or Peltzer or Hahn or Conger is the best middle-distance runner—not forgetting Douglas Lowe—but there isn't any doubt as to where Sabin Carr, the Yale vaulter, belongs.

When one considers the number of great pole vaulters who have been shooting at 14 feet year after year, his last mark of 14 feet 1 inch puts him where some sprinter will be who is fast enough to clip off the hundred in 9 2-5. It might be interesting some day to look and see how high 14 feet 1 inch happens to be as an altitude mark.

Having done this, consider what it means to lift and hurl the body that far into the atmosphere, even with the aid of a pole.

Carr threw his body several inches above the crossbar when he did 14-1, which is proof enough that he isn't yet through climbing into the air for another record or two.

NO COMEBACK.

In a game last season Pittsburgh players began riding Dazzy Vance. They kept up the chorus for two or three innings. Finally Vance became a trifle upset over the chatter, and when the next inning opened he fanned the next three up on about twelve pitched balls.

"How," remarked Mr. Vance, as he walked past the Pirate bench, "do you like those bird shot I'm throwing at you?"

This closed out the argument for the day. No one could think up a satisfactory answer.

SOME ONE TO FIGURE ON.

Judging from the way George Voight has been stepping along in winter golf, there will be a batch of trouble for a number of amateurs at Braeburn in the next championship. The Washington player has moved along in a steady groove between 67 and 71, and this is fast enough to make even a Bobby Jones call on all the guns he can carry.

Voight is a fine iron player, one of the finest in the amateur field, and this is always the big test of class. As Jess Sweetser also hopes to return to the fold this summer, the next field should be the strongest in many years, especially with such young stars as Finlay, Dunlap, Homans and others getting better and better in the grip of experience under fire

BY WAY OF REVISION.

In the spring the gallant horseman rides behind the baying hounds;
In the spring the duffer's fancy sadly turns to "outer bounds."

In the spring a burnished crimson comes upon the pennant dope,
In the spring the anguished duffer starts again to curse and grope.

In the spring the flaming blossoms light again the newborn land;
In the spring two million duffers start for heel prints in the sand.

"Babe Ruth off ten pounds from last spring." When you get sixty home runs out of your system the displacement is bound to be somewhat affected.

Beginning on Wednesday Next A Cracker for You Each Day

Beginning Wednesday morning, the sports department of The Constitution will offer the public a Cracker a day for its daily diet.

The offer does not sound particularly generous to the gastronomic mastodon who chooses his crackers by the box and his milk by the bucket. But the Crackers to be offered by The Constitution are not of the soda type.

They are Rell Jackson Spiller's Crackers and the purpose of the offering is to acquaint the fans with the family history and prison record of all the little Crackers who will be seen in action at Spiller's this year.

Each day the picture of a member of the Cracker staff will be printed and with it will be found a baseball history of the player. Ben Cothran, of The Constitution staff, will feed you the Crackers.

Y BASEBALL ASSOCIATION MEETING SET

The echo of rawhide against hickory will supplant the thud of inflated ball on hardwood floor with members of the Y-Church Athletic association and to aid this change a meeting of managers of baseball teams will be held at the Y. Tuesday, 7 o'clock.

Four leagues will be sponsored again this season and indications are that these leagues will be filled long before the opening dates.

Churches that will sponsor teams are asked to send representatives to this meeting to secure all information regarding entrance.

Umpires will be needed to work in these leagues and are invited to attend this meeting also, so that they may be listed and assigned.

This association set a precedent last year as several of the teams cleared money on the association series, an annual event.

At the last meeting it was voted to raise the fee accompanying a protest, which will tend to minimize minor arguments.

Several new teams have been added to the association's roster since the first meeting and the vacancies are fast being filled in all the leagues making prompt action on the part of the late comers imperative.

Florida's Baseball Squad Uses Very Little of Tobacco

University of Florida, Gainesville, March 3.—Whether or not the Florida University baseball club wins the southern conference championship, it remains, nevertheless, that Joe Bedenk's 1928 edition of Gators is a "model club."

Of a squad of 25 men, 14 do not smoke cigars or cigarettes at all. Five others are very moderate users of tobacco, and the other six may be classed as regular smokers, when not in training.

It is not believed any college aggregation in the country can match Florida's record in the matter of smoking, for the habit is a great one among young men today. The Gators made a great start in baseball last week by winning their first two games, and before the season is over, Florida's playing record, too, should be one of which to be proud.

Girls' Volleyball Loop Will Be Reorganized

The girls' division of the Y-Church Athletic association will meet at the Y. M. C. A. Monday evening at 6.30 o'clock to reorganize the volley ball league for the coming season.

Only four teams composed this league last year but the interest shown before the season closed proved its popularity and enough applications to assure an eight-club league have been received.

The success of the basketball league has been beyond expectations of the association's organizers.

Teams sponsored by churches wishing to enter this league should have a representative at the meeting and if 12 clubs enter two leagues will be formed.

Last season through the association ticket sales plan all teams were able to make their expenses for the season and with the increased number of teams for the coming season all clubs should be able to do even better.

Finger Injury May Keep Miss Ryan Off Court

Monte Carlo, March 3.—(AP)—Elizabeth Ryan, veteran California star, has suffered a badly smashed finger on her racquet hand and may never play tennis again. Surgeons now are deliberating whether the finger will have to be amputated.

Miss Ryan, who has been sweeping all Riviera tournaments this year, suffered the injury when her hand was caught in a closing door of a railway compartment. The finger was mashed to the bone. The Californian, as a result, was forced to withdraw from further matches at Monte Carlo as well as those at Menton next week.

Except for 1925-26, when she returned to competition in the United States, Miss Ryan has made her home and played virtually all her tennis abroad for 15 years. In both of those years the California chop-stroke artist was ranked No. 2 on the American women's list, in 1925 below Miss Wills and 1926 under Mrs. Molla B. Mallory, who defeated Miss Ryan in a desperately fought final-round match for the national championship at Forest Hills.

Miss Ryan is the only woman player in the world who has twice defeated Helen Wills since the Berkeley girl gained championship heights. Miss Ryan accompanied the feat in the Seabright, N. J., invitation tournaments of 1925 and 1926.

Miss Ryan helped the United States win the Wightman cup in the international women's team match with England at Wimbledon in 1926.

Since first making her appearance in European tournaments in 1913, abroad, including the women's singles crown at Wimbledon in 1921. She shared in winning the Wimbledon women's doubles title eight times, on six occasions with Suzanne Lenglen as her partner.

BIG LEAGUE TEAMS CLASH WEDNESDAY

New York, March 3.—(United News.)—Rounding into playing form after two weeks of spring training, the major league baseball clubs will play their first inter-league exhibition games this coming week.

Several clubs divided their squads for regular-yannigan games today but the first exhibition games will not be played until Wednesday.

The Philadelphia Athletics and Phillies will meet at Fort Myers, Fla., and the Boston Red Sox and the St. Louis Cardinals will clash at Bradenton, Fla., on Wednesday.

Exhibition games are scheduled from March 7 straight through until the season opens, April 11.

The week's exhibition schedule includes:

Wednesday.

Red Sox vs. Cardinals at Bradenton, Fla.

Athletics vs. Phillies at Fort Meyers, Fla.

Thursday.

Senators vs. Cardinals at Avon Park, Fla.

Athletics vs. Baltimore at Fort Myers, Fla.

Red Sox vs. Phillies at Winter Haven, Fla.

Friday.

White Sox vs. Shreveport at Shreveport, La.

Athletics vs. Cardinals at Fort Myers, Fla.

Red Sox vs. Braves, at Bradenton, Fla.

Saturday.

White Sox vs. Shreveport at Shreveport, La.

Browns vs. Reds, at West Palm Beach, Fla.

Indians vs. New Orleans at New Orleans.

Tigers vs. Minneapolis at San Antonio, Texas.

Senators vs. Braves at Tampa, Fla.

Athletics vs. Phillies at Winter Haven, Fla.

STATE BASKET TOURNAMENT ON THIS WEEK

Athens, Ga., March 3.—(Special.)—The third annual Georgia State High School basketball tournament will be held in Athens the last three days of this week, March 8, 9 and 10, according to Dr. J. S. Stewart, professor of secondary education at the University of Georgia.

Winners in the 12 high school district tournaments will participate in the state meet and the winner will represent Georgia in the national tournament which will be held in Chicago. Vienna High school, winner in last year's state tournament, went to the quarter finals at Chicago in 1927.

The 12 participants in the state meet will be guests of the University of Georgia Athletic Association and will be housed and fed in local hotels during their Athens sojourn.

Tech High, of Atlanta, won the first Georgia tournament, held in 1926. Vienna was that year's runner-up. Vienna won the tourney last year and Athens was runnerup.

All district winners are not yet known as some sections only finished their tournaments Saturday night. Pairings for the state meet will take place in Dr. Stewart's office early this week.

Some of the teams which have won their district tournaments are: Vienna, University School for Boys, Athens, Winder and LaGrange.

Hutchison and Smith Win Four-Ball Match

Nassau, New Providence, Bahamas, March 3.—(AP)—Jock Hutchison, spectacular Scot from Chicago, and Macdonald Smith, champion American money golfer for the present season, defeated Gene Sarazen, former national open champion, and Johnny Farrell, 1927 low average scorer among American golfers, here today in an exhibition four-ball match.

The winners turned in a best ball of 63 over the difficult Shore course.

The match was an eyeopener for the open championship of the Bahamas tournament, which will be played next week.

Kimmick Is Bought By Mobile Bears

Mobile, Ala., March 3.—(AP)—Walter Kimmick, an outfielder, has been purchased by the Mobile team of the Southern association, according to announcement of President Bill Douglas of the local organization. Last year with Seattle, Kimmick hit .336.

Meets Lewis Here Tuesday In Title Go

Texan Will Rely on Deadly Hook Scissors in Match With Champ.

Free Tickets

Twenty-five Atlantans will receive passes to the Ed "Strangler" Lewis-Paul Jones bout Monday, according to announcement yesterday by Matchmaker John Contos.

At 12:15 o'clock Monday afternoon Contos will stand on top of the Piedmont hotel and throw circulars advertising the match down into Peachtree street. Among the circulars will be 25 passes to the championship wrestling match at the city auditorium Tuesday night.

Wrestling history is replete with stories of tricky holds and ingenious grips, which have brought fame and fortune to many mat artists, but it is doubtful whether any grappler's speciality has been as much discussed as the famous headlock Ed "Strangler" Lewis will undoubtedly employ in his championship match here Tuesday night with Paul Jones at the city auditorium.

Lewis' prowess with the crashing, crushing headlock leverage has twice carried him to world's championship heights in the catch-as-catch-can sport and only a few weeks ago Lewis demonstrated that he is not solely dependent on the headlock by defeating Joe Stecher for the world's title, without so much as using his headlock.

The "Stranger" did use a few side headlocks in his successful efforts to personally acquaint Stecher with defeat, but there is all of the difference in the world between a side headlock and the one that has made Lewis famous throughout the world.

Unequaled.

There has never been a wrestler who could match Lewis' strength and skill in the use of the headlock hold in which he specializes. Billy Sandow, manager of the champion, knew something about physiology and the construction of the nerve forces of the human body, when he taught Lewis how to apply this paralyzing grip, for Sandow knows that a tight grip upon a man's chin, or around the side of his jaw produces the same effect that a blow on the jaw has upon a fighter.

The fighter is quickly knocked out by the blow, but the headlock, though longer in taking effect, is just as deadly.

Matchmaker Contos is freely predicting that Lewis' appearance here Tuesday night, with his valuable championship belt at stake, will set a new wrestling attendance record and Contos sticks to that prediction, despite the fact that a couple of years ago a Londos-Stecher match at the auditorium drew a gate of $9,000.

Selection.

Jones was selected as Lewis' opponent for the match here, because of the fact that he has not been defeated in two seasons of wrestling in Atlanta and because Contos believes that a young man of Jones' speed, strength and skill stands the best chance against the headlock expert.

The youthful Texan is speedy enough to get away from Lewis, when such tactics are essential to possible success and then there is the added fact that Jones has what wrestlers and promoters throughout the country readily admit is the best hook scissors hold in the game.

Even Lewis himself has declared that Jones' hooks scissors hold is more dangerous than Stecher's and hence he will be on guard against Jones' scissors here Tuesday night.

Tickets for the championship show, the first bona fide title wrestling match that Atlanta has known, have been placed on sale at the Piedmont Hatters and in addition may be secured from Contos at the Piedmont hotel.

RICKARD GETS POLO GROUND FOR HIS SHOWS

New York, March 3.—(United News.)—Tex Rickard announced today that he had agreed to terms with President Charles A. Stoneham of the New York Giants, on the use of the Polo Grounds for outdoor boxing bouts this summer. The contracts will be signed Monday or Tuesday, Rickard said.

"I plan to hold my boxing shows outdoors this summer," Rickard said, "and will need both the Yankee stadium and the Polo Grounds."

Rickard already has Yankee stadium leased for the summer and the acquisition of the Polo Grounds gives him a monopoly on New York's two big outdoor arenas.

Humbert J. Fugazy, Rickard's rival, has Ebbets field in Brooklyn under lease for boxing activities and plans several important bouts there, including a return match between Paolino and George Godfrey.

Handy Mandy Big Favorite in 'Cap

San Diego, Cal., March 3.—(AP)—Two more horses were added to the list of likely starters in the Coffroth handicap at Tijuana March 28 on the ground with the arrival here today of Handy Mandy and Port Hole, racing horses from the W. T. Waggoner stable of Arlington, Texas.

Handy Mandy, A Latonia derby winner who set a new American record for the mile and a half, is expected by horsemen to be a keen contender for the Coffroth, which will be worth more than $100,000 to the winner.

Among other horses expected to be leading candidates for the purse are Justice F, winner of the New Orleans handicap, and the present winter book favorite at odds of 5 to 2; Carlaris, 1926 victor in the Coffroth which has been rounding into form, and Crystal Pennant, which has turned in some splendid performances this winter at Tijuana.

Among the mystery entries are two English importations of the Mira Monte stock farm, Masked Marvel II and Sun God II.

Out of the West.

Several months ago a young Lochinvar—who might be termed a young "headlockinvar"—came out of the west and took the mat fans of Atlanta by storm. His name is John Paul Jones and now for the first time they are very likely to see him beaten in an Atlanta ring. For Tuesday night he meets Ed (Strangler) Lewis, the undisputed champion of wrestling, for the championship now held by Mr. Fredericks—that being the real name of the champ.

John Andro Contovounesios, more commonly known as John Contos, has succeeded in getting the Strangler to come here such a short time after his victory only through the exertion of much persuasion and a promise of much, much money.

There is little chance that Mr. Jones can make much headway in taking the crown from the nearly bald head of Mr. Lewis, but those who have seen Paul when he was trying and when he was not, are convinced that Mr. Lewis is not set for a pushover Tuesday. It should be an interesting match.

Kayo Dugan Is Successful Ga. Planter

Owns Large Estate Near Kingston, Ga., Where He Is Making Success.

Kingston, Ga., March 3.—A young giant in size, standing against a background of north Georgia mountains, broad acres and good breeding, is James Preston Saylor, known in first circles as K. O. Billy Dugan, a member of an old Georgia family who gives very promising evidence of going a long way up the pugilistic ladder.

Three generations of Georgians have had the pleasure of visiting Barnsley's Garden, the home of Preston Saylor, which was started by Godfrey Barnsley, the young man's great-grandfather.

Mr. Barnsley was an Englishman who came to Savannah and entered business. He was the first man to ship cotton across the Atlantic ocean.

Desiring to establish an estate, such as are owned by gentlemen in his own country, Mr. Barnsley early in the last century purchased from the Cherokee Indians 5,000 acres of land in what is now Bartow county, 6 miles from Kingston and the same distance from Adairsville. Here he built his mansion of brick made by his own slaves, filled it with mahogany furniture that would make collectors of today green with envy, pictures and objects of art from Europe and the Orient. He even planned a lighting plant, using fat pine to generate gas, and brought iron pipes for the purpose, also a fountain fed from a large tank on the tower.

Horticulturist.

But it was as a horticulturist that Mr. Barnsley achieved greatest renown. His plantation, cleared out of the virgin forest, and gardens would nowadays be called a private experiment station. In the Italian garden in front of the house, where low-clipped boxwood outlines the beds, were planted rare shrubs and flowers and at intersections of the curved driveways were planted evergreens and other trees imported from every continent on the globe, many of them still flourishing. In his greenhouse bloomed flowers strange to Georgia.

The civil war called a halt to the development of this large plantation. Mr. Barnsley's sons entered the Confederate army, and after the surrender one went to South America, one to Africa and one to Australia. A daughter became Lady Dawson, wife of Lord Dawson, and lived in England. Another, Julia, married Captain Baltzelle, of Tennessee, and later Mr. Schwartz, of New Orleans. The property now belongs to her daughter, Mrs. Adelaide Baltzelle Saylor, her children and grandson, making five generations to call this home.

At present the plantation contains 3,000 acres, much of it planted in cotton and corn, but a New York firm is now operating a beauxite mine, which it estimates, together with the land, to be worth a quarter of a million dollars. Other deposits of bauxite have been found on the place which, according to experts, are worth a million more.

Amusing.

With this background, it is amusing to hear young Saylor spoken of as "dropping the plow handles to don the boxing gloves." His time since leaving school has been given to the management of the plantation, in which he has been quite successful, not only as a practical farmer, but as a business man.

Preston Saylor's splendid physique is another inheritance. The Barnsley men were large; his grandfather, Captain Baltzelle, was a notably tall, strong man, and his father, the late B. F. A. Saylor, was a college athlete as well as a scientist.

Young Saylor's interest in boxing began when he was a pupil of the Adairsville High school. His enthusiasm was further fired by newspaper stories of great boxing contests, so that, when grown, he decided to test his strength in the ring as a professonal, which would interfere but little with his life business of land owner.

An enthusiast in whatever he undertakes, K. O. Billy Dugan brings to this sport the same spirit he does to planting and marketing hundreds of bales of cotton; and boxes with science and pep enough to furnish fight fans their fill of entertainment.

Difference.

While in times past professional pugilists came from the lower walks of life, today is different. Many young men from the upper classes, college students, club members and others have taken up the sport professionally because of its science, skill, excitement, as well as gate receipts.

In this James Preston Saylor has had his share of success. He has won 13 out of 15 pugilistic encounters he has entered within the past few months. Saylor's friends are confident they will one day see him among the world's heavyweight champions.

Schmandt Is Sold To Savannah Club

Memphis, Tenn., March 3.—(AP)—Ray Schmandt, infielder, has been sold by the Memphis club of the Southern association to Savannah of the Southeastern league, it was announced tonight. Schmandt came to Memphis from Indianapolis of the American association. He formerly was with Brooklyn in the National league.

Hunter and Partner Win in Semi-Finals

Miami Beach, Fla., March 3.—(AP) Francis T. Hunter, ranking No. 2 American player, and Lawrence Rice, of Boston, New England champion, won their semi-final match in the south Florida tennis tournament this afternoon from Jack McKay, Miami Beach, and Carroll Turner, of Miami, 6-1, 6-4, 6-4.

John Hennessey, of Indianapolis, ranking No. 5, met stiff opposition from Carlton Schaefer, of New York, in a singles semi-final, but stopped the New Yorker at 6-3, 6-4, 6-3. Schaefer was fighting for the third and last leg on the cup emblematic of the south Florida championship, which he had won twice. Four games in the last set were carried to deuce, the eighth seven times and the seventh four times.

Hennessey will meet Francis T. Hunter in the finals tomorrow.

Miss Goss Wins.

Palm Beach, Fla., March 3.—(AP) Eleanor Goss and Elizabeth Choate won the Florida woman's doubles tennis championship here this afternoon when they defeated Mrs. L. G. Morris and Mrs. B. F. Stenz, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4.

Hard Work Mapped Out for Tech Squad

Golden Tornado Will Continue Spring Grid Work for Several Weeks—Durant Injured in Scrimmage.

BY ROGER PAGE.

Resting up over the week-end after their first scrimmage of the spring practice, the Golden Tornado will again be in uniforms on Grant field in a day or so, ready for another one of those rough tumbles.

The only injury besides a few bruises and scratches which the men in the scrimmage Friday sustained was a torn ligament in Bob Durant's right arm, received when he made a tackle during the affair. Bob's arm is not expected to give him very much trouble, but is very sore.

One of the hardest workers on Grant field during the spring trainings is Bob Horn. Horn showed up well in the scrimmage, playing the role of quarterback. It is not expected that Coach Alexander will keep him in this place, as he has been playing one of the half positions during the past years.

Short of Quarterbacks.

The squad is short of quarterbacks right now on account of the number of men who are out for the baseball squad. Durant is there, but Shorty Smith and "Izzy" Shulman, both lettermen who do the bossing of the team, are on "Kid" Clay's baseball outfit.

The freshmen luminaries, also champions in their rating, are getting in the limelight while toting the ball. "Father" Lumpkin, Maree, Holt, Jones and a number of others who were charging around the field, are showing up well. Lumpkin, during the first scrimmage Friday, was playing in one of the half positions, having been changed from full. Tom Jones, one of the best rat flankers, was holding down Glenn Holland's end. Glenn has had a bad arm since the Georgia game, and did not get into the scrimmage.

Warner Mizell was missing, as was Frank Speer, Bob Parham and Frank Waddy. All of these men are holding positions on the baseball squad, and will not get in any of the spring practices.

Smart Backfield.

With Bob Randolph at full, Horn and Lumpkin at halves, and Bob Durant calling the signals, Coach Alexander has one of the smartest backfields in this section. There is also a large number of backfield men from the freshman ranks. In fact, the backfield question is, "Where shall they be put?"

Spring training will continue at Tech for several weeks yet, and in this time Coaches Alexander, Fincher and Miller expect to get in many more scrimmages.

FORT GAMES.

The Twenty-second Infantry Basketball league is drawing to its close with interest still at fever heat. This is due to the fact that through the luck of the schedule the two league leaders will meet this coming week in a two-game series. However, if Company G wins the first game of the series this will automatically close the league, with Company G as winner.

The league standing:

TEAMS—	W.	L.
Company G	10	0
Headquarters Company	8	1
Company F	6	4
Company E	5	5
Company H	4	7
Service Company	4	8
Headquarters Co., Eighth Brigade	0	12

Games played during the week:
Headquarters Company, Eighth Brigade, forfeited to Company G, Company H, Service Company and Headquarters Company.

DIXIE LEAGUE.

The Tuesday night series in the Dixie Boys' league should decide the trophy winner for the season as the schedule calls for the meeting of the two leading teams.

Anchor class defeated the Western Heights Baptist quintet for their fourth straight victory in the last half of the split season to hold their perfect percentage.

By defeating the All Saints Episcopal five in an extra period affair the F. E. F. class remains as a constant threat to the leaders and as these two meet in this series F. E. F. class can create a deadlock in the league.

SCHEDULE.
Western Heights Baptist vs. All Saints' Episcopal, 7:30 p. m.
F. E. F. Class vs. Anchor Class, 7:50 p. m.

DIXIE (GIRLS') LEAGUE.

The Central Presbyterian girls' basketball team made the girls of the league leading Pattilo Memorial five believe there was something to 13 being unlucky by defeating them in the thirteenth series of the Dixie Girls' Basketball league.

Misses Barber and Holmes were the big guns for the winners, with Misses McGee and Evans playing well for the losers.

Avondale Presbyterian sent the Western Heights Baptist club down to their tenth straight defeat to gain a berth in the upper division.

The semi-final series in this league will be played along with the boys' division, two games being slated for Tuesday night and the other for Thursday.

EMORY GAMES.

The Soph Meds at Emory university continued their dizzy fall by losing to the juniors yesterday 32-21. This makes the third straight defeat for the team that was a leading contender. These defeats clinched the championship for the Freshman Meds' team.

Jack Lee, high point scorer of the league, led the Juniors' attack with 16 points. Tuller contributed 8 to the cause. For the losers Cathell was high man with 11 points. Crawford was held to a lone field goal by the swift guarding of the victors.

The rejuvenated Theologs won another game at the expense of the Sophomores, 14-12. This game was featured by the wild shooting of both teams. Tate and Price were the head men in the victors' show, while Ford did the most for the Sophs.

CITY LEAGUE.

One of the best and most important basketball games in the City league will be played Thursday on the A. A. C. court, at 7:30 o'clock, when the Gulf and the A. A. C. Reds meet for first-place hoonrs. Each team holds a close win over the other and this will be the deciding battle. If the Gulf wins it will clinch first-place honors, while a loss will throw the two in a tie.

Southern Bell will finish in third place, and will meet the Knights of Columbus in the second tilt. Avondale will invite some unknown opponent for the last fracas at 9:30 o'clock.

LEON DURAY ENTERS MAY SPEED CLASSIC

Indianapolis, Ind., March 3.—Leon Duray, the grizzled Hercules of automobile racing, is the second pilot to announce his entry for the international 500-mile race to be held here, as usual, May 30. His entry came from California, accompanied by the customary $100 fee.

Duray will pilot a front-wheel-drive Miller Special, a type of car that has excited no little curiosity in the past three years of racing, but which was rather a disappointment last year.

Duray has great confidence in his new space eater, he explains in a letter, believing that all the bugs have been worked out of the cars that carry their power directly from the motor to the front wheels of the creations rather than sending it all the way back to the rear of the car.

Leon, who is large and strong and who looks like the public's conception of a moving picture scenario racing driver, always has been a violent advocate of the new type of speedster.

Groomed on the dirt tracks for his speedway successes, he learned the art of skidding cars around flat corners at breakneck speed. And many were the thrills he gave crowds by his daring sliding.

But in a long race he appreciates the advantage of getting around corners with the least resistance. And he believes that with the pull on the front, there is less likelihood of skidding the rubber off on the corners.

Duray also reports that many of the drivers who are wintering in California are making elaborate plans for their participation in the coming 500-mile race. Some of the drivers will go to Cuba for a midwinter race at Havana, while others who have taken up motorboat racing as a hobby plan to go to Miami Beach, Fla., for the big March 16-17 regatta there.

American Association May Get Rowland

Chicago, March 3.—(AP)—Clarence Rowland, dropped from the American league umpiring staff after five years' service, may call balls and strikes in the American association this season.

President Thomas J. Hickey said today he was negotiating for Rowland's services. He expects to sign him Monday.

President Hickey released Doll Derr, of Baltimore, at his request. Derr officiated in the league for five years.

DODGE OIL FILTERS PROTECTS ENGINE

How the oil filter works and whether it is working properly is of interest to every motorist who wants to secure over many thousands of miles of service, freedom from engine wear and from need of adjustments or replacements, according to B. L. Eskridge, of the Lambeth-Eskridge Motor company, local Dodge Brothers' dealer.

"Too many owners," says Mr. Eskridge, "are briefly informed at the time of purchase that an oil filter is part of the standard equipment of the new car, but are not told how important the filter is in prolonging engine life. Sometimes the salesman tells the buyer that the engine oil filter is 'engine life insurance,' but, too often the owner overlooks the fact that in time the policy lapses, that is, the filter becomes no longer effective and should be replaced.

"Some manufacturers recommend replacement at the end of a specified mileage, some when a test indicates that the oil no longer flows through the filter sufficiently freely—the result of gradual accumulation of sludge and abrasives removed from the oil circulating system.

"Tests made in the laboratory indicate clearly the extremely harmful nature of the material which the filter removes. If the black, tarry-looking cloth sack removed from a new car is burned and the ash or nonbustible matter analyzed it is found to consist of sand and gritty matter as well as small particles of metal largely what is worn from the cylinder walls and piston rings during the breaking in.

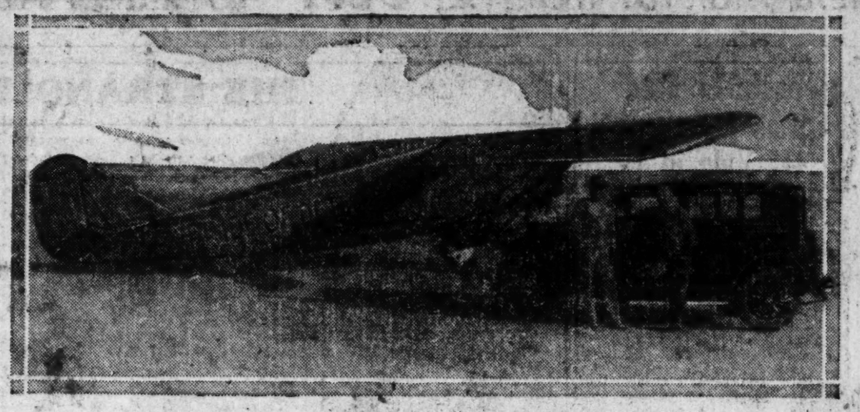

"The crankcase breather and the carburetor air filter exclude much dust which might otherwise enter the engine. Any fine material which does get in and becomes mixed with the oil is trapped out by the filter. Otherwise the fine dust would circulate again and again, and cause wear of cylinder walls, pistons, rings, bearings and, in fact, all parts inside the engine which turn or slide one against the other.

"The oil filter should be tested every two or three thousand miles by the mechanic in the approved service station or by the owner. The method of testing is very simple, consisting merely of opening a small valve in the oil filter outlet pipe. If the oil flows freely when the engine is running slowly the filter is good for further service, but if the oil fails to flow or drips slowly even when the engine is warm and is speeded up until normal operating pressure is shown on the oil guage on the dash the filter has become clogged and should be replaced.

"The filter is conveniently located where it can be removed as a unit by simply loosening the two oil tube connections with a wrench and one clamp bolt with a screw driver. In fact, changing an oil filter is just about as simple as changing a spark plug.

"As the filter permits the driver to use the oil two or thre times as long as would be safe to use unfiltered oil it saves the cost of replacement several times over during its life—but if neglected until it becomes entirely clogged it can no longer remove tarry and gritty matter from the oil and increased engine wear results."

Detroit's Fliers Welcome New Victory Six

Brock and Schlee, famous Detroit flyers, who spen much time in lorida this winter endeavoring to lower the endurance flying record were enthusiastic in their praise of the Dodge Brothers Victory Six. The "Pride of Detroit," with which they flew the greater distance around the world, is shown along with the first Victory Six sedan to be exhibited in Florida.

STEPHENS' REVIVAL SERIES ENDS TODAY

Final services of the George T. Stephens three-week tabernacle evangelistic series in Avondale Estates will be held Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. A special service for men will be held at the tabernacle on Stone Mountain road Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

EMORY PROFESSOR TO LECTURE FRIDAY

Dr. W. G. Henry, of the Emory university faculty, will lecture on his travels in the Holy Land and other places abroad at the Payne Memorial church at 7:30 o'clock Friday night, March 9, it is announced. The public is invited to attend and no admission will be charged.

Big Association Membership Meeting Here This Month

At the regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Atlanta Automobile association, held during the preceding week, plans were made for the big spring general membership meeting of the association some time during the week of March 25. The Atlanta Automobile association is made up of 100 per cent of the automobile dealers of Atlanta and practically 75 per cent of the leading dealers in various other automotive trade lines. It is the outstanding automotive dealer association, not only of Georgia, but of the southeast, and has taken a most active part, during the ten years of its existence, in every movement looking toward the betterment of the industry in this section and the advancement and protection of automobile users. The present officers of the association are: H. H. Alexander, president; Jack Phinizy, first vice president; Sam D. Katz, second vice president; John Hargrave, third vice president; T. P. Hicks, secretary; S. B. Dodge, treasurer; C. V. Hohenstein, executive secretary.

The big March membership meeting will undoubtedly go down as one of the most interesting meetings the association has ever staged, by reason of the fact that H. D. Bullock, sales expert of the National Automobile Dealers' association, is making a special trip to Atlanta to be the feature speaker on this occasion. Mr. Bullock has an international reputation and is considered one of the outstanding authorities in the automobile industry of America.

At this meeting preliminary plans will be laid for staging another southeastern automobile show in 1929, to follow up the splendid results recently secured from the southeastern automobile show staged at the auditorium in January of this year. The entire automotive industry of this section seems to be very much gratified over the success of this show.

In addition to the business part of the program an unusual and interesting entertainment and musical program has also been arranged.

M'LENDON'S CONDITION REPORTED UNCHANGED

Secretary of State S. Guyton McLendon Saturday was said by attendants to be in "practically the same" condition as has prevailed during the last three weeks of an illness which has confined him to his rooms at the Henry Grady since Christmas.

GOODYEAR DESIGNS NEW DIRIGIBLE

A new baby dirigible, "The Puritan," has been designed by Goodyear engineers and is now under construction in the Akron, Ohio, factories of the company. The air yacht, which is somewhat larger than the Goodyear airship "Pilgrim," will be sent on its first trial flight in May.

"The Puritan," will have a wider cruising range, higher speeds, and greater lifting capacity than its predecessor, "The Pilgrim," the first airship of the type to be built in America.

Powered with two radial air-cooled motors of recent design, mounted on outriggers to eliminate cabin noise and vibration, the new ship will have a cruising speed of 46 miles per hour and a top speed of 55 miles an hour, while the range of operating with four passengers will be 550 miles.

With two passengers and a pilot, the ship will be able to travel 550 miles without refueling, engineers say.

"The Puritan" will be 128 feet in length, 37 feet in diameter and will hold 86,000 cubic feet of helium, as compared with "The Pilgrim," which is 110 feet long, 30 feet in diameter and has envelope capacity for 53,000 cubic feet of lifting gas.

Improvements in design include a wide, strong keel within the envelope attaching the cabin to the ship, a second rudder on the top side for additional maneuverability, dual controls for the training of student pilots and the placement of motors outside the passenger compaitment, are major features of the new airship.

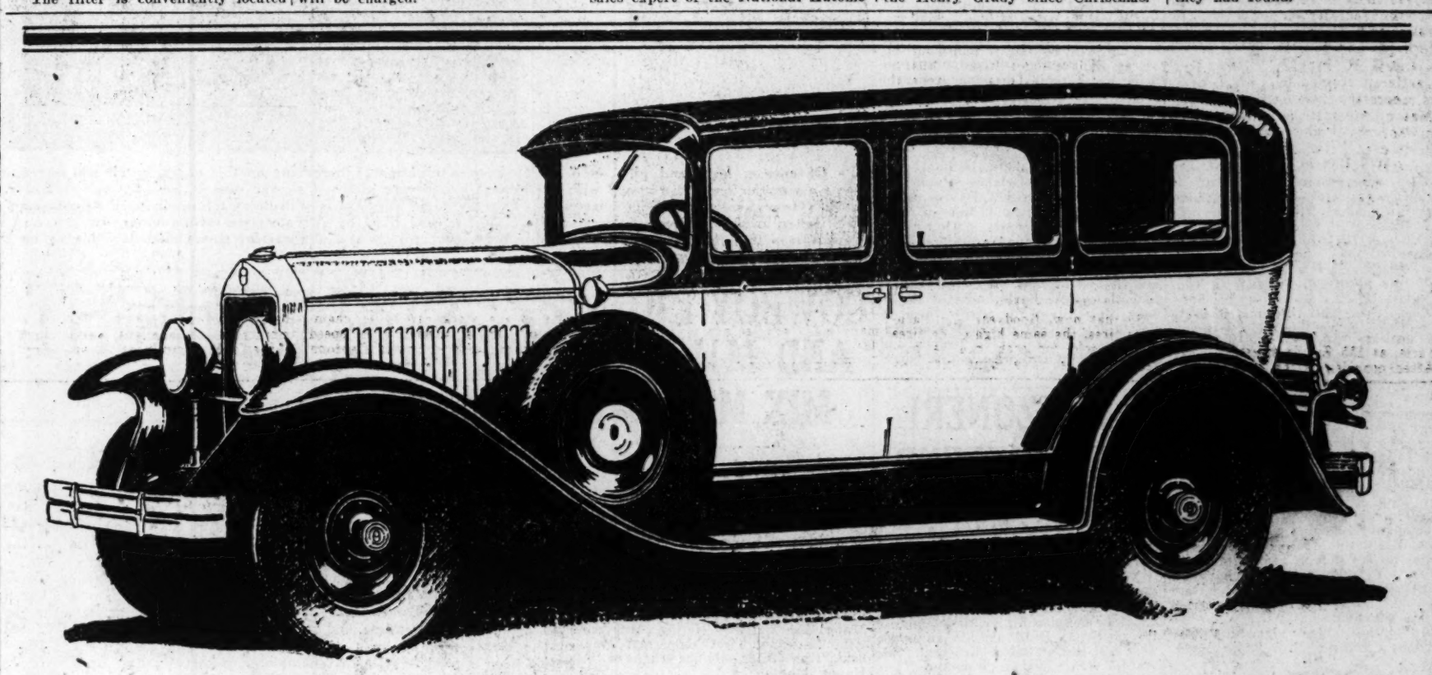

The motors will be equipped with automatic starters and will be geared to revolve the propellers in opposite directions, reducing the torque in the car, increasing the ship's stability and maneuvering capacities.

Refinements in passenger comfort and excellent visibility will make possible long distance flights even in adverse weather, and the ship can be flown with a single motor if necessary.

The first flights of "The Puritan" will be made from the Wingfoot Lake Air station of Goodyear.

"POCKETBOOK GAME" NETS NEGROES $400

Kindly police officers listened to the old, old story of the pocketbook game for the thousandth time Saturday when Nora Watts, a maid of the rear of 1439 Highland avenue, reported that two negro boys had "flimflammed" her out of $400 on a promise that she would share in money they had found.

Consolidated Tire Stores, Inc., Announce Time Payment Plan for Goodyear Tires

Officials of the Consolidated Tire Stores, Inc., who Saturday announced that this new concern, at 155 Spring street, N. W., will sell Goodyear tires on a popular time payment plan. Above, left to right: H. H. Brooks, secretary-treasurer of the Brooks-Shatterly company, dealers at Lakewood Heights; B. R. Miller, operator of two of Atlanta's most modern gas and tire stations on the north side, handling Goodyear products, and G. W. Branch, representative of the Washburn-Crosby company and actively connected with the retail business in Atlanta for several years, secretary-treasurer of the Consolidated Tire Stores. Center: C. C. Mason, president and manager and for the past seven years sales supervisor of Winchester Simmons company, of Atlanta; Preston Lewis, formerly credit manager of one of Atlanta's leading department stores and for several years connected with the Hanson Motor company, and E. R. Lambert, manager of Miller's service for six years. Below: E. C. Shatterly, founder of the Brooks-Shatterly company and prominent in real estate circles in Atlanta.

Goodyear tires can now be purchased on the easy time payment plan, is an announcement of unusual interest made Saturday by the newly-opened Consolidated Tire Stores, Inc., dealers who handle Goodyear products, at 155 Spring street, N. W.

"After considering the possibilities of this method of bringing within easier reach of automobile owners the world's greatest tire, we have decided to adopt the time payment plan," the announcement said.

"So that now, Goodyear and Pathfinder tires, the same high-grade tires that are sold for cash, can be purchased on the installment plan, as many other articles are being sold today.

"When you buy a Goodyear balloon or a Goodyear Pathfinder tire on the easy time payment basis, you are buying the best balloon on the market and the best tire a small amount of money will buy.

"They are brand new, fresh tires, bearing current series numbers. Motorists will get, in them, the same long, slow wear; the same full cushioning and comfort; the same safety and peace-of-mind when driving.

"Motorists who have been postponing the purchase of new tires need wait no longer. They can now get the best tires, with the assurance that they will be getting many trouble-free miles while they are paying for them.

"We are prepared to sell one, or a set of new Goodyears or Pathfinders on this easy payment basis."

E. H. McCarty Named Vice President Nash Motor Co.

E. H. McCarty, for the past six years general sales manager of the Nash Motors company, has been made a vice president of that organization. He was elected a director three years ago. Regarded as one of the soundest merchandisers in the automobile industry, he will continue to direct the company's sales organization.

Announcement of Mr. McCarty's election as vice president was made by C. W. Nash, president of the company, who said the advancement was a "well merited recognition of unusual ability."

"Since Mr. McCarty came with our company in 1922 he has established a splendid record," said Mr. Nash. "His knowledge of merchandising, based on long years of experience in the retail as well as in the wholesale and factory fields has been a valuable aid to him in his task of directing sales for the Nash Motors company. Because of the splendid work accomplished by Mr. McCarty his advancement to a vice presidency of the company comes as a well merited recognition of his outstanding ability."

Earl H. McCarty started his business life in an humble position in the offices of a large horse-drawn vehicle manufacturer and has long been regarded as a dynamic force in the merchandising division of the automobile industry. In any situation, no matter how trying, "Mac," as he is known to Nash distributors throughout the country, is found always with two feet on the ground and he never loses sight of the fact that two and two make four. It is this quality of basic understanding and clear logic that earned for him a reputation for sound judgment and clear vision—qualities that have stood him in good stead during the many years he has handled sales of motor cars and horse-drawn vehicles. During these years he has steadfastly dealt in facts, never confusing facts with theories. In his early days his work was confined to the practical task of compiling cost figures and sales records. To others engaged in similar work these figures meant, perhaps, only so many pages of arduous and uninteresting labor but to McCarty, gifted with vision and inspired by ambition, each page of figures told a romantic story—advancement, profits, achievement. So it was not remarkable, perhaps, that Earl McCarty should have risen out of the ranks. His promotions came from time to time and he became one of the directing forces that influenced the figures on those ledgers he used to keep. He became a branch manager, where direct contact with the individual customer gave him a thorough knowledge of the problems that confront a retailer; then he was brought to the factory and made an assistant sales manager, and from that position he went with Nash Motors as general sales manager.

NEW FAST TIME FOR STUTZ BLACK HAWK

Stutz Black Hawks, which were the undefeated stock car champions of the country in 1927, wound up a sensational week of racing in the Daytona Beach speed carnival by capturing the American stock car record for one mile, when Gil Andersen piloted his Stutz Black Hawk over the measured mile at the rate of 106.52 miles per hour. Tom Rooney, Andersen's mate in their racing days a decade ago, also bettered the previous American stock record for one mile and fell only slightly short of Andersen's great mark when he covered the distinct in his Black Hawk at the rate of 105.54 miles per hour. These tests were under the A. A. A. sanction given for the Daytona Beach speed carnival and the records are therefore official

This double victory over the existing stock car record climaxed a week of remarkable achievement for Stutz on the famous Florida sand course. Two earlier triumphs, both conclusive in their decisiveness, justified Stutz claims to the stock car speed championship. In a special mile speed test for a cup offered by the Daytona Beach Chamber of Commerce, Stutz Black Hawks finished first, second, third and fourth, the drivers in that order being Gil Andersen, Tom Rooney, George Spindler, Stutz distributor in Indianapolis, and Jack Rutherford, prominent New York sportsman.

LUBRICATION EXPERT

W. R. NASH.

Announcement was made the past week by officials of the Wood Tire company of the appointment of W. R. Nash as manager of their lubrication department.

Mr. Nash is a fully experienced lubrication man and has several years' experience as a mechanic which qualifies him for his new appointment.

In the Daylight Shop of Lambeth-Eskridge

One of the important things that go to make the repair shop of the Lambeth-Eskridge Motor company here one of the finest in the south is the abundance of daylight that was not often found in the garages and service stations of the past. Above photo gives a good idea of the conditions under which their mechanics work on Dodge cars, daylight allowing them to very accurately adjust every working part to the N-th degree.

STUDEBAKER SALES PASS ALL PREVIOUS MARKS

Another all time sales record for Studebaker and Erskine motor cars has been shattered, according to an announcement of the Studebaker Corporation of America. Reports on export markets show that during January factory shipments of Studebaker and Erskine cars to distributors and dealers overseas exceeded every previous January in Studebaker history, and were 101 per cent greater than January, 1927.

Announcement of record sales abroad follows close on the statement recently made by A. R. Erskine, president of the corporation, that retail deliveries of Studebaker and Erskine cars by dealers in the United States set a new high record for January, 1928, and were 58 per cent greater than January, 1927. This impressive sales record, which emphasizes public acceptance of Studebaker's new cars, including the President Eight and the new American Edition of the Erskine Six, is all the more remarkable since it was established during a winter month generally regarded as unfavorable to retail sales.

These new sales records both at home and abroad come after a year of steadily growing popularity of Studebaker and Erskine automobiles, during which time Studebaker cars demonstrated their sound design and stamina in a series of spectacular performance tests which won for this car all the highest endurance and speed records for fully equipped stock cars, regardless of power or price.

Your own eyes will tell you how CLEAN it is!

NEXT time you see a Pan-Am pump, look at the gasoline in the visible bowl. Note its crystal-clear color . . . the absence of any dirt or foreign matter. This gasoline is clean! It is processed with unusual care to remove the carbon-forming elements found in many gasolines. That means a motor clean as a whistle, for tip-top performance! It means less carbon trouble and knocking—a wealth of extra power for both the quick start and the long pull—and mileage economy such as you have never known before.

Fill up today at the first Pan-Am pump you see. You can be sure of honest service from any Pan-Am dealer. And you know that the products he sells are produced and distributed by one reliable organization.

SAFE oil

Pan-Am motor oil was developed to give modern motors the extra protection they need because of higher speeds, increased engine heat. It is refined from paraffin base crudes that produce a tougher oil. That is why Pan-Am holds its body under punishment that soon breaks down less hardy oils. It keeps the hottest friction spots in any motor safe from destructive wear—seals extra power in the cylinders—prevents dilution and fouling. Yet Pan-Am actually costs you less than ordinary motor oil, because it stays on the job long after others thin to the danger point.

LeRoux Motor Company New Distributor for Overland

CHARLES M. LE ROUX.

Willys-Overland, of Toledo, Ohio, Saturday announced that the LeRoux Motor company, headed by Charles M. LeRoux, has taken over the distribution of Willys-Knight and Whippet cars in Atlanta and the state of Georgia.

Abolishment of the Willys-Overland factory branch here and its succession by the LeRoux company is in line with the recently-adopted policy of the Overland company of appointing distributors in "key" cities throughout the country instead of maintaining factory branches.

Mr. LeRoux, who enjoys a wide circle of friends here and throughout the state, formerly was branch manager for Willys-Overland at that concern's big plant on North avenue between the two Peachtrees, which building and all its facilities will be maintained by the LeRoux company. As a result of the change announced Saturday, Mr. LeRoux will head his own business while E. R. Parker will represent Willys-Overland in the southeast as zone manager, with headquarters in the building occupied by the LeRoux Motor company.

Mr. LeRoux, one of the country's veteran automobile leaders, Saturday expressed enthusiasm over the bright outlook for business in this section for 1928. He pointed out that already more orders for Willys-Knight and Whippet cars have been booked so far this year than were delivered in the entire territory during the first six months of 1927 despite the fact that 1927 showed an almost 100 per cent increase over 1926 in Georgia's business.

Mr. LeRoux also added that he will retain practically the entire personnel of the Willys-Overland organization, and because of more restricted territory to serve will be able to give closer personal attention and more efficient service to his patrons.

Connected with the Willys-Overland company for 14 years, Mr. LeRoux has spent the past five years with the concern here and is one of the most prominent figures on Atlanta's automobile row. A native of Mississippi and a man of wide experience in the automobile game, he is deeply interested in every movement looking to the betterment of Atlanta and this section of the country.

"We have experienced a tremendous increase in business just recently," Mr. LeRoux said Saturday. "Following the latest price reduction on Whippets, 52 dealers made application for our franchise in this territory, and we now have the state of Georgia covered thoroughly with a capable dealer and service organization."

BOK PRIZE WON BY CADILLAC

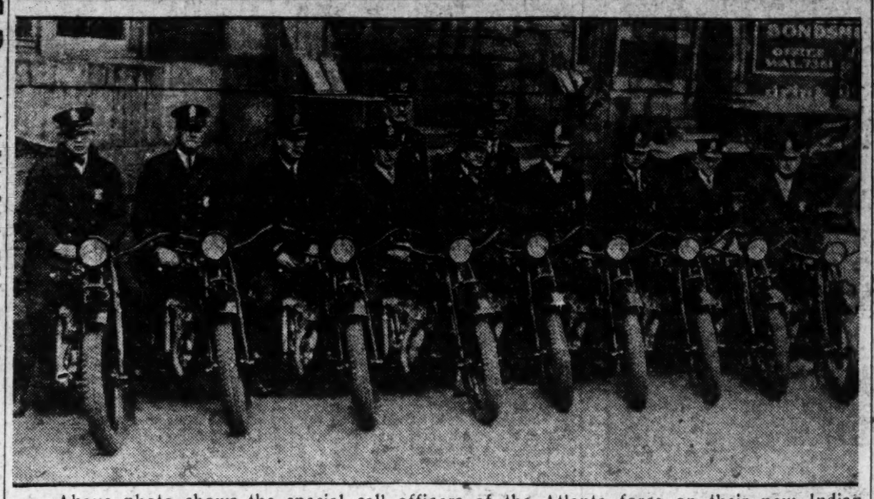

A Cadillac advertisement which appeared nationally last September, announcing the new Cadillac has received one of the Edward Bok awards from the Harvard school of business.

The prize of $1,000 went to T. M. Cleland, of New York, the artist who executed the painting for the advertisement entitled "Cadillac Creates a New Luxury in Motoring."

The award was made on the ground that the illustration best expressed pictorially the thought to be conveyed.

An interesting angle on the award was that the advertisement was not submitted in competition, but was selected by a committee of students for consideration by the judges.

NEW LIMOUSINE OFFERED BY CHRYSLER

An announcement of more than usual interest is made by the Chrysler Sales corporation through Harry Somers to the effect that this company is now offering for special orders a custom fabric body limousine on its "72" chassis. The new car attracted much favorable attention in the Chrysler display at the Commodore hotel during the New York automobile show.

The fabric automobile body has won considerable popularity in Europe and some observers of motor car trends are forecasting for it a vogue in this country.

The process of manufacture, as described by its sponsors, provides for making the body frame from selected kiln-dried hardwood, which is accurately machined, carefully glued and secured with joints reinforced when necessary. This is covered with expanded metal lath, giving strength with extreme lightness, the manufacturers explain. Cotton waddling is used as the next layer in the fabric to absorb vibration, and a heavy canvas is stretched tightly over it to assure smoothness of surface. The construction is finished with a covering of Meritas Leather cloth, a fabric with a hard weather-proof surface which is said to retain its beauty almost indefinitely.

In the "72" custom fabric limousine, now offered by Chrysler, the fabric construction is employed rearward from the cowl bar, the hood being of metal, as usual.

Appointments of the new limousine are of characteristic Chrysler luxuriousness. A disappearing glass partition is provided, and the high quality of broadcloth upholstery used in both front and rear compartments makes the car suitable for either owner or chauffeur driving. Two theater seats raise passenger capacity to seven. Arm rests are provided on both sides of the rear seat. Carpet covered hassocks, silk assist cords, dome light, Butler finish hardware, cigar lighter, and pockets in both rear doors add to the car's equipment. The color is a lustrous black, with a belt moulding in black "polished" striping lacquer. Striping above and below the belt moulding is dark red.

BABY HEALTH CENTERS ANNOUNCED FOR WEEK

Baby health centers for this week, as announced by Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, will be as follows: Tuesday, Adair school; Wednesday, Grant Park school and Andrew Stewart nursery; Thursday, Forrest Avenue school; Friday, James L. Key school.

All centers will open promptly at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon and mothers are invited to bring children four years old or less.

February, Largest Production Month in Overland History

Toledo, Ohio, March 3.—Production of Whippet and Willys-Knight motor cars last month was the largest February production in the history of the Willys-Overland company, according to a statement issued today by executives of the organization. It was said that the month's total production was near 25,000.

Production of these cars, on several days, has exceeded the 1,200 a day mark.

Employment at the Toledo plant, with 17,900 on the payroll, is the largest number ever employed by the company, the statement said.

Despite the high production figure reached, there are 25,000 unfilled orders for cars on file, the daily influx of orders being maintained in the same high volume that has characterized the demand for these cars since early in January when the Whippet prices were reduced.

The statement also declares that the demand for the three lines of Willys-Knight sixes is necessitating a high production schedule to meet the demand of the Willys-Overland dealer organization.

Grahams Start Wayne Plant; Get Another at Evansville

Announcement by the Graham-Paige Motors corporation that its new body plant at Wayne, near Detroit, which began production February 6, has already attained a daily production of 150 bodies, marks the successful completion of an engineering project that has been watched with interest throughout the automobile industry.

Since the building at Wayne was acquired, the plant has been completely equipped with machinery, conveyors and finishing equipment, especially set up for the type and body design of the new Graham-Paige. More than $500,000 was expended on equipping the plant for production, not including the cost of a second story added to the front of the building for offices and for the trim and upholstery departments.

The first bodies were turned out February 4; by February 23 the daily output was 150, and it will soon reach 200.

Another new body plant, it has been announced, has been acquired by Graham-Paige. Through a subsidiary company, Motors Bodies, Inc., it has leased the factory at Evansville, Ind., formerly used for the manufacture of truck bodies for the Graham brothers, and is fitting it up for the manufacture of bodies for the 110 1-2-inch wheelbase Graham-Paige. This will supplement the work of the Wayne plant, which makes sedan bodies exclusively for the same model car.

The new Evansville plant, with a building 400 by 100 feet, will be refitted and will begin operations in several weeks with a daily capacity of 25 to 30 bodies. It will give employment to 150 workers at the start.

It is planned to develop the Evansville plant for ultimate use in building custom bodies for the larger models of Graham-Paige.

Evansville was the site of the three Graham brothers' first manufacturing enterprise, and later of their truck factory. The new body plant marks their return as passenger car manufacturers to the town in which they scored their outstanding success in the commercial truck field.

These two Graham-Paige plants are to be devoted to bodies for the 610 model Graham-Paige. Standard bodies for the 119 and 129-inch wheelbase models are produced by the Briggs Manufacturing company, while custom and special bodies come from the Le Baron-Detroit company.

The LeRoux Motor Co.
15 East North Avenue, Atlanta, Ga.

We take pleasure in announcing the LeRoux Motor Company as distributors for Willys-Knight and Whippet motor cars for Atlanta and the State of Georgia.

Mr. Chas. M. LeRoux, President of The LeRoux Motor Company, shares our unlimited confidence in Atlanta's present greatness and future prospects. Mr. LeRoux is perhaps too well known in Atlanta to require a personal introduction. He has been associated during the past fourteen years with Willys-Overland activities in various executive capacities in the sales field, and brings to his new business an enviable experience in all phases of retail and wholesale merchandising of Willys-Overland products.

The Sales and Service facilities of the LeRoux Motor Company will be maintained along metropolitan standards. To local automobile owners a most cordial invitation is extended to visit their premises for fullest inspection.

Our new distributors are prepared to demonstrate and place at the disposal of interested parties, any Whippet or Willys-Knight model, the performance of which has contributed to maintaining Willys-Overland's position in the automobile industry at the highest level.

HERTZ INAUGURATES TRUCKS FOR RENT

The truck operating service inaugurated some months ago by the Hertz Drivurself stations, largest automobile rental organization in the world, has proved a decided success and steps are now being taken to enlarge upon the scope of the project, according to advices from Charles W. Litsey, operating vice president and general manager of the Hertz corporation.

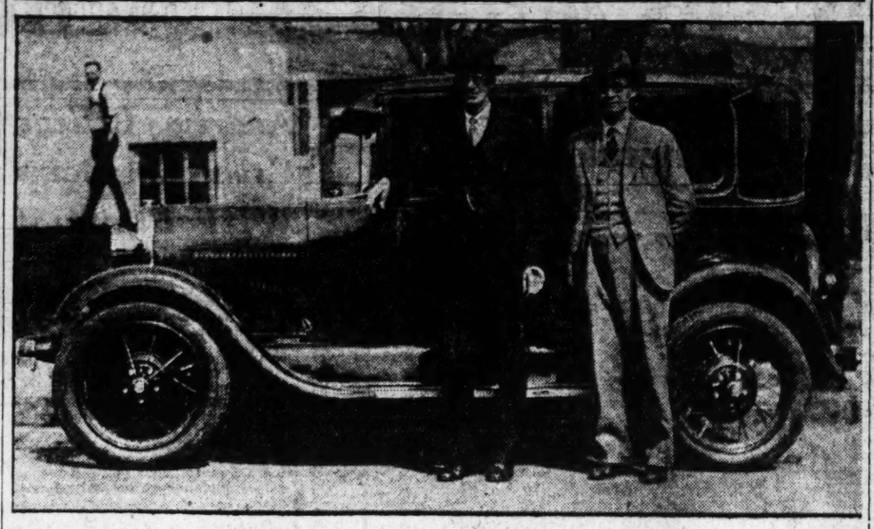

Probably the most important step so far taken towards this end is the fabrication of a new light package delivery truck particularly suited to the requirements of representative merchants who realize the advertising value of delivery equipment that is properly designed and maintained.

The new truck, now available for rental on a contract basis from any of the Hertz stations operating in the United States and Canada, is powered by a standard six-cylinder motor and capable of meeting every modern traffic condition. Its long, low, panel body together with the vestibule type driver's compartment not only presents an attractive appearance and gives closed car comfort to the driver but also provides for fast, easy loading and unloading.

"This extension of the Drivurself idea has naturally followed the success and great expansion of the passenger car Drivurself service," said the statement issued by Mr. Litsey, "and it will not be long until our truck operating division is established in every city where Hertz stations now operate.

"Although the Drivurself truck rental service is still a comparatively new venture, a complete operating service is now in effect in New York, Washington, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Atlanta, Birmingham, Kansas City, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Montreal and Toronto, Canada. As rapidly as equipment is available additions to this list will be made."

Detectives Make Record Run in New 1928 Ford

Detectives Smith and Lowe are shown above standing by the new 1928 Ford sedan that furnished them transportation to Jacksonville last week to return the three boy bandits. Their time for the round trip was less than 18 hours, which is said to be a record for any light car.

INFANT, ENTANGLED FOUND SUFFOCATED IN BEDCLOTHING,

Believed to have suffocated when he became entangled in bedclothing, Robert Frank Jackson, five-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jackson, of 734 McMillan street, was found dead in bed early Saturday morning.

The verdict returned by Coroner Paul Donehoo was "death from undetermined cause."

According to a statement made by the grief-stricken father of the infant, the child had apparently moved into a position where the bedclothes interfered with its respiration, resulting in suffocation.

Funeral services for the child will be held at 11 o'clock this morning, from the Clearwater Springs Baptist church, in Milton county. Interment will be in the churchyard.

NEGRO IS ARRESTED IN THEFT OF CLOTHES

Charges of posing as an employee of a pressing club to obtain suits of clothing were made by police Saturday against Etta Glaze, negro, who was arrested by Detectives John Starnes and Pat Campbell in alleged possession of a large quantity of clothing. The suits are being held at the police station for identification by the owners, police said.

War Ace Praises Franklin For Creating Air-Cooling

Before a meeting of Franklin distributors and dealers from the entire middle and northwest at Chicago recently, Captain H. M. Berry, noted war ace and now president of the Gray Goose Air lines, declared that the rapid progress in aviation had been made possible by Mr. Franklin's vision in developing air-cooling.

The air-cooled engine is the greatest single factor in flying safety and reliability, the speaker stated, declaring that there is no reason why every automobile in the country should not be equipped with the same type of engine. "I believe this will some day be the case," he said.

In flying the first trans-continental mail from Chicago to Cheyenne before the mail ships were powered with air-cooled engines, the plumbing systems of the water-cooled motors caused great hazards, being responsible for at least 65 per cent of the forced landings, the captain asserted. In winter time, a forced landing meant a delay of from three to five days, because of the difficulties of freezing, draining the radiators and getting equipment to heat the water so that the motors could be started again after being repaired.

In contrast to this, he related the history of a flight made during the severest cold spell of January this year, from Chicago to the Canadian northwest, during which a ship with an air-cooled engine remained on the ice of a lake all night and was started the next morning without difficulty.

Throughout the entire aviation industry, water-cooling is regarded as antiquated, he declared, adding that virtually no advances have been made in water-cooling since the war, whereas air-cooled motors have been brought to a high state of development, including the latest which dispenses with a thousand parts, increases the life of the motor three-fold and cuts down maintenance 60 per cent.

In the air mail service, he said that a water-cooled motor was flown for about 80 hours when it was necessary for a top overhaul and a scraping of the water scale from the water jackets. In his present air work, he said that his air-cooled engine has been run 250 hours in every temperature extreme with but two valve adjustments necessary during that time. In his opinion, Captain Berry stated, an air-cooled automobile should have a life approximately three or four times that of a water-cooled car.

INVAR STRUT PISTON FEATUREDBYCHEVROLET

Detroit, Mich., March 3.—Nearly 10,000 automobile showrooms throughout the country have echoed the question, "What is an invar strut piston?"—the new type introduced in the bigger and better Chevrolet on January 1. O. E. Hunt, chief engineer of the Chevrolet Motor company, attempted here today to answer this question for the thousands of people who have seen the new car and asked about this outstanding feature.

Invar, according to Mr. Hunt, is a contraction of the word invariable. It is the name coined to describe the metal used in making the piston "strut," which is cast as an integral part of the piston just above the pin hole and has its ends firmly embedded in the metal forming the piston face.

"Invar," Mr. Hunt explained, "is less responsive to heat or cold than any other metal known. It is a special nickel steel alloy of extreme toughness and rigidity, and is practically the same metal as that used by the United States bureau of standards to construct its gauges, and in the manufacture of precision instruments.

"A light alloy piston expands when heated, which means that unless this expansion is properly controlled, excessive clearance must be allowed between the piston and cylinder walls to prevent sticking and scoring, resulting in piston "slaps" and oil "pumping." This control is effected in the Chevrolet piston by use of the strut, which permits a clearance of only .0025 inches between the piston and the cylinder wall as compared to .004 and .005 in clearance with a piston that has no controlled expansion.

"A practical demonstration of the controlling properties of invar strut pistons was held recently. All the water was drained from the radiator of a test car, a blanket was thrown over the hood, and the engine was run at high speed for an extended period without a single piston scoring or seizing the wall of the cylinder block.

"Invar strut pistons have been used for a long time on some of America's costliest cars. They have been, thoroughly tested and proven entirely satisfactory.

"Inclusion of them on the 1928 Chevrolet involves a considerable outlay. They cost three times as much as the ordinary piston. The Chevrolet Motor company will spend $3,500,000 additional this year on this one feature alone in order to maintain its standard of quality in the low priced field."

Activities of the Week in Atlanta's Schools

EDITED by RICHARD CLARK

Chorus of Four Hundred Features Music Festival Of Junior High Schools

Elaborate Program Is Planned for March 14; Each School To Offer Number.

Atlanta's four junior high schools will offer for public approval their annual musical festival at the Auditorium-Armory the evening of March 14. This program, inaugurated by the city school music heads last year, proved such a success that it is planned to present the program every year. Vocal and instrumental music will feature the elaborate program, which will include an individual offering from each of the four junior high schools and several numbers in which the entire cast will be assembled.

The offering of the O'Keefe school will be a colonial sketch, presented in elaborate costume, song and dance effects. Bass Junior High will present several scenes from the popular operetta, "The Belle of Barcelona." Choruses and dancing will feature this number.

A Japanese operetta, "Yamki San," will furnish the material for the Hoke Smith feature. It will also be presented in full costume, with song and dance included. Selections from "The Persian Princess" will be the presentation of the Joe Brown school. These players will be assisted by Jack Thompson and Fred Landers, violinist and baritone soloist, both students of Joe Brown.

A tremendous chorus of 400 voices will be one of the outstanding features of the program. Talent chosen from each school will be included in this number and the group will sing that evening three numbers: Schubert's "Serenade," the bridal chorus from the "Rose Maiden," and Reginald DeKoven's "Recessional."

A junior high orchestra of 150 musicians will play for numbers during the entertainment. These players are now being trained in their schools for this program and the director, Robert Horney, who is supervising the work, promises an excellent ensemble of instrumental music for the evening.

Shorter College Classical Club In Latin Play

Among interesting events of the week at Shorter college the Latin play, Seneca's "Octavia," presented by the Classical club under the able direction of Dr. Clara Thompson, was outstanding.

Appropriate stage setting and costumes and the clear and excellent manner in which the players uttered the Latin sentences combined to make the play a success.

G. S. C. W. SENIORS EDIT 'COLONNADE'

The senior class of the Georgia State College for Women is to edit the next edition of the Colonnade, which is to appear on March 6. The following staff was chosen: Catherine Brantley, editor-in-chief; Mary Burton, Frankie Raines, Wynelle Otwell, Margurite Jackson, Doris Steed, Kathleen Rice, Elise McCrary, Margaret Lumpkin, Sypper Youmans, Ruth Fite, Jink Arnold, Katherine Butts, Mattie Musselwhite, Dorothy Little, Dorothy Roberts, Helen Greene, Eudora McCranie, Alta Sproull, Annie Laurie Godbee, Carolyn Wheeler and Anne Bryant.

The Colonnade staff has begun practice for a play which is to be given by the members about the middle of April.

Brenau Physical Education Department Gives "Follies"

At the Y. W. C. A. vesper service Sunday evening Miss Virginia Lewis, who was Brenau's representative at the student volunteer conference held in Macon recently, gave a report on the conference. Whitie Craig, of Emory university, gave a report of the quadrennial student volunteer conference held in Detroit in December. Both Miss Lewis and Mr. Craig told in a very interesting manner the most outstanding features of the conferences and of the things which impressed them most.

The physical education department presented its annual "Follies" in the auditorium Saturday evening. The entire program was planned and rehearsed by the girls and upon its performance it was acknowledged to be exceptionally artistic and enjoyable. The annual presentation of a stage feature gives proof that the physical education girls are trained to be able to conduct work of all types. Each act was in charge of a junior or sophomore with the seniors acting as supervisors. The opening number, which was directed by Miss Betty Little, contained all the members dressed as clowns and going through intricate dance steps in unison. The second act was the toy doll shop in which the Dutch dolls, the mama doll, the rag doll, Katinka, the colonial doll, and the tin soldiers, in turn gave dances. Miss Virginia Lynn was in charge of this group. The third of the acts was a Mother Goose scene in which all well-known characters appeared. Miss Kathleen Berry receives credit for this production. Tableaus and esthetic dances produced by Miss Matilda Shapiro, and the Blue Danube waltz number which was directed by Miss Louise Harbour, were very colorful and received many acclamations on their beauty and grace. The Vagabonds, composed of the members of the quartet, Miss Etta Ghey Cargile, Miss Grace Dunman, Miss Betty Little and Miss Jerry Sledge, sang humorous songs and contributed much fun. Miss Etta Grey Cargile appeared in between acts with Miss Louise Harbour and sang popular selections. The finale was a cabaret scene which was full of spice and action, including a daring hold-up which was foiled and various entertainments.

Andrew College Group Entertains With Banquet

On Thursday evening, February 21, the old members of the Sigma chapter of the Chi Delta Phi national literary sorority entertained their new sisters at a lovely banquet. This banquet for the new members is an annual affair and is one of the biggest events in Andrew's social calendar, and each year's banquet excels its predecessor in beauty and lively entertainment.

Dixie Drake, president, was master of ceremonies and presided with the ease and grace that makes for warmth and congeniality at the most formal affair.

The banquet itself consisted of five elaborate courses. Mrs. Margaret Reeves, head of the home economics department, and Mrs. P. M. Reed planned the menu. Those present were Dixie Drake, Ruth Moncrief, Frances Wiggins, Marion Reid, Earl Shaffer, Kathleen Wimberley, Myrtise Jones, Isabel Kimble, Naomi Gnann, Nell Jones, Doris Parker, Joy Prince, Lucile Bourn, Marie Bourn, Miss Mary Arnold Strother, Virginia Stubbs, and the guests of honor, President and Mrs. Branch.

The students, faculty and officials of Andrew college have decided to publish a school paper, "The And-Items." The officers were elected, the staff organized, and plans for financial campaign made.

The officers of the paper were as follows: Editor-in-chief, Ruth Moncrief; associate editor, Nell Jones; business manager, Doris Patterson; associate business manager, Frances Wiggins. The officers of the literary department of the paper were given the privilege of choosing their own staff. It is as follows: Social editor, Dixie Drake; assistant social editor, Katherine Brinson; joke editor, Doris Parker. The paper is to be published once a month.

LEE FIFTH GRADE ELECTS OFFICERS

The pupils in our school furnished the radio programs for the grammar grades in the Atlanta schools this week. Monday 27, the fifth and sixth grades of this school gave a program "February," coached by Miss Emily Wood.

Low-one pupils miss their teacher, Miss Johnson, very much, but they like their new teacher, Miss Mina Reaves.

High-two had the pleasure of having Miss Boylston visit them. She had them to cut scenes free-handed. John E. D. Rhodes made the best.

High-three have a very pretty March border around their room.

Low-three have a St. Patrick border around their room.

High-four had a visit from Miss Slocumb, which they enjoyed very much.

Low five had many children to sing or say something over the radio. They sang "Month of Birthdays" and "Psalm of Life."

The high-five class elected officers for their room. They were Hilda McDonald, president; Verna Spears, vice president, and Baker Bowen, secretary.

Low-six have had the savings banner two weeks, and are trying hard to keep it.

Milk-for-Health Poster Winners Are Announced

Winners in the poster contests conducted in Atlanta and Fulton county schools as follow-up work in the milk-for-health campaign were announced Saturday.

In the Atlanta schools every pupil in the fourth and fifth grades of grammar school was required to make a poster and, through a preliminary contest, the three best for each grade were selected and sent to Miss Charlotte Smith, art supervisor, for final judging. R. J. McKinney, of the High museum of art, acted as judge and the winners were as follows: June Harvey, fourth grade, Moreland school, first prize; Rosa Najour and Ethel Mae Crowder, both of Fair Street school, shared the second prize, and Lorena McNabb, fourth grade, Whitefoord school, won third prize.

The pupils of Fulton county schools were divided into three groups, group one being composed of high school students, group two of pupils in fifth, sixth and seventh grades, and group three of pupils in the first, second, third and fourth grades.

The three best from each group were selected and sent to Miss Charlotte Smith, who, with Miss Lucile Turner, district home demonstration agent at Experiment, Ga., were judges. In group one, Bert Dorsey, Frances Baskin and Sam Miller, all of College Park High school, won first, second and third prizes, respectively.

In group two, Grace Bates, of Park school, won first prize; Lois Moody, of Mt. Vernon school, won second prize, and Edna Elizabeth Schell, of Lakewood Heights school, won third prize.

In group three, Collie Litchenwater, Grove Park school, won first prize; a group from the fourth grade of E. Rivers school, second prize, and a group from fourth grade of Marion Smith school, third prize.

Miss Lucile Turner, Miss Charlotte Smith and Miss Kathleen Mitchell, supervisor of Fulton county schools, sponsored the contests.

ORMEWOOD CLASS WINS BANK BANNER

Miss Janie Solomon and Miss Hattie Rainwater were welcome visitors at our school last Tuesday.

The kindergarten is delighted with the little table which H. S. Elrod made for them and they thank him so much for it. They are enjoying the lovely pussy-willows which have been in the kindergarten for more than a week, which tell us spring is coming.

Low first is glad to have two new pupils, Pauline and Grace Cash.

Low two has begun making their color charts. They are very glad that they won the bank banner.

Low three pupils have enjoyed illustrating their health rules very much. They are going to make a March poster. They enjoyed making a poster of Washington.

The high three and low four classes are sorry to have Ruth Roberts and K. G. Taylor absent on account of illness. The class is going to give each of them a fruit shower.

The high four class kept the savings banner two weeks. They are studying cotton and are going to make peep shows in their geography work. They are interested in bird study. They read bird stories and then report them to the class. They are sorry that Nettie Kaglemacher moved away.

The fifth grade boys and girls are making bird houses. Elizabeth Henderson is leading the class in daily spelling. We are glad to have Elizabeth Bond join our low five and Leonard Turk, our high five.

The sixth grade pupils are making many interesting songs and yells about health. They are trying to make the health crusade the most helpful.

Blackfriars Of State University Present Drama

The Blackfriars of the university, presented "So This Is London" in the Pound auditorium on Monday evening. The play delighted the large and appreciative audience. The cast included the following: Messrs. Robert Falligant, Armond Eyler, Ralph Wardlaw, Frank Lester, Livingston Travis, Guy Hamilton, Ned Hagey, Malcolm Lockhart and Frank Constancy, and Misses Alice Rowland, Nora Fortson and Ruth Irion.

Madame Lustrat gave a most delightful address at the chapel exercises Saturday morning. She came in the interest of the Red Cross.

Mrs. Kim, of Korea, but who is now a student at Wesleyan college, spoke at vespers on Sunday evening. Mrs. Kim will return to her country as a missionary after having completed her work at Wesleyan.

2 Georgia Ave. Classes Reach Tooth Perfection

Two classes already have attained the desired 100 per cent in teeth and only a few remain in the whole school unvisited by the dentist. We hope to soon have earned not only a holiday with our good teeth, but also good health. Miss Rainwater visited us on Tuesday and we were all so glad to have her see the interesting science work we have been doing.

High six is very sorry that Leon Economy is sick with the mumps. They are glad that Milton Frisch is back. They went to the capitol with their teacher, Miss Kendrick, and had a fine time. They have had 100 per cent in banking for the past 14 weeks. They were the first room in the school to get 100 per cent in teeth.

Cecilians Hold Tryout For Members at N. A. P. S.

On Friday, February 17, the Naps team went to Athens for the second out of town game of the season. This game was with Athens High. It was a well fought game and Athens High won with a score of 34 to 25. Many members of N. O. P. S. student body followed the team to Athens, where a most enjoyable time was experienced.

Last Thursday afternoon the Cecilian Dramatic club held their spring try-out. A large number of talented girls tried out for coveted membership in the club. After a difficult time in deciding the Cecilians selected six girls to become members. They are Katherine Lynch, Nell Kurtz, Charlotte Myers, Virginia Morris, Violet Singletary and Sara Berry. The Cecilians are quite proud of their new members and feel sure that they will prove to be excellent material.

The Cecilians are now beginning work on their spring play, the date and place of presentation to be announced later.

On Friday night on the court in the Tech gym Naps played one of the most interesting games of the year with Lucy Cobb's team from Athens, Ga. During the half the N. O. P. S. rooters took part in the usual popular snake dance out in the center of the court. At the end of the game it was announced that Naps won, the score being 48 to 21.

Washington Seminary Wins Two Basketball Games

A mistake was made by the printer last week. Instead of a dancing contest it was a darning contest in the seventh grade. Coral Moore won the prize, a seminary pennant, and Mary Louise Trippe and Eleanor Terhune received honorable mention.

The Secret Six club entertained at a bridge-tea Friday afternoon in the seminary parlor. The proceeds paid for their page in the Annual. Some went to find out just who the Secret Six are and some because food was served, but all had a delightful time. The members of this very exclusive club are Mias Martin, Eugenia Noff, Lusella Burnett, Mimi O'Beirne, Elizabeth Kimball and Elinor Memminger—in other words, the Vergil class.

Miss Sharpe honored the boarders and teachers whose birthdays had come in February at a beautiful party Friday night. Two delicious cakes with sixteen candles were brought in and delicious refreshments were served. The honorees were Mrs. Scott, Miss Surtees, Miss Alice Downing, Mary Wyatt Scott, Mary Anne Haley and Elizabeth Price. Mr. Scott read several Uncle Remus stories. Miss Battle sang and Miss Eckford played a selection by MacDowell.

Miss Emma and the faculty entertained the senior class at a beautiful party Saturday morning at 11 o'clock. Heart-dice was played and then a delightful luncheon was served. Pearl Rofleman won the prize—a seminary pillow, and Miss Martin won the booby prize—seminary stationery. Miss Nora Belle was also presented some stationery. Everyone had a grand time and those of us who had been to so many faculty parties left with many sad thoughts in our hearts.

The seminary defeated Covington 23-6 Saturday on the seminary court They also defeated Columbus High in Columbus last Saturday.

The "Facts and Fancies" annual staff are highly elated over their stationery. It is quite original and neat; nothing can keep them from writing now.

'The Charm School' Chosen For Commercial Players

"The Charm School," by Alice Miller, will be presented by the Dramatic Study club of Commercial High school as the senior play in the spring. Mildred DeLoach and Marion Coleman have the leading roles and Bob Smith the character part.

Trips through Spain and France were the features of the radio program given by students in the modern language department, from 10:30 to 11 o'clock a. m., Thursday, February 23. Robert Smith described a trip through France; Benjamin Hargrove, a trip through Spain. The program began with songs sung in French by the French classes. Dana Waters and Paul Harris gave a vocal duet.

Jerome Davenport, editor of the Co-Ed Leader, spoke over WSB Thursday, March 1. He described the organization of the journalism classes and gave a brief history of the paper.

The ten students recommended for Quill and Scroll have been accepted by the national secretary-treasurer and will be initiated into the Frank L. Stanton chapter, Monday, March 5, in the library at Commercial High school. "Having examined the very good work of the candidates and having examined their qualifications, I am very glad to approve them for membership," writes Mr. Gallup in answer to Miss Cunningham's letter applying for membership.

The Hooks and Crooks have presented mimeograph to the school, to be used only by the seniors. The proceeds from a play, presented several years ago, paid for the mimeograph.

Girls' High School Active In Recent Cleanup Week

Clean-up week, an annual event at Girls' High school, opened with a bang Monday, February 27. A mammoth clean-up parade was held Wednesday at recess and the home room representatives who took part in the parade marched through the halls carrying posters bearing clean-up slogans and wearing their class colors. During the whole of clean-up week the different classes vied with each other in bringing about the greatest improvement in the appearance of their individual home rooms.

Since the new rule went into effect permitting Girls' High students to dance the school has been faced with the problem of providing dancing space for all the students who wish to take advantage of the privilege. Because of the large number of girls in the student body it is impossible for all of them to dance at the same time, so each class has been given the dancing privileges for a certain day each week. The lobby and hall outside the cafeteria will be used for the purpose.

Sachs' Address.

"Jewish Colonization in Russia and Palestine," an address in Yiddish, will be delivered by Dr. A. S. Sachs, famous economist, educator and author of a number of textbooks on economics, at 6 o'clock tonight at the Arbeiter Ring lyceum, 473 Capitol avenue.

FAITH HIGH ONE PLANS DOLL HOUSE

High one-one at Faith school is happy over each article of furniture as they complete it, hoping soon to be ready to furnish their doll house. They are sorry that George Fox has moved away.

Some of the children of high-six enjoyed a trip to the state museum at the capitol very much. We secured lots of materials for our Georgia books. Ruth Blanton, a new pupils from North Carolina, is welcomed by high-six.

RUENELL DAVIS.

JOE BROWN STARTS BASKET TOURNEY

Joe Brown is starting a series of athletic tournaments. Miss Hargrove will start a basketball tournament for the girls of the eighth and ninth grades. This tournament will be started because there is no junior high league for athletics this year. Practice will begin Monday. Mr. Gorham will also begin a similar tournament for the boys.

Mrs. Lyon, recreational chairman for the P.-T. A., with the aid of Mr. Langely, is going to have a horseshoe tournament. Practicing will begin at once and all the students and teachers are asked to learn how to play.

Joe Brown was represented at the national educational convention in Boston by Miss Lamar Jeter and Miss Mary Gray, teacher of mathematics. This convention is an association which meets every year and is attended by educators from all over the United States.

SPRING HIGH SIX STUDYING GEORGIA

Georgia is being studied by high-six.

High five-one made a chart on the blackboard on which they are going to keep a record of the signs of spring they see.

Bird houses are being built by low four and high-four.

George Washington's birthday was enjoyed very much by high-four.

High low-three are enjoying watching some pussywillows grow.

High-two has health books.

High-three is quite interested in starting an imaginary trip around the world. The first country they chose to visit was Holland.

Health books will soon be marked by low-two.

High-one is glad to have Nannie Hallman back at school. She has been sick since Christmas.

The kindergarten has 100 per cent perfect teeth.

Marist '27 Grid Squad Awarded School Sweaters

At 1:15 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, before the entire school and faculty, the men who put forth their best to uphold Marist's gridiron record for the '27 season received acknowledgment of their efforts.

Finally the sweaters were presented to the following members of the varsity team: Murphy and Fain, centers; Winn, DeGive, Doolittle and Morgan, guards; Whaley and Timmons, tacklers; Holiday, Williams, Holland and Cochran, ends; Harvey, captain and quarterback; L. Brine, halfback; G. Eberenz, halfback, and Bill Holt, fullback.

A Message From Superintendent Sutton

Dear Boys and Girls: As you read this letter, I will be attending the department of superintendence of the National Educational association meeting in Boston, Mass. I am wondering how many of our students are thinking in terms of how they may help to build a great school system.

It has been hard to secure sufficient money to operate the Atlanta schools. As your superintendent and friend, I have worked day and night to see that we shall keep a real school system in Atlanta. I have worked to maintain our kindergartens, to see that our little boys and girls had a chance to learn the wisest and best things from good teachers. The blocks with which you play, the slides on which you ride, the songs that you sing, and the games which you play, all of these cost money and it has cost us great effort to secure them for you. We wish you as kindergartners to know that Atlanta, your city, your superintendent, and your board of education, your principal, and your teachers, are working for you, and we wish you to help us work for a good school system.

To the boys and girls of the first, second and third grades, I wish to say that as you grow older and pass from kindergarten to the first grade, and on up, that we are counting on you learning to love the school system. We are believing that you will work for better schools so that all boys and girls in our city may have good advantages. We hope and believe that as you grow older you will not forget that your city and your superintendent have given you the very best advantages they were able, and that you will keep in mind when you are a grown man and a grown woman to work and to vote for better schools always.

To our boys and girls of the upper grades we believe that you are old enough now to help us in our school affairs. You are doing this by talking to your mother and father about your school work, telling them of your good teachers, of the books and equipment that are furnished, and asking them to support a bigger and better school program.

And, of course, there are our junior and senior high school boys and girls, almost men and women now. How the board of education has worked for you! How the superintendent, assistant superintendents, principals and teachers have planned, that you might have high school advantages! I wonder sometimes if you realize just how hard a struggle we have had to establish and maintain a junior high school system. Will you not make it a part of your everyday work to talk to someone about the needs of the Atlanta schools, and encourage them to see that more money is appropriated to help carry on the work of education in Atlanta.

As I said in the beginning, I am attending the National Educational association, trying to learn more and better things for the Atlanta schools. While I am away will you help me in this great work?

Always your friend,
WILLIS A. SUTTON, Superintendent of Schools.

CENTER HILL CLASS HAS JAPANESE BORDER

The second grade entertained the P.-T. A. on Friday with a health play called "Eating Milk."

Mrs Ray's fourth grade was presented with two new books—"Heidi" and "Miss Minerva and William Green Hill." The grade mother, Mrs. Miller, was the donor.

Grades one and three, Miss Garner, teacher, are making a tulip border for their room.

Miss Wade's third grade is working on a Japanese border and sand table.

The second grade is glad to welcome Miss LeMoine back after two days' illness this week.

With money made in the cafeteria the sixth grade has bought "The Age of Innocence," and the fourth has bought "The Angelus." The fourth grade have studied four of Millet's pictures and they are very proud of their new one.

The seventh grade has spent a very interesting week in the study of China and Japan. They have learned many new things about the customs of these queer people.

The seventh grade is having an enthusiastic English contest. They are trying to form the habit of using good English at all times.

Mr. Ramsey came out to visit us on Friday.

BILLIE LIVINGSTON.

LAGRANGE COLLEGE CLUB OFFERS PLAY

The English club of LaGrange college had an open meeting in Hardwick hall Saturday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock. The program featured a one-act comedy, "Grandma Pulls the String," by Edith Delano and David Carb. The characters were:

Grandma Belsington, Mary Frances Wiggins; Mrs. Cummings, her daughter, Mary Lumpkin; Hildegarde Cummings, Catherine Ingram; Julia Cummings, Margaret Edmundson; Nona Cummings Beaver, Wilma Hunter; William Thornton, Louise Kent.

O'Keefe Jr. High Sponsors Cross Country Race

On March 2 O'Keefe sponsored a cross-country race. The comparatively short distance, only one mile, was counterbalanced by the roughness and irregularity of the course. The first runner at the goal was presented a gold medal and will have first choice of the 75 cakes donated; to the second runner a silver medal and corresponding choice of cakes, and to the third runner was awarded a bronze medal and his choice of cake. The remaining 72 cakes were presented to the next homecomers, according to their time of arrival.

Assemblies this week were of unusual interest. The Boys' High School orchestra entertained the ninth grades on Monday. Their program, consisting of classical music only, was well rendered, and because of its unusualness and difference from the usual jazzy program was greatly appreciated.

15 MORE MEMBERS TO COMPLETE ROLL OF NEW AERO CLUB

Only 15 more candidates will be enlisted in the Atlanta Aero club, it was announced Saturday by Charles M. Ford, Jr., who is organizing the chapter, which will be affiliated with the National Association for Promotion of Aeronautics.

Ten new members were added to the rolls during the past week, and officials feel that too large a class would hamper proper instruction of students. The course includes theoretical and practical flying, with the aim of increasing the number of American youths who are qualified to pilot their own planes.

Those who affiliated last week are L. B. Blanton, C. C. Crosswell, Oscar H. Williamson, Jr., Roscoe Stanley, R. P. Mikell, M. T. Culler, M. F. Dowdy, J. L. Atkinson, W. B. Bear and J. L. Garrison.

Jascha Heifetz, Noted Violinist, Appears Friday

One of the most important musical events of the current Atlanta season is scheduled for next Friday night at the auditorium, when Jascha Heifetz, the violinist, appears in his first local recital since he returned from a two-year world tour.

JASCHA HEIFETZ.

Heifetz comes as one of the Artist Series, under the banner of the Southern Musical bureau, S. Russell Bridges president. Tickets for the concert will go on sale Tuesday morning at the Cable Piano company, the box office to remain there until it is taken to the auditorium at 7 o'clock on the night of the performance.

The name of Jascha Heifetz has been before the American public for so long that it seems hardly credible that this really great violinist is today only twenty-six years old. When he made his American debut ten years ago he was looked upon as a boy prodigy. Yet even then, at sixteen years, he was a seasoned and mature artist with seven concert sessions behind him.

Born In Russia.

Heifetz was born in Vilna, Russia, February 2, 1901. He began his musical studies at the age of three, playing a tiny violin made especially for him. His father, who was a violinist in a theater orchestra, spent his days teaching his son. He would sit beside young Jascha hour after hour while he practiced, correcting every mistake. Undoubtedly this early drilling explains Heifetz's uncanny accuracy and superlative mastery of his instrument.

At five Heifetz entered the Vilna conservatory. He graduated at eight, having learned all that the instructors could teach him. Then, in order that he might study under Professor Leopold Auer, in Petrograd, his parents broke up their home and sold their furniture. Police regulations forbade their residing in Petrograd without some legitimate reason so, to get around the law, the father had to become a student with his son.

Heifetz's first public appearance was made at the age of five, but it was not until he was nine that he gave his first recital in Petrograd. Soon after this he was soloist with the orchestra at Pavlosky, playing before an audience of 5,000. By the time he was ten he had mastered the entire violin repertoire.

Immigrated In 1917.

The Heifetz family came to the United States in 1917 by way of Siberia and Japan and young Jascha made his American debut with sensational success on October 27 of that year. His second recital sold out weeks in advance and that winter he gave four other concerts in New York without once repeating a number.

Since that memorable first season Heifetz has not only toured the United States several times, but has also appeared in practically every European country, in China and Japan, Australia and New Zealand. An episode that occurred in Sydney, Australia, serves out the ease and mastery of his playing. After one of his concerts, a British-flavored member of the audience stepped up to him and said:

"It was topping Mr. Heifetz. Bonza! Really amazing, y' know. But I say, my dear fellow, you don't work hard enough. You know, you ought to make it look more difficult. Move about a bit, let the people know how bally hard the music is."

Warning Issued To File Income Returns Early

Have you contributed your mite to the support of Uncle Sam in view of the big profits you shared in during 1927? If not, obey that impulse and send J. T. Rose, internal revenue a collector, a check for a year's subscription to the United States of America.

Mr. Rose issued a warning Saturday that Georgians have only until March 15 to file their 1927 income tax returns; adding, in the language of those little slips of paper you get from court officers, "herein fail not."

Lines of customers have already begun to form at the income tax offices on the second floor of the federal building, and Mr. Rose urges Atlantans to file their incomes before the real last-minute rush commences. Revenue agents have been placed on duty in the income tax offices and will aid Atlantans in figuring out their debts to Uncle Sam.

The income tax act says "an income tax return must be filed by every citizen of the United States whether residing at home or abroad, and every person residing in the United States, though not a citizen thereof, having a gross income for the calendar year 1927 of $5,000, or over, or a net income for the same period of (a) $1,500 or over, if single, or if married and not living with husband or wife, or (b) $3,500 or over, if married and living with husband or wife, or (c) regardless of amount if the net income exceeds the personal exemption."

CLARK U. ARTISTS IN MUSICALE TODAY

A twilight musicale, presenting a chorus of 60 voices, a 35-piece orchestra, a male choir and a tenor soloist, will be given at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon at Clark university chapel, according to the announcement of Dr. M. S. Davage, president of the institution.

Professor Frederick Hall, head of the department of music, will direct the presentation of the varied program, which will open with "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen" and close with selections from Handel's "Messiah."

Indorse Orchestra.

Waycross, Ga., March 3.—The Kiwanis Club of Waycross has given unanimous indorsement to the movement of Louis Langley to organize a symphony orchestra here. Mr. Langley is director of the Lyric orchestra.

NEW A. C. RADIOS GET BASS NOTES

Those who listen to the higher grade radio receivers of today realize that there is a wealth of difference in radio reproduction as compared with that of two or even one year ago. The great difference in such receiver lies in their ability to reproduce in correct proportion with the rest of the musical scale the deep base notes which give instrumental music its deep vibrant quality.

Two or three years ago people were satisfied with radio as it was, and did not realize just how much of the radio music they were missing. Today, through the great advances which have been made in one or two of the higher class receivers, the public is beginning to understand just what radio music has lacked.

Bass notes give a resonance to instrumental music that is most necessary for its fullest appreciation. How, for instance, would a piano sound if all the notes below lower C were discarded? It would sound flat and pitched too high. It is the same with any other kind of music.

The Stromberg-Carlson company is proud of the fact that their new A. C. receivers reproduce musical tones corresponding to three octaves below lower C. This allows the deepest notes of the string bass or the pipe organ to be reproduced in correct proportion with the other notes of the musical scale.

STANTON PROGRAM IS SEARS FEATURE

With such famous verses as "Mighty Lak a Rose," "Just a-Wearyin' for You," "Sweet Little Woman of Mine," "Morning," and "Lil' Feller," Miss Lucia Parker, soprano; Paul and John, "the two disciples of harmony"; Miss Mary Jane Nancy, reader, and the Sears-Roebuck Instrumentalists will feature "Memories of Frank L. Stanton" during the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation broadcast over WSB between 7 and 8 o'clock Wednesday night. The main part of the hour will be dedicated to the memory of Frank L. Stanton, first poet laureate of Georgia, and writer of many song successes. The first part of the Sears-Roebuck broadcast between 6:30 and 8 o'clock will be dinner music by Paul and John and the Instrumentalists.

Paul and John, Frank W. Day, flute soloist, and the Crawford fiddlin' team of Myrtlewood, Ala., are booked artists for the Monday dinnerbell program. The Farmers' Radio newspaper will be broadcast during the first 30 minutes of the Wednesday noon program. From 12 to 12:30 ill be devoted to music by Lawrence Smith, pianist; Eugene Boehm, violinist, and the Long sisters, radio team. Friday at noon the Sears-Roebuck Players, directed by Harry Pomar; Bruce Waggoner, singer with ukulele, and Paul Crutchfield, tenor, will be featured.

Miss Lois P. Dowdle, editor home department Southern Ruralist, will open the week's activities from the tower studio by speaking to the homemakers at 10:05 Monday, March 5. Miss Dowdle is widely known throughout the south because of the contribution she is making in her present field of service. She is also well known by the outstanding work she did in improving the Girls' 4-H club during her work with the extension service of the Georgia State College of Agriculture. Each day after Monday Mrs. R. F. Whelchel, home advisor, will discuss a seasonal topic.

Saturday morning Ralph Richardson, blind baritone, and Lawrence Smith, pianist, will be heard during the Junior R. F. D. club and request program. Weather and markets go on the air at 10 a. m., 12:05 and 2:30 p. m., daily.

TECH'S PROGRAM THURSDAY NIGHT WINS ACCLAIM

Among the interesting programs given during the last week was that broadcast by WGST, the Georgia Tech station, Thursday night. It was arranged by the Eastlack School of Oratory and Expression and included on the program were interesting as well as amazing selections. The response was so widespread that listeners have expressed the hope that another such program will be arranged in the very near future.

Two letters, each postmarked Victoria, but outside the United States, have come to WJR, Detroit, reporting reception. One was from Victoria, Chile and the other Victoria Park, Manchester, England.

RADIO-ING The Air Waves.

BY WILL SMITH.

Action looking to incorporating in the new radio bill in the congress the equal distribution of power and wave lengths to the radio zones of the nation and attacks on the clause featured the radio legislative tangle in the congress during the latter part of the week in Washington.

Representative Cellar (democrat), of New York, asserted enactment of the clause would "wreck radio broadcasting and plunge us back into the unsatisfactory conditions which existed prior to the enactment of the radio act of 1927." Representative McKeown (democrat), of Oklahoma, served notice that if the clause was not adopted by the house he would offer a resolution to investigate conditions in radio broadcasting.

As the situation stands members of the house are at wide varience on whether or not the equal distribution clause should be enacted into law. For those who oppose it, it is stated that present high-powered stations would lose their power and that thickly station-populated areas, such as Illinois, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and California, would lose many of their best stations entirely, the law automatically wiping out all but a few of those now on the air.

Advocates of Clause.

Those who demand equal distribution of power and number of stations to each of the radio zones, assert that the eastern states are left out of the picture entirely under present conditions, that other sections of the country are all but dependent on the districts where the great stations are located for their radio reception, that every zone is entitled to its equal number of stations and its proportionate amount of power.

Which side is playing to the best interests of the radio public? Which would you, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Listener, prefer enacted in the radio bill? Let's read on:

The report of the house committee said:

"This amendment looks to the future. It declares in terms the duty of the licensing authority to make an equal allocation among the five zones, of broadcasting licenses, of wave lengths and of station power and provides that within each zone there shall be an equitable allocation among the states thereof in proportion to population and power."

And again:

Attacking the Clause.

"There would be three ways of executing the amendment proposed whereby you would have an equal distribution of stations. First, increasing the stations in all zones to the maximum of any zone. This cannot be done because we have already reached the saturation point. The radio spectrum cannot be added to. The bucket, as it were, is filled and in fact is spilling over. Second, by leaving the stations in all the zones as they are and as stations drop out in the oversupplied zones, let their wave lengths and power be assigned the southern zone.

"Three hundred stations can be taken off the air 'for cause,' that is, for jumping wave lengths, failing to split time and for violations of regulations. Their wave lengths and power could be given to the sections that are now complaining. If the amendment would prescribe this procedure, I would be satisfied, but the amendment lays down a hard and fast rule. It goes into effect immediately upon its passage and then the commission must do its duty and cut and slash off those stations in the first, second, fourth and fifth zones and turn them over to the third zone.

"Third. The third method is the method that the amendment actually prescribes. All zones must be scaled down to the minimum in accordance with area and population. The amendment admits of no other construction, otherwise I do not know how to read the English language.

"Furthermore, this amendment will imperil the use and efficacy of one-third of the seven million sets now in use. The commission would have to scale down the power of stations in such a way that the high-powered station would not be above 1,000 watts. This would mean that service from a station would be dependable only within a radius of between 50 and 75 miles. Approximately, one-third of the receiving sets on the main, are located more than 50 miles from any station. If the station cannot dependable broadcast more than from 50 to 75 miles radius most of the receiving sets would become useless. Furthermore, it is notorious that the best programs are given over those stations located in the cities in proximity to available high-class artists, musicians, and orchestras of distinction. You cannot procure good programs when the studio is located at Painted Post or Squedunk."

EQUAL DISTRIBUTION WINS IN COMMITTEE

Washington, March 3.—(AP)—By a vote of 12 to 5 the house merchant marine committee today reaffirmed its stand in favor of an equal distribution of radio broadcasting stations among the states upon the basis of population and area.

The vote came on a motion that the committee rescind its previous action in approving an amendment to the senate radio bill to provide for such allocation.

This means that the senate bill, which among other things provides for the continuance of the life of the federal radio commission for one year, will be called up in the house as origbially approved by the house committee.

Gabrilowitsch, Famous Pianist, Here Saturday

Ossip Gabrilowitsch, noted pianist, will be presented in recital at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, March 10, under the auspices of the Atlanta Music club. His program will include the works of Chopin, Handel, Bach, Haydn and Ravel.

OSSIP GABRILOWITSCH.

Despite the fact that the world is overrun with pianists, Ossip Gabrilowitsch still preserves a happy distinction which makes him unique among his fellow artists. His patrician profile accentuated by the romantic collar is a familiar picture in the musical world, while his title, "The Poet of the Keyboard," remains eternally unchallenged.

Although he bears a name that all too few on this side of the Atlantic find it easy to pronounce (the accent is on the "lo") Gabrilowitsch is as thoroughly American as naturalization papers can make him. In 1908 he married the daughter of Mark Twain, the famous humorist, and his wife, nee Clara Clemens, is a singer well known in musical circles. They have a little girl, Nina, who finds life a serious affair trying to live up to her famous parents, to say nothing of her celebrated grandfather.

The home of the Gabrilowitsch family is in Detroit, and is one of the show places of the city. But it happens to be little more than an interlude in Gabrilowitsch's life. Between his duties as conductor of the Detroit orchestra and his activities as a concert artist he has all too little time for home.

Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore, president of the club, announces that there will be no advance sale of tickets. The box office will be open at the Woman's club auditorium at 2 o'clock. Seats on the first floor and the first three rows of the balcony are priced at $2 and the remainder of the balcony at $1.

MERCHANTS' BOARD TO MEET WEDNESDAY

For the purpose of outlining leading activities of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association for 1928, the newly-elected board of directors of the association will hold its first official meeting at a noonday luncheon Wednesday at 12:30 o'clock at the Atlanta Athletic club. The board of directors is made up of the officers, past presidents, chairmen of trade lines and chairmen of standing committees of the association, giving every interest in the association representation on the board and participation in the affairs of the association.

The spring membership meeting of the association to be staged either the latter part of March or the early part of April will take up the major portion of the board's attention Wednesday. At that time plans will be laid for disscussion of "How Retail Merchants Can Best Adapt Themselves, at the Present Time, to the Changing Conditions That Are Rapidly Taking Place in the Retail Trade?" This subject was given attention of the National Retail Dry Goods association at its annual convention recently in New York city, and brought forth a great deal of interest.

Discuss Meter Sales

PHI DELTA THETA FRATERNITY GIVES BANQUET MARCH 15

The Atlanta Alumni association of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity will hold its founders' day banquet at the Atlanta Athletic club at 6:30 o'clock Thursday night, March 15. This is the eightieth anniversary of the founding of the fraternity and an unusually entertaining program has been prepared.

Dr. Carter Helm Jones, president of the Atlanta Alumni association, is anxious for every member of the fraternity in Atlanta to make a particular effort to be on hand and desires that all members who have recently moved to Atlanta send their names and addresses in to the committee on arrangements.

Robert G. Lose, Joseph M. Clark, Jr., and Harry H. Hallman compose the banquet committee and request that all alumni make reservations as early as possible.

WEST INDES CRUISE BRINGS EARLY SPRING

"No longer is it necessary to stay at home and wait for spring to come.

Winter-weary persons can now sail away on a short holiday cruise especially arranged to greet the spring in regions of permanent springtime."

This was the statement Saturday of steamship officials, who added that "four of the most interesting islands where winter never comes will be visited on a 16-day West Indies cruise by the Veendam, of the Holland-America line, which sails from New York on March 17."

"Crossing the gulf stream," it was added, "this springtime pilgrimage reaches Bermuda on the second day out and halts for a visit to England's oldest colony. Jamaica, Cuba and the Bahama islands are also included, with two days spent at Havana."

This cruise of approximately 4,000 miles will be the third and last of the season for the Veendam. More than 400 passengers sailed on each of the earlier West Indies cruises by this popular steamer.

DR. MULLINS, BAPTIST LEADER, HERE TONIGHT

Dr. E. Y. Mullins, acknowledged leader of the Baptists of the world, as president of the Baptist World alliance, will speak at 7:30 o'clock tonight at Druid Hills Baptist church. He will reach Atlanta this afternoon and will stop at the Ansley hotel.

The visit of Dr. Mullins to Atlanta at this time is of particular interest in view of the approaching session of the Baptist World alliance at Toronto, Canada, in June. He was elected president of this world organization of Baptists at Stockholm, Sweden, in 1923.

Dr. Mullins also is president of the Southern Baptist Theological seminary and was president of the Southern Baptist convention from 1921 to 1924. He is one of the outstanding religious leaders of the generation, being an author, teacher and preacher. His sermon Sunday evening at Druid Hills will discuss the challenge of modern world conditions in terms of Christianity.

Dr. B. D. Gray, secretary of the home mission board of the Southern Baptist convention, will be the preacher at Druid Hills Sunday morning.

MAYOR OF DECATUR LAUDS BUILDING, LOAN ASSOCIATION

"Decatur is to be congratulated on its young but splendid building and loan association," according to Scott Candler, mayor of Decatur. This association, Mr. Candler says, although but a year old, has issued to the public over three-quarters of a million dollars in shares. It has hundreds of members and contributes to the community an institution which fosters and encourages home ownership.

JOHN H. TAIT.

John H. Tait, extension manager of the Decatur Building and Loan association, upon discussion of the exceptional success of the association, says that "building and loan associations have over 11,000,000 members in the United States, are conceded first rank in safety of all financial institutions of the land, and the state of Georgia is at last keeping pace with her sister states in the development of these splendid bodies.

"The associations have but two purposes," Mr. Tate explained, "safeguarding members' savings and encouraging home ownership, by loaning funds on first mortgages on homes repayable on a small monthly payment plan.

"The success of this gigantic movement is not only attributal to the distinct need for the associations, but in great part to the type and reputation of the men directing them," Mr. Tate said. The directors of the Decatur associations are men of an exceptional high caliber, and serve without financial reward.

Drdla, 'Souvenir' Composer, Lives in Poverty in Vienna

:: FAMOUS MUSICIAN WRITING HACK PIECES ::

A composer once wrote a song which gave pleasure to millions. In Europe and America it has been sung and played for years. The composer's name was known everywhere in the music world. Most people think Franz Drdla rich—perhaps retired on a competence.

A short time ago a comment in a radio program brought to public attention the fact that Drdla, whose "Souvenir" is one of the most popular pieces in the library of music, is living in poverty in Vienna, making a precarious living writing hack pieces for an immediate market. He continually plans bigger things, but his publishers assure him the popular pieces are the only things that will assure him a day-to-day income.

The words of the National Broadcasting company announcer, which brought Drdla's plight to notice, are bearing fruit in a program, "Souvenir," named after the composer's best known piece, which will be broadcast through stations associated with the N. B. C. Blue Network, Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock, Central Standard Time.

The full story of the plight of Drdla was learned when the Newspaper Enterprise association, its curiosity aroused by the announcer's words, sent its London representative, Milton Bronner, to Vienna to investigate. Bronner found Drdla torn between the necessity of supporting himself and two elderly sisters and his desire to complete several important compositions.

Bronner's report to his chief in New York was brought to the attention of the National Broadcasting company which invited the NEA Service to collaborate in presenting a program dedicated to Drdla and his works. "Souvenir," the theme number, will be played as a violin solo by Bert Hirsch, supported by a concert orchestra, after Fred F. Ferguson, president of the Newspaper Enterprise association, has told the story of Drdla's life and the writing of "Souvenir."

Other of Drdla's compositions which will be played by the orchestra in this program will be "Chanson Joyeuse," "Serenade in A," "J'y Pense," "Vision," "Concertante" and "Chant d'Amour."

His four most famous successes appeared in four years. "Serenade" was written in 1904, "Souvenir" in 1905, "Vision" in 1906 and "Madrigal" in 1907. While these have been played in America, the composer recieves no benefit, for prior to 1908 there was no treaty between the United States and Austria-Hungary governing copyrights. American musicians simply took over the works of Viennese composers without paying royalties. Since 1908—and especially since the war—Drdla has been forced by circumstances to write music which cannot achieve great popularity.

"Souvenir" and the other selections from Drdla's works will be broadcast through the following stations of the N. B. C. Blue Network: WJZ, New York; WBAL, Baltimore; KDKA, Pittsburgh; WJR, Detroit; KYW, Chicago; KWK, St. Louis; WREN, Lawrence, and KVOO, Tulsa.

Morehouse College Singers Plan Benefit Concert Next Friday

A benefit concert of the Morehouse Glee club and orchestra will be given Friday night, March 23, in Sisters' chapel, on the campus of Spelman college, for the purpose of raising $8,000 needed to complete the year's work at Morehouse, it is announced.

The concert is under the direction of Prof. Kemper Harreld, director of music at Morehouse, and organist and director of the mixed chorus at Spelman college. The concert is sponsored by the Morehouse Atlanta club.

This concert will be the first one given in the new Sisters' chapel of Spelman since its dedication recently by John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

Tickets may be secured from Morehouse college, it is announced.

TO know the resonant depths of Chaliapin's voice; the mellow beauty of Casal's violincello; —your Receiver must be able to bring out all the lower range of the musical scale.

Proper reproduction of low notes and heavy passages of music requires strong electrical current and a Receiver must have units of great capacity to handle such current. Material of this kind naturally has greater weight—and it is the massiveness of these heavy capacity units in a Stromberg-Carlson which makes the Receiver so heavy.

The Stromberg-Carlson shown in the illustration weighs about 250 lbs. No wonder that its tone quality is so superbly beautiful.

POPE WANTS STATE BUT NO SUBJECTS

BY SALVATORE CORTESI.
(Rome Correspondent of The Associated Press.)

Rome, March 3.—(AP)—Pope Pius XI is reported to have said "the territory granted to the holy see must be a state without subjects," in speaking of the possible solution of the "Roman question," for which negotiations, with evident good will on both sides, are in progress.

The Italian government, to comply with the pontiff's desire, is willing to displace the ancient Aurelia road and the railway line from Viterbo to Rome, both of which cross the territory to be ceded to the holy see, making them pass outside it. This arrangement will suppress the present railway station of St. Peter. For the same purpose all the houses recently built on this territory would be expropriated.

The wish of Pope Pius XI to have no subjects in his enlarged territory is prompted by the unwillingness of the vatican to burden itself with the governmental machinery necessary even for a small temporal state, such as police, law courts, prisons, postal and telegraph service and banks. It seems difficult to reconcile this attitude of the pope with the other desire attributed to him, that the residences of the 33 embassies and legation accredited to the holy see, together with those of the cardinals of Curia and, if not all, at least the most important of the congregations, should be on papal territory.

Cardinal Bourne, archbishop of Westminster, has stated that "the presence within the kingdom of Italy itself of the independent republic of San Marino, the existence of the sovereign principality of Monaco, in the republic of France, and the free state of Andorra, surrounded on every side by the jurisdiction of other sates, show how easily with a little good will the civil independence of the holy see might be adequately secured without detracting in any way from the essential unity of the kingdom of Italy."

MARINES LOSE FEW GUNS TO SANDINO

Managua, March 3.—(AP)—Since the United States marines opened their campaign for pacification of Nicaragua they have lost to the forces of Augustino Sandino only six rifles and pistols, according to an official statement issued by marine headquarters here today.

"During the past year," the statement read, "Sandino has obtained from marines in Nicaragua a total of about six rifles and pistols. These weapons fell into the hands of Sandinistas incident to the capture of two marines who lost their command and were captured by Sandino, later to be released.

"The seizures were also incident to individual casualties among marines in contacts with the enemy. From a plane which made a forced landing last winter and was immediately burned, Sandino obtained two machine guns. It is certain that the burning of the plane rendered these weapons useless. These were the only machine guns which could possibly have fallen into the hands of Sandino.

"Last winter in an encounter, the Sandinistas obtained a Browning automatic rifle from marines. The bolt of this rifle was removed before it fell into his hands."

MRS. VIOLA NAPIER INJURED IN CRASH

Macon, Ga., March 3.—(AP)—Mrs. Viola Ross Napier, city clerk and former representative of Bibb county in the legislature, was injured today when an automobile in which she was riding on a boulevard crashed into the side of a street car that witnesses said failed to stop at the boulevard. She was taken to a hospital and later to her home. Two others in the automoile also were hurt.

MRS. JOHN F. PURSER IS LAID TO LAST REST

Final rites for Mrs. John F. Purser, beloved Atlanta woman and wife of the late Rev. John F. Purser, who died Thursday morning at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. George W. Gifford, 650 Seminole avenue, N. E., were held Saturday morning from the West End Baptist church. The Rev. W. H. Major, pastor of the Woodward Avenue Baptist church, officiated and interment was in West View cemetery.

MRS. ESTHER EPLAN TO BE BURIED TODAY

The body of Mrs. Esther Eplan, of 907 Piedmont avenue, who died Friday morning at a private hospital, was taken Saturday night to Birmingham, Ala., for funeral services and interment today.

Mrs. Eplan was the wife of Moses Eplan, vice president of Nalpe, Inc., a Peachtree jewelry company, and a member of the firm of Eplan brothers, local loan dealers.

$115,000 MISSING IN TRAIN ROBBERY

Chicago, March 3.—Postal inspectors "got their men" but didn't get their money in their investigation of the $133,000 mail robbery at Evergreen Park, a suburb, a week ago today.

Five men were under indictment and a sixth has been arrested in connection with the robbery, but $115,000 in cash still was missing today.

Postal inspectors seeking trace of the loot dug holes last night in the yard of Charles S. Wharton, attorney not heretofore publicly connected with the case, but admittedly found no clues.

Charles Cleaver, leader of the gang, and four confederates named in confessions obtained by postal inspectors were joined in jail today by Otto Bihlmire, Poroda, Mich., who, police said, owned a maroon-colored car similar to that used in the robbery.

HUGHES SAYS AL WOULD BE A DUKE IN OLD COUNTRY

New York, March 3.—(United News.)—To the amusement of the assembled lawyers of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, former Governor Charles Evans Hughes visualized Governor Alfred E. Smith as a duke in introducing Smith to them today.

"If we had the customs of other lands," said Hughes, "Governor Smith would long ago have been elevated to the peerage. We would probably have started him as Baron Oliver, later made him Earl of Manhattan and finally the Duke of Albany."

Smith told the lawyers that on next December 31 he will have completed 31 years of "service to the city, county and state." He will then be 54 years old.

COOLIDGE PLEASED AT SOLONS' SPEED IN MAKING LAWS

Washington, March 3.—(United News.)—Following a conference today with President Coolidge, Senator Curtis, of Kansas, republican floor leader, said the president was highly pleased with the progress made this session by congress.

Senator Curtis declared the president particularly was gratified with the action taken on the major appropriation bills and on the long standing alien property measure.

The president was reported as saying the calendar was in better condition now than in any previous long session of congress.

MRS. MARY DEWITT DIES AT HOSPITAL

Mrs. Mary Devitt, of 392 Jackson street, N. E., well-known Atlanta woman, died early Saturday night at a private hospital, following a brief illness.

Funeral services will be held from the Sacred Heart church, of which she was a member, at a time to be announced later.

She is survived by her husband, W. V. Devitt; two daughters, Mrs. C. L. Folger and Miss Frances Devitt; a son, John Devitt; two sisters, Mrs. J. F. Bingham and Mrs. Eunice Bailey, both of Washington, D. C., and a brother, Will Batchelder, of Dunedin, Fla. Sam R. Greenberg & Co. will be in charge.

CANDIDATES APPEAR AT THREE RALLIES

With only two more working days intervening before voters of Fulton county begin the march to the polls to select officers to fill the six contested positions in Fulton county, candidates Saturday spurred their drives for votes, drew their lines tigher and prepared to wage whirlwind, last-minute drives for ballots.

Aspirants or their representatives appeared at three political rallies in widely-separated sections of the county, speaking in behalf of their respective candidacies.

Friends of Walter E. Harwell, candidate for Fulton county tax receiver, held an open meeting at the Kimball house, to which all candidates were invited; another meeting was held under the auspices of the Woman's club of the Northwest Baptist church, and a third meeting was staged at Stewart and Dill avenues.

Edwin F. Johnson and Mr. Harwell appeared at the Harwell rally, but Mr. Harwell did not take the stump. They also were represented at the other meetings.

Walter B. Stewart, Captain George M. Hope, Ed H. Inman, Dr. A. H. Cochran and Sam D. Hewiett, the five opponents for the two positions on Fulton county commission, spoke or were represented.

Mrs. Beulah Donehoo Manston, Mrs. Mabel Abbott MacNeill and Mrs. J. R. Wakefield, aspirants for the position of Fulton county treasurer, also were represented.

Sheriff James I. Lowry, who has held the position for twelve years, and his opponent, A. M. Corrie, also were in the field actively at work in bids for votes.

Carlton W. Binns, solicitor of the criminal court of Atlanta, and John S. McClelland, his opponent, also spoke.

All the meetings were well attended.

FAIR TO UNION LABOR SAYS EDWIN JOHNSON.

Edwin F. Johnson, candidate for tax receiver of Fulton county, Saturday afternoon sent to The Constitution a statement in which he emphatically denied allegations contained in a letter purporting to have been signed by J. S. D. Farmer and Luther Nations:

"This letter is absolutely false from beginning to end. Farmer is a man who at one time was in the employ of our factory," said Mr. Johnson, "and was discharged by our manager for incompetency. He has a peculiar mental slant and has borne a grievance against me ever since. I think he is more to be pitied than blamed. His imaginary grievance has been seized upon by my opponent, who seeks to capitalize it in a last-minute canard in the hope of bolstering up what he knows to be a losing campaign based on slander and misrepresentation.

"My record always has shown me to be fair to union labor, as evidenced by the fact that I was on two different occasions agreed on as umpire by the local union of street railway employees in wage disputes and gave general satisfaction to the public and to the employees. I am now honored by the hearty support of these men and know that they will not fail to resent such false and unfair statements in an attempt to mislead them.

"From every section of Fulton county the people are assuring me of their confidence and support. I am more grateful than they will ever know. My life has been an open book and no man can truthfully say that I harmed him. I have faith in the intelligence of the people and know that they demand fair play."

HARWELL ADDRESSES SUPPORTERS AT RALLY

Declaring that voters of Fulton county are prepared to go to the polls and "reward the unblemished record of public service which Walter E. Harwell has made during his ten years as city marshal," speakers at a rally of his friends Saturday night predicted victory for the Harwell ticket. Mr Harwell is a candidate for Fulton county tax receiver subject to the county democratic primary to be held Wednesday.

The meeting was held following a general rally at which all candidates spoke, but only his supporters attended the "closed session" held after adjournment of the general rally at the Kimball house.

"I have conducted my campaign on a clean, business-like plane and am assured that the uncompromising loyalty of my thousands of friends throughout the county, who are determined to promote government of the people, who oppose the domination of a system that has undertaken to usurp the authority that belongs not to a few but to all the people of Fulton county, will cause my election by an overwhelming majority," Mr. Harwell said.

"My experience as city marshal has so acquainted me with all details of the office that I am satisfied I will be well qualified to successfully handle the duties of tax receiver. When I am named to the position which I seek, it will be my great pleasure to serve the people of Fulton county in the future as I have done in the past, and guarantee efficient, conscientious, faithful and loyal service."

German Biographer Gets Lincoln Data In Visiting Coolidge

Washington, March 3.—(United News.)—Emil Ludwig, German biographer of Napoleon, Bismarck and others, went to the white house today to gather material for his proposed biography of Abraham Lincoln. He said later that he obtained some interesting impressions of the civil war president from Mr. Coolidge.

Ludwig said America was to be congratulated on having as its chief executive a person of "such intelligence as Mr. Coolidge's."

JOHNSON AND BINNS ANNOUNCE RALLIES

Friends of Edwin F. Johnson and Carlton W. Binns will hold special meetings at the Grill room of the Piedmont hotel, it was announced Saturday from the respective headquarters of the candidates.

Mr. Johnson, who is a candidate for Fulton county tax receiver, will hold his meeting at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon and Mr. Binns' meeting will begin at 7:30 o'clock at night. Mr. Binns, who is now solicitor of the criminal court of Atlanta, is a candidate for that position. He was appointed to succeed Roy Dorsey, resigned.

M'ADOO CONFIRMS WALSH SUPPORT

Washington, March 3.—(AP)—William G. McAdoo today confirmed the announcement of his friends that he would head a fight in California for Senator Walsh, of Montana, for president, and predicted that Walsh would have the California delegation.

In a three-sentence statement the former treasury secretary, himself a two-time candidate for the democratic presidential nomination, said it was correct that he would be on the slate of Walsh delegates in California, but he did not go into campaign issues or mention whether he would use his influence for Walsh in other states.

Mr. McAdoo's statement follows:

"The report is correct. The progressive democracy of California will give Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, enthusiastic support. I am confident that Senator Walsh will have the California delegation."

Valdosta Paper Changes Owners After Mishaps

Valdosta, Ga., March 3.—W. T. Lastinger and V. G. Hodges, of Hahira, have bought the Valdosta Journal and will have charge of the next issue, according to announcement today by H. B. Edwards, managing editor, who severs his connection entirely with the business.

Mr. Lastinger was for a time connected with the publication of The Gold Leaf, at Hahira, and Mr. Hodges has been connected with The Journal for some time.

The Journal began publication in November, 1927, and before the end of the month was temporarily put out of business by what has said to have been an incendiary fire. After several weeks the paper began publication from its own plant and a few weeks ago it was again put out of business by serious sabotage damage, the death of a linotype operator in a mysterious automobile accident on the highway and the same week-end Editor Edwards received a threatening letter warning him that they would "get you next."

After publication was resumed for the second time two issues have appeared, the one this week announcing the change in ownership. It was stated that the new owners next week will announce the policy of the paper.

CHICAGO ATTORNEY FACES CONTEMPT IN MURDER CASE

Chicago, March 3.—(AP)—William Scott Stewart, former assistant state attorney, who has scored a number of notable successes since he left the prosecutor's office for private practice, was cited for contempt of court upon allegations of intimidation of witnesses growing out of the murder trial in which Dr. Amante Rongetti was sentenced to the electric chair.

Stewart, it was who saved the life of Russell Scott, murderer, by a last minute plea of insanity when he faced the gallows and kept him alive through months of court work until Scott finally killed himself. Stewart also successfully defended William Darling Shepherd, lawyer, against the charge that he fed fatal typhoid germs to his wife's former ward, William Nelson McClintock, who left a $1,000,000 estate to Shepherd.

STATE TO PROBE ALLEGED FRAUD IN BABY ADOPTION

Lansing, Mich., March 3.—(AP)—A thorough investigation of the circumstances attending the alleged fraudulen trecord in the case of four-year-old Joseph Boyer, was ordered today by Wilbur M. Brucker, attorney general, to "protect the sanctity of the state's records" and possibly to place the responsibility if fraud has been committed.

Mrs. Myron L. Boyer has admitted she adopted the child when he was a few hours old and represented him to her husband as his own.

Work Will Start On Two Viaducts Within 60 Days

With practically all of the preliminary work incident to construction of the twin viaducts over the railroad tracks at Central avenue and Pryor street completed, actual construction of the viaducts is expected to start within 60 days, it was learned from officials Saturday.

Plans and specifications have been received and bids on the projects will be opened on April 2 and immediately after the bids have been opened and the contracts awarded work will start, it was stated.

Walter F. Schultz, consulting engineer for the viaducts, stated Saturday that with the present basis of material prices and labor costs, the city would be able to save upwards of $500,000 if the work is started within the next 60 days. Mr. Schultz urged that every effort be made to take advantage of the present situation regarding materials and labor.

The work of lowering the railroad tracks practically has been completed by the Brooks-Calloway company and Wall street will be turned over to paving contractors on Monday.

Grading of the new street to be cut from Wall to Decatur street will start within the next few days, officials stated.

YOUNG WOMEN—Would you like to become graduate nurses in a short time and be paid while learning at a registered training school in New York city which is under the jurisdiction of the state of New York? You will receive free instruction and training—also free room, free meals, free laundry, etc. In addition to all this, you will receive $25 monthly from the day you enter. Other professions are overcrowded, but there are not enough graduate nurses either for private nursing, for public health service, for social service, or for executive positions in hospitals, etc.—all paying excellent salaries. If you are 18 to 35 years old, with at least one year of high school or equal education, you have this wonderful opportunity. Enroll in our shortened course; (only two years and four months) and immediately after graduation you can start earning an excellent salary. You should apply now for classes which start in April and September. Write immediately to the superintendent, Training School for Nurses, Lebanon Hospital, New York City. In your application be sure to state your age and education.

DRUID HILLS
ON a beautiful, wooded, slightly elevated lot 100 feet wide and running back to the gulf course, is a wonderful brick home with four bedrooms, two baths and all that goes with this type of home. It is less than three years old and the original investment is $27,500. We are fortunate in being able to offer this to a real buyer at $23,000. This is way below value and we recommend this highly. GRIFF-REYNOLDS CO. OBSERVES BIRTHDAY

The Griff Reynolds company today observes the first anniversary of the establishment of the second store at 77 Peachtree street, and officials of the concern Saturday issued a statement expressing appreciation of the patronage of Atlanta pepole which has enabled the company to enjoy a prosperous year.

The company is headed by Griff Reynolds and Jay R. Reynolds, two of the best-known of Atlanta's veteran clothiers, both of whom have engaged in the retail clothing business here for over 30 years. Griff Reynolds is known to hundreds of Atlanta men through his store, 14 Marietta street, where for many years he has handled high grade, standard lines of men's furnishings and built up a wide clientele.

Jay Reynolds is equally well known, having been connected with Frohsin's for many years and making many friends, both men and women, in his work there. A year ago Jay Reynolds joined Griff Reynolds in the latter's company, and the opened the Peachtree street shop.

"We believe we have merited the splendid support accorded us by our friends during the past year," Griff Reynolds said Saturday. "We have handled only the highest grades of standard men's wear and we have backed our merchandise up with 100 per cent service.

"We shall continue to maintain this standard at all times, and cordially invite our many friends in the city to visit us at the opening of the week and share with us the pleasure and gratification at a year of busy and prosperous service won by unfailing adherance to the highest ideals of business."

ROBERT S. PADEN, ATLANTAN, GIVEN G. E. HONOR AWARD

Schenectady, March 3.—(Special.) Robert S. Paden, of Atlanta, is one of 26 employees of the General Electric company honored yesterday with the Charles H. Coffin foundation award for contributions in 1927 "toward the increase in the efficiency of the company or progress in the electrical art." The announcement is made by the advisory committee of the General Electric company.

ROBERT S. PADEN.

Mr. Paden is a salesman in the southeastern district, and the award is made, among other things, "for unselfishly helping and educating junior salesmen who were starting in the same line of work as that in which he is engaged."

Inventions in lamp-making equipment which resulted in a saving of $190,000 in labor cost and a machine investment saving in excess of $400,000 as well as great saving of floor space brought awards to John J. Malloy and Ludwig Staudenmeir, of the National Lamp works at Cleveland.

HENRY L. CECIL SPREADS GOSPEL OF LOVE OF BOOKS

"A preparation for 'living' as well as for 'earning a living'" is what the reading of books is considered by Henry L. Cecil, field worker of the bureau of lectures of the National Association of Book Publishers.

HENRY L. CECIL.

To spread the gospel of the love of books and the habit of reading Mr. Cecil is addressing schools and clubs throughout the country. He is well equipped to know how to reach the minds of young people for he has come in intimate contact with them through his wide experience as a school superintendent. He believes that as many boys and girls as possible should be helped to realize that books offer to them today a fuller, richer life than to former generations for, in addition to the masterpieces of the past, an ever-increasing store of good new books is theirs to draw upon for delight, wisdom and power.

Mr. Cecil has much that is stimulating to say to students about their recreational reading, building their own book collections, using the school and public libraries.

DUNCAN AIKMAN, FAMOUS WRITER, PAYS VISIT HERE

Duncan Aikman, author of "Calamity Jane and the Lady Wildcats," an editor of the El Paso Times and a critic of contemporary American life, paid a brief visit Friday to his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil E. Perryman, at 1079 North avenue, N. E.

Mr. Aikman's health began to fail some time ago while he was a member of the editorial staff of the New York Evening Post and he went to Texas, where he has won recognition as one of the outstanding literary figures of the southwest.

He is at present touring the south for the purpose of securing material for his next book, "Hallelujah," a study of eccentric religion.

Besides "Calamity Jane," Mr. Aikman is best known perhaps for his eight articles in the American Mercury: "The Statesman as Artist," "Arsenals of Hatred," "Santa Barbara Has a Fiesta," "Hell Along the Border," "Prairie Fire," "The Springfield Republican," "He Sentimentalists," and "Deadwood the Dreadful." Several of these have been included in his collection of essays published under the title, "The Home Town Mind."

PELHAM OFFICIAL OF ATLANTA BANK

H. F. Pelham, of Flint, Mich., has been elected a vice president and assistant trust officer of the Citizens & Southern National bank, it was announced Saturday by H. Lane Young, vice president and executive manager. Mr. Pelham will make his home in Atlanta and will operate a service unit for trust development, cooperating with the trust departments of all the Citizens and Southern offices located in Atlanta, Savannah, Macon, Augusta, Athens and Valdosta.

Commenting on this new service unit, Mr. Young said that "the trust department is rendering the most far-reaching service in modern banking through the conservation of the wealth of the community.

"Through the trust department," he said, "a man projects himself and his ideals into the future of his business and family, so that when he is taken, the affairs of his business or family are carried on in just the manner he desired. In these days of multifarious taxes and laws of descent and distribution, it is desirable that an estate specialist of outstanding ability and experience act in an advisory capacity with attorneys in assisting people to put their affairs in order. The demand for this service has been growing so fast during recent years that our institution, after canvassing the country for more than a year, has selected Mr. Pelham, who will be primarily at the service of business concerns and individuals in working out proper wills and trusts of all kinds. He will also cooperate with the life insurance underwriters in conserving proceeds of life insurance through trusts—we recognize this is one of the most important trust services, and inaugurated the life insurance trust department one year ago."

Formerly of Birmingham.

Mr. Pelham is a graduate of the University of Michigan with an A. B. in 1911 and an LL.B. in 1913. Upon leaving college he practiced law in Birmingham, Ala., until 1915, when he returned to Jackson, Mich., and specialized in estates practice until August, 1917, when he entered the war and served as captain of battery B, 314th field artillery, 80th division, being promoted to major prior to discharge. In 1920 Mr. Pelham became connected with the Detroit Trust company, the largest trust company in Michigan, being in charge of trust development service and estates administration for the state of Michigan, outside of Detroit. In 1924 he was elected trust officer of the First National bank of Flint Mich., organized and built up the trust department to one of the largest and most varied services in the state. He is one of the recognized authorities of trust service in the country, being elected president of the Michigan State Education association last November. He is serving his second year as a member of the national executive committee of trust development division of the Financial Advertisers' association.

It will be of interest to football fans that while practicing law in Birmingham, Mr. Pelham was an accredited football official in the Southern Intercollegiate conference, officiating at several University of Georgia games during the seasons of 1913, 1914 and 1915. He was closely acquainted with the late Coach Cunningham, of the University of Georgia.

Administration of trusts in the Atlanta office of the Citizens & Southern National bank is handled by Thomas C. Erwin and L. H. Parris(trust officers, with the cooperation of a trust committee composed of Robert C. Alston, Asa G. Candler, Jr., Thomas C. Erwin, John W. Grant, Frank Hawkins, Norman C. Miller, H. Y. McCord and H. Lane Young.

Miss Emmie Stewart, Beloved by Emory Students, Is Ill Here

Miss Emmie Stewart, former beloved boarding house operator for Emory college students at Oxford, Ga., is critically ill in the Wesley Memorial hospital, but was reported to be resting well late Saturday night.

Miss Stewart has been in failing health for some time and since the death of her sister, Miss Sally Stewart, several years ago, she has made her home with her nephew, Dr. Stewart Roberts, on Ponce de Leon avenue.

Astronomy Fortifies Belief in Existence Of God, Says Hatcher

Voicing the opinion that no man who devotes time to the infinite study of the heavens and of astronomy can fail to believe in the existence of God, Thurston Hatcher, prominent local amateur astronomer, Saturday night was given the unqualified approval of the Atlanta Astronomical society at its regular meeting at the Chamber of Commerce building.

Speaking on the topic "The Relation of Astronomy to Religion," Mr. Hatcher pointed out that his discussion must necessarily be more or less confined to his own personal experiences, and that from the time he first began a study of astronomy his belief in a divine being had steadily increased with each new observation made.

Following Mr. Hatcher's talk, an open discussion of the question revealed that other members of the society were of the same opinion.

The society appointed a committee to arrange for the expected visit to Atlanta next week of Dr. Harlow Shapley, of the Harvard observatory.

CLARENCE DUNBAR, NATIONAL SHRINE HEAD, HERE FRIDAY

Clarence M. Dunbar, of Providence, R. I., imperial potentate of the Shrine, will be honor guest next Friday of Yaarab temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., and elaborate plans are being made for his reception and entertainment while in the city, it was learned Saturday afternoon.

Imperial Potentate Dunbar was elevated to his present high office at the imperial council meeting last year in Atlantic City and will conclude his present term of office at the annual session in Miami, Fla., in May.

He is a member of the Palestine temple of Providence and is a celebrated cornetist and was the cornet soloist of the temple's band before being elevated to the post of imperial potentate.

MARINES WOUNDED IN DARAILI FIGHT SAID RECOVERING

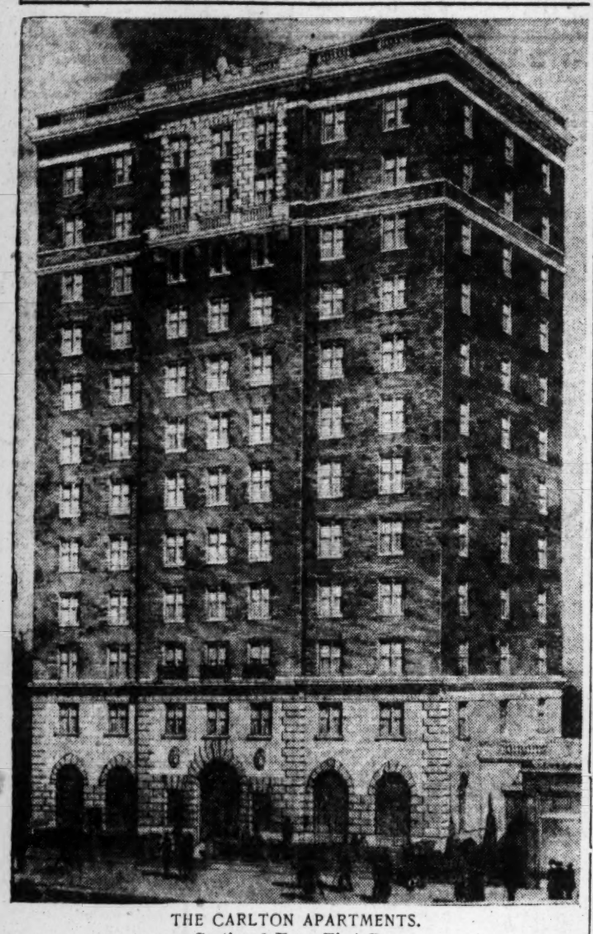

Managua, Nicaragua, March 3.—(AP) The eight United States marines who were wounded in the Daraili fight in which five of their comrades were killed reached the city today in airplanes from Ocotal. All were believed to be out of danger and when taken to the hospital were able to sit in chairs.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

CARLTON APARTMENTS CHANGE HANDS AT SACRIFICE PRICE

Big Apartment Hotel Sold

THE CARLTON APARTMENTS.

rary hindrances have made sale of the property at a sacrifice inevitable, the past history of the property reveals the steady enhancement in value made by real estate in this section.

The site, before improvement by the large apartment structure, was acquired by The Carlton, Inc., in 1924, through purchase of two separate parcels, for a total of $81,500. The north portion, measuring 55 feet on Peachtree, was bought from J. G. Burckhardt for $41,500, while the south portion, fronting 56 feet, was bought from G. L. Crandall for $40,000. Ten years earlier, Mr. Burckhardt had purchased his parcel for $11,000, while a considerable gain also was realized by Mr. Crandall, who had purchased his portion from the Massell Realty company.

The improved property brought approximately $775,000 when sold, December 8, 1925, to Mrs. Julia M. Muller, the last sale to be consummated before default of the bonds was threatened. Mrs. Muller assumed $500,000 in first mortgage bonded debt, and $36,000 in second mortgage bonds. The sale involved exchange of properties as part consideration. Later Mrs. Muller sold her equity in the Carlton apartments to F. C. Owens, Inc.

Atlanta Trust Appointed.

When the Adair bonds were forfeited, the court appointed the Atlanta Trust company as trustees. Subsequent to this the property passed into hands of the Carlton Operating company, Inc. The outstanding bonds were reduced from $500,000 to $490,000, the amount involved in the latest purchase.

In the negotiations to obtain ownership of the property, the purchaser was represented by Dana Belser, of the Atlanta Trust company. The offer of $352,000 was submitted to the Adair Bond Holders' Protective committee, which has deposited with it 93 per cent of the outstanding first mortgage bond issue, amounting to $457,000 in face value. The offer was accepted, subject to approval of court, after agreed to by the three largest bond holders, the Fire Association of Philadelphia, the Globe Indemnity company and a Mr. Morris, whose representatives met with the committee to pass on bids for the bonds.

The committee's recommendation for acceptance of the offer will be made to the court within 30 days, Judge Bryan stated. The committee has been trying for the past six months to dispose of the holdings in the most satisfactory manner to owners of bonds, Judge Bryan remarked, characterizing the bid made in the name of H. O. Cox, as "a very fine offer." In addition to Chairman Bryan, the bond committee includes Wilmer L. Moore, Dr. W. J. Blalock, R. W. Courts, Jr., Colonel Sidney Beaver and Harry Rankin.

EXPANSION MARKS BUILDING PROGRAM

General expansion is the keynote for the Atlanta Realty and Construction company in 1928, according to announcement Saturday by S. W. Bacon, Jr., well-known figure in local real estate circles and recently appointed sales manager, revealing the increased activity being entered into by the large construction firm.

With the notable record of 87 homes completed by the Atlanta Realty and Construction company for its clients during 1927, the quota for the current year has been increased to 100 new homes to be erected. With only eight weeks passed, the company is already well on its way to surpassing this quota, according to reports.

Another important expansion is seen in the addition of three efficient salesmen to the company's organization, necessitated by the handling of a greater volume of business.

Mr. Bacon, who heads the enlarged sales force, has been in the home-building field for many years. He is also widely known for his newspaper work here, having been connected in an executive capacity with an Atlanta newspaper for 14 years. A prosperous business year for 1928 is anticipated with the company's steady expansion.

The Atlanta Realty and Construction company has just completed The Constitution's model home in Haynes Manor, which is one of the notable construction feats accomplished by this concern.

MORRIS BUILDING CONTRACTS MOUNT

Consummation of six contracts for new homes, involving construction costing $39,350 in moderate size dwellings, were announced Saturday by Keller F. Melton, sales manager of the F. P. & George J. Morris building department.

The deals were all closed during the latter portion of February and bring the total for the first eight weeks of this year up to 15 homes built, or to be built, for the owners. This volume is regarded as an unusual record, notwithstanding the fact that it was attained during the mid-winter season. The aggregate cost of the homes contracted for during this period has passed the quarter million mark.

The new residences contracted for include an English type dwelling to be erected for Miss Edna Baker and Miss Pauline Baker on Morningside drive. It will be of distinctive architectural design, constituting what is known as one and a half story structure. A feature of the residence will be the tile roof adding materially to the English effect.

The Morris building department will erect a one-story bungalow for Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Gunn on Rogers avenue, in West End Park. It will be an artistic adaptation of American architecture and will contain six rooms and bath.

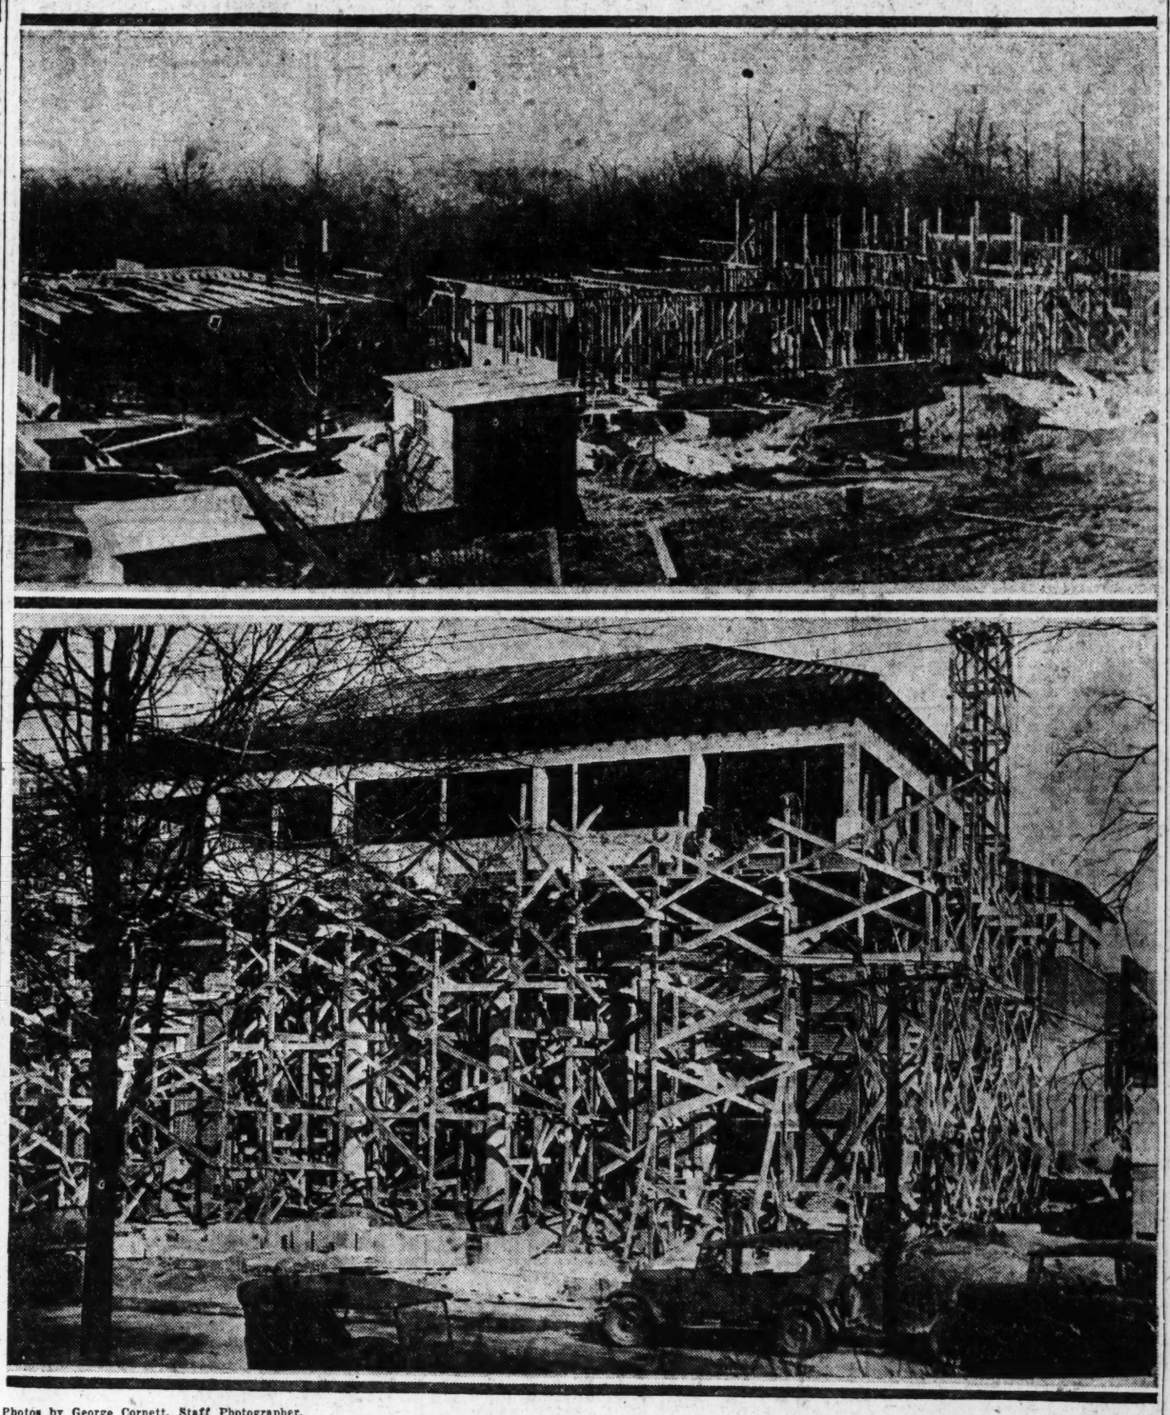

An American style bungalow is also to be built for Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Olson on North Decatur road. It will be of brick construction and contain six rooms and bath.

The Morris building department will construct a six-room bungalow on Ponce de Leon avenue, in Decatur, for Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Gleason. The architectural style is to be semi-English, providing flexibility for the designer's creative powers.

A large bungalow of the English type is to be built for Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Claxton on Huntington road, in Brookwood Hills. In addition to seven rooms and two baths on the main floor the dwelling will have a large well appointed basement, providing quarters for the servants.

A home for Mr. and Mrs. O. O. Lynch will be built on Dill avenue. It will be a five-room bungalow of brick structure. On all of these residences construction has been started or is to be begun immediately.

REALTORS ACTIVE IN COMMITTEES

Activity of the Atlanta Real Estate board is being maintained at a peak, it was indicated in announcement of committee meetings to be held this week and report of those conducted during the past week, as given out Saturday by Frank C. Owens, president.

Members of the finance committee, who will meet Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock, are Ward Wight, chairman; John J. Thompson, M. H. Liebman, George L. Harrison and Dana Belser. Important matters pertaining to appropriations covering activities of the real estate board for this year will be considered at the meeting, Chairman Wight announced.

R. R. Otis, chairman of the rates, rules and customs committee, has called a meeting on March 8, Thursday afternoon, at 4 o'clock at the office of the real estate board to discuss the recent report of the committee outlining the regulations covering services and compensation of members of the board. Final action of this committee will be recommended at the officers and directors meeting, to be held March 14.

The rates, rules and customs used at present by the members of the board were drawn up about ten years ago, and in many instances they in no way apply to the business of today, it was stated. It is felt that the obsoleteness of the regulations under which the real estate men are working today is somewhat of a handicap, and that all will be benefited by a new set of principles governing the actions of the members of the board in selling real estate so as to meet every requirement at time and in the near future.

President Owens states that an interesting meeting was held at the office of the board during the past week by the taxation committee, of which J. H. Ewing is chairman.

At this meeting ways and means by which names of all real estate brokers in Fulton county who did not pay the state tax of $50 for the year 1927 could be secured and then such legal steps could be taken as provided by the law in enforcing those who did not pay to pay the $50 and the penalty, were discussed. Plans were outlined by which the members of the committee were to confer with state and county officers charged with collecting this tax in regard to prosecuting those who did not pay the 1927 fax. All should be forced to pay in fairness to those who willingly paid it and in no way tried to avoid it, committee members declared.

Those present at the meeting of the taxation committee were as follows: H. E. Craig, J. L. McLendon, J. H. Ewing, John J. Thompson, P. C. Maddox and Oliver Dolvin.

The membership committee, of which R. W. Evans is chairman, met at the office of the board Wednesday morning. At this meeting those attending reported success in securing new members, and quite a few applications were recommended for election by the directors at their next meeting.

Chairman Evans stated that the next meeting will be held on Wednesday, March 14. All members of the membership committee were personally requested by the chairman to call upon their prospects before that time and come to the meeting prepared to make a definite report of their work regarding the membership campaign.

President Owens in discussing the meeting of the membership committee stated that he is pleased with its efforts. More than 25 new members have been added to the real estate board since the first of the year through the members of this committee. He also stated that he is pleased with work the affiliated membership committee is doing in securing applications from property owners and those engaged in a kindred line of business in Atlanta.

The Day in Finance

BY R. L. BARNUM

Average Price for Stocks During Week Half Way Between Year's High and Low—Wall Street Finds Presidential Election Bigger Factor Than Expected—Downward Trend of Prices Not Surprising.

New York, March 3.—(AP)—This year's high average price of fifty representative stocks was made January 4 at 183.22 which compared with the high for all time of 185.47 made on October 4 last. This year's low average price was made February 20 at 173.13. Early this week the stock market began to reflect less selling pressure and more buying with the average price by the middle of the week half way between the year's high and low. Instead of continuing to recover, however, the market ran into selling as has been the case repeatedly this year with the high level for each recovery below the high for the previous rally.

Well informed Wall street is confident that a liquidating stock market has been witnessed so far this year with the market becoming oversold at times and then rallying on short covering only to again run into selling. This year's extreme decline of ten points in the average price of fifty stocks was accompanied by the advance in the rediscount rate starting at Chicago, firmer call and time money, the publication of some very unfavorable corporation earnings for 1927, especially the last quarter, increased talk about widespread unemployment.

In this week's March 1 review of the general trade situation and outlook the National City Bank points out that the steel and automobile industries have had a substantial recovery from the December and January low points but it is then added "But the situation is still marked by irregularities and prospects for the future continue confused. Taking business as a whole the gains have not been broad enough to carry general conviction and a prevalent attitude is still one of uncertainty as to how much of the recent improvement can be counted upon as permanent."

Trend Not Surprising

This week's news indicated after its costly 1927 over-production experience the oil industry is now in shape to show some improvement. Reports from the automobile industry for spring business were highly encouraging. Improvement was also reported in the tool manufacturing trade, an industry which in the past has accurately forecast changes in general trade. Weekly freight car loadings, however, were again discouraging and the recognized spokesman for the steel and iron trade frankly admitted that "conflicting tendencies in the steel trade are becoming more sharply defined."

It is not surprising in view of the foregoing that the trend of the stock market so far this year has been downward with rallies that have not carried through. Insiders in many corporations knew long before the close of 1927 that the year's earnings were going to be disappointing, but there is a question as to whether even insiders in Briggs Manufacturing, for example, knew at the end of 1927 how bad earnings for the last quarter of the year would be. This week's statement showed net income for 1927 at $1,155,000 equal to 57 cents a share on the stock against $8,178,000 or $4.08 a share for 1926 with the returns for the fourth quarter of the year showing a net loss of over one and a quarter millions against net income for the corresponding period of 1926 of not far from $1,500,000.

Wall street is now beginning to realize that the forthcoming presidential election is more of a factor in general trade for this year than had been expected. For political reasons attention is being called to existing unemployment. Pending investigations at Washington in which politics are also involved are not doing general trade and confidence any good. This is especially true of the pending senate broker's loan investigation. There is no disguising the fact, however, that some of the things that are being said at the brokers' loan investigation are disturbing only because true.

Says Situation Is Bad.

H. Parker Willis, the first witness to be called this week in the senate brokers' loan investigation, knows enough about finance, banking and the federal reserve system to have taken an active part in drawing the bill which became the federal act, also to have served as the first secretary of the federal reserve board.

Willis did not hesitate to express the belief this week that based on the figures made public by the banks themselves the amount of credit being used in buying and carrying securities is a menace to the country. He questioned the ability except indirectly of the federal reserve board to restrict further inflation in brokers' loans and immediately bring about deflation as called for in the La Follette resolution. In the opinion of Willis the task of bringing about deflation of brokers' loans belongs to the member bankers themselves and not to either the federal reserve board or congress.

Willis did not hesitate to express the belief that the existing situation in the brokers' loan situation in this federal reserve district is worse than the situation existing in 1921 as a result of the speculation in high priced commodities and farm land. The banks of the country learned their lesson in 1921, Willis pointed out, and have since been extraordinarily careful not to lend money to promote speculation in commodities or land, adding "but there has been no such hesitation about financing stock operations and we have built up a huge structure on which the banks have provided funds carrying along trading that has spread very widely over the country so that a great number of people who have no knowledge of the market are now trading."

He predicted that a situation is soon to come in the stock market such as that which occurred in agriculture in 1921.

Willis merely said in his way what was pointed out at the end of 1927 by a governor of one of the federal reserve banks who after giving figures showing the expansion that has occurred in bank loans since 1921 together with the advance that has occurred in security prices said: "It is perhaps a matter of opinion how far we can go with prudence in permitting liquid bank credit at cheap rates to be absorbed for capital purposes. The question is raised in the mind of the writer (Governor Seay of the federal reserve bank of Richmond), whether we have not been lifting ourselves by our own bootstraps—whether we are not living in a fool's paradise. We certainly have one fool across the border."

Judge Roscoe Luke To Conduct Series Of Atlanta Sermons

Thomasville, Ga., March 3.—Judge Roscoe Luke, of the Georgia court of appeals, whose home is in Thomasville, left here today for Atlanta, where he will conduct a series of meetings in the Gordon Street Presbyterian church. The services will begin Sunday evening at 7:45, and Judge Luke will preach each evening for one week.

Massell Realty Company Activity Exceeds $433,000 In Various Transactions

Many Construction Enterprises Now Under Way; Leases Feature Property Deals.

Recent real estate transactions aggregating $433,000 in sales, purchases, leases and construction developments on property of the Massell Realty company were announced Saturday by S. A. Massell, secretary. Disclosing one of the largest movements of property recorded in the local market for some time, the transactions touch on nearly all phases of real estate activity and involve commercial holdings in every section of the city.

New buildings now in process of construction by the Massell Realty company will cost $136,000. Leases recently negotiated on Massell property aggregate in excess of $252,000, while the company has just purchased a commercial structure for $15,000 and sold another for $30,000.

In the construction work launched by the Massell company is included a three-story commercial building to cost $65,000, being erected on the southeast corner of Spring and Linden streets. It has been leased to the Yarbrough-Mentzer company, Studebaker automobile agents, for a term of years at an aggregate rental of $35,000. The lease was negotiated through the office of Keenan & Chambers, Inc., as agents.

Improve Vacant Lots.

The Massell company is improving a vacant lot on Houston street, near Ivy street, with a one-story commercial building, to contain 8,000 square feet of floor space and cost $17,500. A lease has been negotiated on the structure through the real estate department of Haas & Howell, as agents, with Johnnie Aikens lessee.

A third building now being erected is located on Piedmont avenue, near Edgewood avenue. The plans call for a one-story commercial structure, measuring approximately 50 by 200 feet. It is being built by the construction department of the Massell firm for J. H. Milam & Co., at a cost of $20,000. The lease calls for an aggregate rental of $25,000, with the building to be ready for occupancy on March 5.

The Massell Realty company is improving the lot which it owns on the northeast corner of Spring street and Linden way with an automobile service station to cost $10,000 and be ready for occupancy about March 15. It has been leased to and is being built according to the plans and specifications of, the Auto Ignition and Battery company, at an aggregate rental of $10,500.

Buy and Sell.

The company is improving a site on Edgewood avenue, near Fort street, with a one-story commercial building for the H. M. Long Printing company. The structure will contain 6,500 square feet and will cost $12,500. It is to be completed by April 1 and has been leased for five years at a rental aggregating $9,000.

A structure is being erected for C. W. Hunter & Co., dealers in stock feed, on a site measuring 20 by 150 feet on Lee street, near Campbellton road. It will cost $6,500. The aggregate rental is $4,500.

The Massell Realty company sold the property at 160-162-164 Decatur street to S. H. Kulbersh for a consideration of $30,000. The property has a frontage of 50 feet and extends back 100 feet. It is improved with a two-story commercial structure and leased to tenants. The purchaser gave as part consideration the store property at 833 Capitol avenue valued at $18,000.

In another deal the Massell company bought the property at 121-123 Peters street, from A. D. Greenfield et al, for a consideration of $15,000. The property measures 55 by 105 feet, and borders on Bradbury street in the rear. It is improved with three store buildings covering the entire lot.

Many Leases Closed.

The lease transactions negotiated on property owned by the Massell company during the past eight weeks are as follows:

To M. Rich & Bros. Co., at 32 South Forsyth street, store building.

To Henderson & Kreis, the southwest corner of Whitehall and Gordon streets, filling station.

To Lambeth-Eskridge Motor company, auto sales room, 780 Gordon street, West End.

To John Nikas, at 243 Spring street, storeroom.

Big Lease Renewals Seen For '28; Dull Week Passes

BY HARRY M. PASCHAL,
Vice President Atlanta Title & Trust Company

[Editorial Note: In the following article Mr. Paschal reviews recent developments of the local real estate market. Mr. Paschal is in a position comparable to a clearing house for information on activity of the property market. Through the present and subsequent articles he will furnish readers of The Constitution real estate page with an outline of current developments and the trend of realty dealings.]

A review of the transfers of real estate for the eighth week in this year shows a decrease, both in volume and in the aggregate, as compared with the eighth week in 1927. For the eighth week of 1927 there were 427 transfers recorded, the aggregate amount being $852,143.66, while for the eighth week of 1928 the number of transfers was only 391 and the aggregate amount was $604,839.32.

For the same week in 1927 the number of mortgages and loan deeds recorded was 342, amounting in the aggregate to $1,024,731.39, while for the same week in the current year the number of mortgages and loan deeds was only 280, and the aggregate amount $780,643.54, a decrease in 1928 of 62 in number, and $244,087.85 in amount.

The number of building permits for the eighth week of 1928 is exactly the same as the same week in 1927, being 83 in number; but the aggregate amount of these permits for the current year, $264,538, exceeds the 1927 eighth week total $82,663. There is still a great flow of money into Georgia, and especially Atlanta, for investment in first mortgage loans on real estate. While most of this money is being loaned at 5 1-2 and 6 per cent on property located on the north side, we know of several loans which have been made on semi-central property at interest rates as low as 5 per cent.

A great many leases are now expiring, and several very large concerns are on the lookout for desirable locations.

The building on the east side of Peachtree street opposite the Piedmont hotel, leased by Maier & Berkele, is now being remodeled, and this concern will take possession as soon as the remodeling is completed, which will be about the first part of April. They have occupied their present quarters on Whitehall street continuously since September 5, 1892.

Four Property Leases Closed By Ward Wight

Four central and semi-central property leases aggregating more than $75,000 were announced Saturday by officials of Ward Wight & Co., agents in the transactions.

The leases disclose increasing activity in the field of medium size commercial rentals. At the same time the deals involve property in widely separated portions of the city.

The following leases are included in the list by Ward Wight & Co.

Property at the corner of Piedmont avenue and Tenth street, for W. A. Fuller to the Standard Oil company.

Structure at 546 Spring street, for Massell Realty company to the Club Aluminum company.

Building at 344 Fair street, S. W., for Massell Realty company to the Whitehall Chevrolet company.

Peachtree street location for the Standard Oil company.

COLLEGE DESTROYED 3 TIMES IN 31 YEARS

Port Hope, Ont., March 3.—(AP)—For the third time in 31 years Trinity college virtually was destroyed by fire today.

The fire started in the skating rink and spread to the gymnasium and the main college building, causing loss estimated at $500,000. The only building not destroyed was the junior school at the opposite end of the campus. None of the 150 students and members of the staff was injured.

ATLANTAN BOUND OVER ON NARCOTIC CHARGE

Robert Morris, of a local hotel, who was arrested Friday by Special Officer H. Blackwell and A. H. Duncan, a member of a local detective agency, was bound over to the federal grand jury under a $300 bond Saturday afternoon by Judge J. Brown, of Newnan, acting in the place of Commissioner L. S. Ledbetter. Morris, according to police, was found in possession of 20 grains of morphine.

GROUND TO BE BROKEN FOR CHURCH THURSDAY

Ground-breaking exercises will be held at the Franklin Memorial African Methodist Episcopal Zion church, Boulevard at Irwin street, at 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon. A number of the leaders of the city in religious and educational circles, both white and colored, will take part on the program.

December	17.70	17.70	17.70	17.70	17.84

New York, March 3.—(AP)—The cotton market was lower today under liquidation and selling evidently promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables and prospects for rains in the southwest. May contracts sold off to 18.33, or 23 points below yesterday's closing quotation and closed at 18.40. The general market closed steady at net declines of 11 to 17 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 12 to 15 points. Initial offerings were comparatively small and were readily enough absorbed to cause rallies of several points, but the market eased again under realizing or liquidation by recent buyers and some selling for local and southern account. Selling was not particularly active or aggressive, but demand was limited, the decline extended to 18.15 for March and 17.83 for October, or about 19 to 24 points net lower. Closing prices showed rallies of 7 or 8 points from the lowest on covering.

The prospect for rains in southwest Texas was considered favorable from the coming crop standpoint, as subsoil moisture is still supposed to be deficient in some parts of west Texas, some observers saying there appeared to be a little more southern selling here during early trading than recently. May was offered more freely. Some selling of that position against purchases of October, supposedly to undo old straddles and a narrowing of the old crop premium, may have encouraged reactionary sentiment.

Private cables reported hedging with local, continental and Bombay liquidation at Liverpool and that trade calling had been the chief support. These advices, however, said demand for cotton cloths in Manchester was well sustained with freer buying of yarns made from both American and Egyptian cotton. A little continental buying was reported in the market here during early trading, but it was not much in evidence in the forenoon.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 102,000 bales, against 196,000 last year, and 103,000 two years ago. It was reported that about 5,000 bales of cotton were being shipped out of the local stock today for Liverpool.

NEW ORLEANS CLOSES 7 TO 10 POINTS LOWER.

New Orleans, March 3.—(AP)—Cotton prices tended toward lower levels today under selling induced by lower Liverpool cables, rains in the west, and prospects for unsettled weather in the belt over the week-end. The market closed 7 to 10 points net lower.

May contracts after declining 18.00, 12 points net down, rallied to 18.06 on some covering, but made a new low later at 17.96, 16 points off from the previous close. Some additional covering at the end carried that option to 18.03, where it closed, or net 9 points down from the day.

The market opened easy in sympathy with the lower Liverpool cables and first trades showed losses of 6 to 10 points. As New York futures made an even greater response to the poor English market local prices declined further in early trading until July contracts traded at 17.88 and October 17.57, 10 to 12 points under the previous close.

Some week-end covering about mid-session was responsible for a 6-point rally which carried July to 17.94 and October 17.63, but the market turned easy again on the weather outlook and all months made new lows. July sold off to 17.84 and October 17.83, 15 to 16 points net down.

Some additional week-end covering at the end brought a recovery of 7 to 8 points and July closed at 17.92 and October 17.60, 7 to 8 points below the previous close.

Exports for the day 45,285 bales.

Cotton Briefs.

New Orleans, March 3.—(AP)—General rains reported over the Rio Grande valley today will permit delayed planting in that normally early section by providing the needed moisture.

Reports from Alabama and Georgia are that $4,000,000 worth of new cotton mills are being constructed in those states, which seems to again call attention to the steady drift of cotton manufacturing to cotton fields.

Liverpool was lower than due today. Apparently the foreign market was not satisfied with the course of American rings yesterday.

Exports for cotton which have been decidedly backwards of late are expected to increase during the current month. Galveston has already shipped 20,000 bales to India and it is reported that Russia is accumulating a large amount at gulf ports to be shipped out this month. About 25,000 bales out of the New York stock are said to be earmarked for shipment shortly.

Memphis reports the presence of weevils in numbers of portions of central Mississippi valley.

Liverpool Cotton.

Liverpool, March 3.—Cotton: Spot quiet; prices lower. American strict good middling 11.09; good middling 10.79; strict middling 10.64; middling 10.54; strict low middling 10.44; low middling 10.39; strict good ordinary 10.14; good ordinary 9.84. Sales 4,000 bales, including 2,900 American; receipts 10,100, all American. Futures closed quiet: March 9.22; May 9.83; July 9.74; October 9.46; December 9.42; January 9.40; March (1929) 9.38.

Dry Goods.

New York, March 3.—Cotton goods in the gray were steady today with demand moderate, in finished lines, prints and colored goods were moderately active. Staple domestics were bought in small lots for immediate shipment. Further lines of woolens and worsteds in men's wear are being opened for fall and a moderate filling-in business is reported on spring lines. Silks continued to sell better than last year. Raw silk was steady. Burlaps were unchanged.

Gloria Swanson's 'SadieThompson' Is Howard Film

Edith Griffith Returns To Feature, "Dixieland" On Stage.

"Listen Handsome! This reformer guy tells me I'm bold, wicked! I'm not! Far from it! I'm just out looking for a good time! And I ain't doin' no one no harm." So speaks Gloria Swanson as "Sadie Thompson" in the picture of the same name which comes to the Howard theater tomorrow.

Just imagine Gloria as the heroine of W. Somerset Maugham's powerful story of the conflict between the outcast girl from 'Frisco and the fanatical reformer of the South Sea Isle, Pago Pago. As "Sadie" she reaches new heights. Never before have film fans seen Miss Swanson as great as she is in this remarkable characterization. She more than acts, she lives the role of Sadie.

For those who are not familiar with Somerset Maugham's story, let us say that "Sadie," a young girl on her way to Apia, is quarantined for three weeks on the South Sea Isle of Pago Pago. Here she meets and falls in love with a marine sergeant whom she nick-names Handsome. He persuades her to remain in Pago Pago until he can take her to Sydney as his wife, but as they plan their future, happy in their new-found romance, a barrier suddenly rises before them.

Hamilton, the self-appointed disciplinarian of the island, recognizes in Sadie a girl whom he had once seen in the underworld of 'Frisco. But soon, Hamilton, overcome by emotions, tells Sadie she need not go. Unaware of the reasons back of Hamilton's change of mind, Sadie finds that Hamilton.

But, see for yourself what happens on this remote isle of the South Seas. You will experience a new thrill as you watch Gloria enacting the role of Sadie. Lionel Barrymore is also superb as the reformer.

As an added screen attraction, the "All-Atlanta" movie, "Front Page Stuff," will be shown. This picture was recently made on the Howard stage, at the Atlanta Constitution, and at other points in Atlanta. The cast consists entirely of local amateurs, and the scenario was written by a local girl.

The Publix stage show, "Dixieland," featuring Edith Griffith, is said to be an excellent presentation. Miss Griffith has made a decided hit twice previously on the Howard stage.

The natural fur supply of the United States is rapidly diminishing.

Bows and arrows were used in the British navy as late as 1627.

The Jazz Singer Again Held Over At Metropolitan

Because of its tremendous popularity with Atlanta audiences, Al Jolson's "The Jazz Singer," scheduled to be shown only two weeks in Atlanta, will be held over for another week's showing at the Metropolitan this week.

Jolson, the stage's greatest, appears in the stellar role as a jazz singer who, as a boy, had run away from home after a whipping had been given him because he sang rag time tunes, who, years after, gains fame as a jazz singer, and who returns home for a reconciliation with his parents.

May McAvoy, Richard Tucker and Warner Oland appear in the picture with Jolson, and gives the picture a cast that may be easily called superb.

In addition to having a story that is reputed to be that of Jolson's life, and a story that is really a great one, the picture also has Vitaphone accompaniment of the musical score and of Jolson's songs.

Since the first time it was shown, "The Jazz Singer" has been growing in favor with Atlanta's audiences, until it has achieved popularity that has heretofore not been reached by any picture in the Gate City. Public and press alike have been high in their praise of the picture, the Vitaphone accompaniment and of Jolson's work, both as a picture actor, and because of his songs, which are faithfully reproduced by Vitaphone.

There is rare drama in the picture, enhanced by the Vitaphone reproduction of the sounds, and some words. There is pathos and comedy also, and that is topped off by two unusually good Vitaphone numbers, making the whole program one of novelty in entertainment.

THREE FAST FILMS ON NEW PROGRAM AT TUDOR HOUSE

The Tudor offers for the week three fast moving pictures, the first being shown on Monday and Tuesday, starring Ted Wells in "The Cleanup Man," the story of a western feud and the fighting fool sent in to clean it up. It is a rough and tumble action picture, full of fights and action.

On Wednesday and Thursday the Tudor offers "Top Sergeant Mulligan," a comedy drama of life on the front during the big fight across the water. The second of a series of photoplays of behind the front life, it is particularly amusing and highly delightful.

On Friday and Saturday the Tudor offers Tim McCoy in "Law of the Range," a drama of the plains and of the immutable law of the range, the survival of the fittest, and of the code of strong men which weak men cannot stand.

The rose garden of the University of Texas has 1,000 varieties of roses.

ON THE SCREEN

The gentleman with the "swode" so gallantly protecting Billie Dove is Gilbert Rowland and it all happens in "The Love Mart" on Keith's Georgia screen this week. Gloria Swanson makes life tough for south sea missionaries this week in "Sadie Thompson" at the Howard. Hep, Hep, the mounties are with us again, and House Peters, on the upper right, has got his woman, anyhow, in this scene from "Rose Marie" at Loew's Grand. "Listen, big boy, not so rough, will you?" is probably what Jacqueline Logan, on the lower left, is saying to Alan Hale in this scene from "The Leopard Lady" at the Rialto. The sensational Al Jolson, if he keeps at it, will bust something or other in the way of local theater records if the folks keep stampeding the Metropolitan to see "The Jazz Singer"—which is just what they should do. This week makes the third Alice Joyce, on the lower right, is starred in "Thirteen Washington Square" at the Capitol this week, and her g. f. seems about to discharge a revolver into somebody. (Maybe it's the gorilla!)

'ROSE-MARIE' FILM ON LOEW'S SCREEN

Lovely Joan Crawford Has Feature Role in Picture.

The scenic marvel of the screen "Rose Marie," with an all-star cast of players headed by Joan Crawford, James Murray and House Peters will be the feature picture offering at Loew's Grand theater this week in one of the most notable engagements of the season. The picture is based on the popular musical comedy which scored such a stupendous success and it is described as being one of the most beautiful pictures ever produced. The numerous big scenes are presented in spots selected in the United States and Canada for scenic advantages.

Joan Crawford, featured player of "Rose-Marie," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, is one of the most smartly gowned of the younger film set in Hollywood, yet she seldom has a chance to wear beautiful clothes on the screen.

In "Rose-Marie," the screen version of the famous musical play presented two seasons ago by Arthur Hammerstein, and which has just been produced on the screen by Lucien Hubbard, Miss Crawford wears rough brown khaki skirts, heavy dark blue blouses and Indian moccasins practically throughout the picture.

Although she played the society girl in John Gilbert's "Twelve Miles Out," she wore but one dress in the picture.

In "Paris" she was an apache girl and wore plain costumes, while in "The Understanding Heart" she dressed as a forest look-out in the timber country.

"Children of Jazz" Feature Alamo No. 2 Program Monday

A realistic battle between a hydroplane and a schooner at sea, in which the aerial vessel wins a victory, is a big feature of "Children of Jazz," a new Paramount picture featuring Theodore Kosloff, Ricardo Cortez, Robert Cain and Eileen Percy, which will be shown at the Alamo No. 2 theater Monday only.

In the course of the story of the picture, the hydroplane is all but wrecked on an island where the schooner of Richard Forestall, an adventurer, is moored. The crew mutinies and runs away with Babs Weston, the heroine, after Forstall has been overpowered. Babs' friends on the island, having repaired the hydroplane, go in pursuit of the vessel and after a battle, force the crew to give up the schooner to the skipper.

This is only one of many thrills in this excellent picture. There are several jazz parties showing modern cabaret life, and other scenes of great dramatic interest. The story is based on Harold Brighouse's play, "Other Times," and was adapted by Beulah Marie Dix, with Jerome Storm directing. The supporting company is quite capable.

Bars of new metal alloys made chiefly of aluminum are stiffer and stronger than steel.

Opening Feature At Palace Theater Is "Fighting Love"

The attempt by Italy to regain the lost province of Tripolitana and the machinations of a rascally territorial governor who plotted against his own countrymen, are the main features of "Fighting Love," starring Jetta Goudal, which comes to the Palace Monday and Tuesday.

Dorothy Gish and Antonio Moreno, two American players, can be credited with a great deal of the success which "Madame Pompadour," British National's new release is sure to win when it shows at the Palace Wednesday.

The most consistent comedy star on the screen, Harold Lloyd, is coming to the Palace Thursday and Friday in "For Heaven's Sake." Fred Thompson stars in another western feature, "Hands Across the Border," Saturday.

BILLIE DOVE STARS GEORGIA PICTURE

Billie Dove, called the screen's most beautiful actress, and favorite of Atlanta audiences, is the feature screen headliner for this week at Keith's Georgia theater, in her latest sensational release, "The Love Mart," in which she is ably supported by Gilbert Roland and Noah Beery.

Miss Dove's beauty is more pronounced in the gorgeous 18th century gowns that she wears in this story of the old slave-running days when New Orleans was younger and slave smuggling had just been banned by the government.

Gilbert Roland plays the role of the dashing young French nobleman, and by his performance proves that he is rapidly reaching the pinnacle once held by Rudolph Valentino. He is a gifted actor and a lover supreme. Noah Beery, always good as a villain, excels himself as the slave-runner and smuggler.

Here is a keenly interesting story based on fact but woven with a thread of romance and intrigue. A story dealing with the gay life of the south's greatest metropolis, and the port of entry for the French and Castilians. There are fights with pistols, duels with swords and a vivid reproduction of the old slave mart where slaves were placed on the block and sold to the highest bidder. It is here that the beautiful young girl, wrongly accused as having mixed blood, is brought and offered for sale. The man who loves her proves to be the highest bidder and she is sold as his slave. What happens after that makes a complete and splendid story of heart interest.

Big Universal Mystery Tale Capitol Film

Atlanta this week will see at the Capitol theater one of the finest mystery pictures made since the release of "The Cat and the Canary."

"13 Washington Square," long famous as a stage success and with the record of many long runs behind it, has been adapted to the screen by Universal and reports from critics in other cities indicate that it is a fit successor in mystery stores to "The Cat and the Canary."

An unusually talented cast, headed by Alice Joyce forms one reason for the eminent success of "13 Washington Square" and the cast is so versatile that it combines the very height of chilling mystery with excellent comedy relief.

As in "The Cat and the Canary," all the resources of Universal pictures, under the direction of Carl Laemmle, president, have been called into play to make "13 Washington Square" one of the finest program pictures of the year, and as always when "Uncle Carl" gets behind anything, it "clicks" like a bushel of castanets.

"13 Washington Square" will be shown this week in addition to a big-time bill of Pantages vaudeville, headlined by the famous team of Gautshi and Phelps and their sensational and beautiful revue.

"Loves of Carmen" To Open New Week At West End House

Admirers of Dolores Del Rio and Victor McLaglen, the famous Fox stars of "What Price Glory," will have a chance to see them again Monday and Tuesday at the West End in "Loves of Carmen."

"Barbed Wire," Pola Negri's starring vehicle, which plays Wednesday, approaches the war from behind the lines. It tells first the hatred and then the love of a Normandy farm girl for a German soldier in a prison camp.

Everyone who has taken an interest in attempting to solve mysteries is promised the thrill of a lifetime when "The Cat and the Canary," starring Laura La Plante, comes to the West End Thursday and Friday. Jack Luden, a new Paramount star, makes his appearance Saturday in a western thriller, "Shootin' Irons."

'Abie's Irish Rose' Returns This Week to Erlanger

With its excellent cast and production, direct from its phenomenal runs of 29 and 30 weeks, respectively, at Pittsburgh and Cleveland, Anne Nichols' famously successful appealing comedy, "Abie's Irish Rose," will be presented by the world-famous author-producer for a return engagement of one week at the Erlanger theater, beginning tomorrow (Monday) night at 8:30, with popular-priced matinees on Wednesday and Saturday, and unless all signs fail Atlanta will be another city to be added to the long list of records established by this truly remarkable play, which has been the cause of more discussion than any play written since the Bard of Avon started writing.

"Abie's Irish Rose" is not only brimful of good clean wholesome comedy, there being a hearty laugh in almost every line, but in its unfolding discloses one of the prettiest little love stories ever told, which in its simplicity is at once winning.

Miss Nichols has written all told 17 plays. She was also responsible for "Just Married," which is still playing throughout the country with great success, also "Linger Longer Letty," in which play Charlotte Greenwood, the elongated comedienne, scored her biggest hit. However, it was "Abie's Irish Rose" that placed Miss Nichols' name in the hall of fame for having written a play, that has unprecedented engagements in New York—now in its sixth year at the Republic theater. It has also broken all long run records in Chicago, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Montreal, Toronto, Washington, Baltimore, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Atlanta and New Orleans. Popular prices will prevail throughout the week. Seats for all performances may be had at the Erlanger box office and at Phillips & Crew Piano Co.

'MADDOCK'S TRICKS' TOPS NEW KEITH BILL

This Is One of the Big Acts of the Vaudeville Stage.

"Maddock's Tricks" is the title of the big flash topping the bill this week at Keith's Georgia theater. C. B. Maddock was the first to incorporate the legitimate revue non-stop system in a vaudeville presentation. There are no waits between the eleven scnes in this "Bag o' Tricks," Not even time for the orchestra to play a couple of bars of music. The moment the curtain falls upon one scene another begins out front of the curtain. Wally Crisham, who sang last season in the "Music Box Revue," is leading man. Josephine Fontaine, for three years the feature dancer with the "Greenwich Village Follies," is also featured in "Maddock's Tricks," which is said to be one of the all-star combinations of the entire circuit.

Grace Nile and Dick Mansfield, formerly identified with the legitimate stage, have become favorably known for their work in big time vaudeville. Their clever little skit, "The Man Said," is the product of several well-known producers for the stage.

"True" Rice and Florence Newton left the Ed Wynn show, after working there for three years. "Refined Bunk" is a comedy which they have evolved from many years stage experience. You'll like their work and have a good laugh at their nonsense.

There is no better pantomimic clown in the business than Jack Hanley, who comes from a family long identified with the show business. Jack began as a clown under the "big tops."

The Three Londons will show something new in gymnastics in their clever conceit which presents some startling stunts as well as graceful acrobatics.

This Week

On the STAGE

The rose in "Abie's Irish Rose," returning (yep, again) to the Erlanger theater this week, is seen on the upper left with one of the principal thorns in the whole wrangle. And, next—don't tell us you don't remember Edith Griffith, as potent a little bundle of personality as could possibly be gathered together at one time, who also returns (Hurray! and other expressions of joy) to the Howard theater for her third time here. She will be seen in the Publix unit, "Dixieland," even if she does come from New York or Chicago or Indianapolis or some other Yankee place like that. On the upper right are Gantchi and Phelps, features of the current Pantages bill at the Capitol theater. The two boys on the lower left who look as though they had just skidded through the business end of a stovepipe are George LeMaire and Rex Van, featured on the new bill at Loew's Grand. They are the two "black jacks" of Victor record fame. On the back of the next photograph when we received it was the inscription, "Murdock's Twelve Tricks," features at Keith's Georgia, but three of them were probably out skating when the photographer sneaked up and took this shot.

BROADWAY FAVORITES AT LOEW'S GRAND

Two Broadway comedy favorites, George LeMaire and Rex Van, "The Black Jacks" of Victor recording fame, will appear as the headline feature on a bill of all around excellence to be offered at Loew's Grand theater this week. LeMaire is a veteran of the stage and has registered hit sketches in the "Follies," "Scandals," "Brevities" and other big musical shows. Mr. Van is a Texan and recently served as understudy for Charles Mack, of Moran and Mack. LeMaire and Van are two of the outstanding blackface funmakers on the stage this season and they have an act which is a real comedy riot.

In "Rainbow Revelry" Atlanta will witness a dancing act of rare beauty and one that comes in the headline class on the new Loew bill. This act is a creation of the famous Perry Mansfield and is offered by eight specialty girl dancers and one man, Charles Olsen, an eccentric dancer. Sue St. John is the principal girl dancer and she has been described as a perfect specimen of womanhood. In one scene the girls in this production not only form a human curtain but dance on it in one of the most daring and dangerous feats ever attmpted in a dancing turn.

Cardiff and Wales will appear in "Travesties on Famous Plays." This act is one in which some of Shakespeare's plays are cleverly burlesqued, one of the features being a ludicrous travesty on "Romeo and Juliet." Both Mr. Cardiff and Miss Wales are capable players and they carry out a theme of seriousness in their work which keeps the fun at a high pitch without in any way cheapening the merit of their acting.

In the team of Foster and "Peggy" is a dog which Ed Foster has trained. This dog is now valued at $10,000. This marvelous dog counts, sings, plays a xylophone and recently made her debut on the radio and sang a real canine solo. Peggy is known as the "World's Most Wonderful Dog" and is one of the features of the new bill.

LaFleur and Portia will open the new bill in a novel acrobatic turn with some unusual features. Among these is the incomparable equilibristic novelty known as the "Human Top."

This excellent bill will be offered in conjunction with "Rose Marie" the beautiful scenic picture with Joan Crawford and an all-star cast.

Panther, raised by friendly Indians and taught by them expert marksmanship an dlightning-like on the draw.

"The Valley of Hell" starts with a stage coach holdup and as the picture gets to the second of the five fast thrilling reels, you will be on the edge of your seat with excitement.

Wednesday and Thursday Dick Hatton gallops to better pictures in "The Saddle Jumpers." This popular star has been making some extra good pictures lately and furnishing plenty of good stunts, scraps and thrills.

Friday and Saturday Ken Maynard stars in "The Land Beyond the Law." It is Ken's biggest hit! built on the actual happenings in the land now known as New Mexico. Watch him bring law and order to the meanest and baddest men of the west.

Abie's Irish Rose' Lead Sworn Foe To Affectation

Kathleen Robinson, who enacts the role of Rosemary Murphy in "Abie's Irish Rose," which will undoubtedly play to large crowds in positively its last Atlanta engagement at the Erlanger theater, is an actress of wide experience and from her knowledge of the art she has evolved the following advice to stage aspirants:

KATHLEEN ROBINSON.

"Affectation is the chain which binds the average actor to mediocrity. An actor of inferior native talent will triumph above his clever colleague, if developed with more regard to art than to bluff.

"'Repressed emotion' has become as banal as a phrase as 'perfect lady,' but it nevertheless indicates the stage method of the future. It is well to regard the average audience as a giant intellect to which only the greatest thought and sincerity will appeal. The actor can gain ten-fold sympathy from his audiences by struggling against his tears and against his weakness rather than feeling sorry for himself. Never should an actor convey to an audience the least suggestion that he is listening to his own voice. The actor should discriminate carefully between the two attitudes—conceit and dignity. Conceit is most destructive—dignity most constructive."

"Abie's Irish Rose," written by Anne Nichols, a native of Georgia, has brought vast wealth to the author and has all the ingredients of popular appeal. It's a play to delight the great majority and it has duplicated in Atlanta the success achieved elsewhere. A lesson of tolerance, in matters religious and racial, is taught by "Abie's Irish Rose," and taught in so humorous a way that every audience finds it highly diverting. The plight of young Abraham Levy, who marries Rosemary Murphy with consulting his own father or Rosemary's, and finds that they are both against him, is the source of all the fun in "Abie's Irish Rose."

TOM MACK PRESENTS FIRST HOWARD SHOW

Edith Griffith Featured in "Dixieland" on Stage.

"Dixieland" is the title of the novel Publix presentation to be offered at the Howard theater this week. It is an even bet that there will be plenty of southern singing and dancing in the number, and this form of entertainment is sure to please—it hasn't failed yet.

The production will introduce to most Atlanta theatergoers, Tom Mack, the Howard's temporary successor to Ray Teal. Mr. Mack and the Howard stage orchestra have many stars and capable artists with them this week, who help make "Dixieland" one of the most enjoyable shows to be seen here in quite some time.

Heading the list of the many notables is Edith Griffith, a dainty little miss who should need no introduction to Atlanta audiences. She is to be remembered as the possessor of the most charming personality seen on the Howard stage, to say nothing of her wonderful voice. Her last appearance in Atlanta was in the Publix presentation, "Gems of Jazz."

Two others on the bill this week who are also making a return engagement are Ruth Stanley and Louella Lee. These girls are noted for their unique dance arrangement and have been a decided hit wherever they have performed.

Joe Penner, the comedian in the show, formerly appeared as the leading comedian in the road show company of "The Greenwich Village Follies of 1927." Bob Morris and Phil Rapp, the natty dance duo, have appeared together as a dance team for the past 10 years, during which time they have received great success. Their equally as successful. Last but not appearance at the Howard should be least will be Larry Lamont in an original dance specialty.

Gloria Swanson's latest screen triumph is also to be seen. It is from the stage play "Rain" and is entitled "Sadie Thompson."

PONCE DE LEON MARKS FIRST ANNIVERSARY

Big Program of Screen Features Seen All Week.

The next six days mark the first anniversary celebration of the Ponce de Leon theater, one of Atlanta's most popular community motion picture houses, and the management has observed the event by booking an especially attractive program.

C. D. Swint, one of the best-known theatrical men in the city, is manager of the Ponce de Leon, and Willis J. Davis is its owner.

The management announced Saturday that the anniversary week program will begin Monday with a bang, when "Metropolis," one of the most widely discussed pictures ever screened is booked for the screen. This Paramount all-star film is one of the most imposing in point of settings ever made, and the plot is most interesting, revolving about a theme that closely resembles the story of the Frankenstein monster.

Tuesday's attraction at the Ponce de Leon will be Claire Windsor in "The Opening Night," a Liberty picture. It is an engrossing psychological study of one of those queer mental twists which in an instant turn a man from deeds of valor to the most cowardly acts. There's not a dull moment in the picture, which is slated to attract wide attention.

Wednesday finds Jack Holt and Dorothy Revier on the screen in "The Warning," another Liberty release. This picture is replete with thrills and rich in romance, being considered by the management as one of the strongest attractions of the week's program.

Bebe Daniels, the ever-popular, swashbuckles through the screen Thursday and Friday in "She's a Sheik." This picture is a screaming departure from the plot of "The Sheik" in which the desert lover abducts his sweetheart, and—but see the vivacious Bebe unfold the thrilling story.

For Saturday the Ponce de Leon has booked Fred Thomson in "Jesse James," a Paramount feature. The world famous cowboy star renders a true and colorful interpretation of the life and adventures of the famous western bandit and outlaw in a picture that is a splendid close to a splendid week of entertainment.

Alamo No. 1.

The Alamo No. 1 theater opens Monday with one of the fastest westerns ever filmed. "The Valley of Hell," starring Francis MacDonald, who in the picture plays the part as the

THEATRE NEWS

The changing field of Howard theater bandmasters, or masters of ceremonies, if you prefer, presents many and widely different types of personalities to local audiences, and one of the most interesting of these is the new leader, Tom Mack, who will present his first show this week, "Dixieland."

Al Short had what I would term a typical showman personality, confident, sure and always an easy and complete master of himself behind the footlights, and this, of course, was due to his long experience on the stage. To say that he was a whale of a success with such a type of personality is needless.

Ray Teal came next. He always reminded me, on the stage, of a startled kid, and he had the typical "small boyishness" about him that seems to "slap the women into the aisles," to use the stage vernacular. Very modest, shy and not a little bit retiring, he, likewise, was pretty much of a big success in the short time he was here.

Mr. Mack, although he perhaps is too young here yet to judge, seems to be a splendidly happy medium between the two. He has a quiet and unauspicious personality that lacks the blaring showmanship of Mr. Short, and yet is not the unsophisticated air of Mr. Teal.

As a result he should have a wider following even than his two predecessors. This may seem rather brash, at first flush, but it reasons out that way, at any rate. There were those who vehemently disliked Mr. Short for what they termed and imagined was his "conceit."

The unsophisticated air of Mr. Teal, while it ran heavy with the women didn't register quite as forte with the men. As a consequence, Ray had those who weren't so terribly enthusiastic about him.

Thus it looks as if Mr. Mack, combining to a distinctly modified degree the personalities of both, should have a larger following than either, although it is true that such a large following may not be vehemently in favor of its leader as a smaller group.

Those of the readers who were at the Howard the last three days of last week will agree with me, I think, that the new leader distinguished himself more than admirably, and I am watching with keen anticipation the current week's show at the Howard.

Jimmy Hodges.

Manager "Marty" Semon, of the Capitol, tells me that he is receiving highly encouraging advice from Jimmy Hodges, who is in New York rehearsing a specially selected musical comedy company to open soon at the Capitol.

There's quite a bit of gossip and anticipation rife anent the return of Jimmy and practically all of it seems favorable. I am told that on his previous engagement here he was one of the biggest hits ever to play Atlanta, and if that is the case certainly there is no reason why he shouldn't repeat, for Jimmy Hodges is Jimmy Hodges, then, now and always—a nifty comedian.

Logic From Mr. Eggleston.

There may be those who praise their pictures to the skies, but C. Roltare Eggleston, manager of Keith's Georgia theater, is a stage advocate pure and simple. One glance at the local theater situation and it at once becomes obvious that the pictures are much more in need of champions than the stage, but the boards have not yet attained the preeminence in theater entertainment that they have in store for them, according to Mr. Eggleston.

"In addition to all the other angles," Mr. Eggleston said, "there's the economic side. Atlanta's four stage theaters bring an average of 100 people to the city every week in the year, and in season, the legitimate theater heightens the figure.

"The expense of each performer while he is in the city will total $60 at the very least, and thus we have an aggregate of $6,000 that the stage brings to Atlanta hotels and eating places. And then add to that the fact that on the majority of these circuits, Atlanta is the final city of the loop, and as a consequence every artist replenishes his wardrobe and that, itself, will run into immense revenue for department stores.

"On the other hand you have the films. They come into the city in a tin can and leave the same way. The difference between the two phases of theater entertainment in economic value to a city is not even to be compared."

Pun(k).

And incidentally, Mr. Eggleston has as headlining feature this week an act called "Maddock's Tricks," and the photograph supplied this department was of nine very comely young girls. Presumably they are the cute tricks of the act.

In Celluloid.

With the stage of the Erlanger not yet cold from the two-week engagement of "Rose-Marie," Loew's Grand returns that eminent musical romance in picture form this week.

Dance Revue Tops Capitol Variety Bill

Headline by the beautiful and smart revue of Gautschi and Phelps, one of vaudeville's foremost song and dance revues, the new bill at the Capitol theater this week gives all promise of being one of the real features of the current season. In addition "13 Washington Square," a thrilling mystery film, will be shown on the screen.

Gautschi and Phelps, a handsome lad and a beautiful personable miss, will present their big revue with nine people and the La Chapina Marimba band, itself one of variety's foremost features. The entire cast of nine is composed of talented artists, offering a beautiful program of many styles of dancing blended with songs and music and embellished with special setting and effects together with colorful costumes.

This act is easily one of the finest Atlanta has seen.

Second only to the headlining feature of the new bill is Kajiyama, the celebrated Japanese caligraphist and mental marvel who demonstrates the multiple action of the brain in the remarkable tests he presents. With a large blackboard behind him and a newspaper in one of his hands, he writes news headlines backwards; he also proves the possibility of the human brain doing four things at once—reading, writing, talking and working mathematical problems.

In the act of Pearson and Anderson, on the Capitol bill this week, Atlanta will see one of the most novel presentations of the vaudeville stage. They are female impersonators who keep audiences in an uproar of laughter with mirthful comedy and their wardrobes, so distinctly different.

The wardrobe of these two artists are worth noting. Mr. Pearson's wonderful ermine wrap and gowns are importations from London and Paris, while Mr. Anderson has selected his from way down on the east side of little old New York and F. W. Woolworth's.

The Wilmont Sisters, two pretty, well-dressed girls harmonizing their way in 12 minutes into the hearts of their audiences with an unusually well-arranged program. Boyd and Wallin present an excellent novelty entertainment entitled "Something New."

Oil from Penguins found in South Polar islands is used in making soap.

In broadcasting grand opera from Chicago 18 microphones have been used.

At the Smaller Theaters

Edith Griffith, Favorite Here, Returns to Howard Theater

:: THIRD VISIT OF PERSONALITY SINGER ::

BY ELMO HAMBY.

Atlanta this week will witness the return of its favorite "personality singer" and one of the best-liked singers of any kind heard here.

Edith Griffith, who may well be said to be one of the reasons for the eminent success of Publix stage shows in Atlanta, will be seen and heard this week at the Howard theater in "Dixieland," the new unit show at that house.

EDITH GRIFFITH.

The current appearance will be the third trip to Atlanta for Miss Griffith, and one may rightfully expect her to prove deucedly more popular this time than on her previous appearance, which, in turn, was more notable than the initial visit here, and it, goodness knows, created a small furore.

All of which indicates pretty clearly that Manager Ernest Morrison had better nail down his rafters pretty securely before the first show Monday.

Miss Griffith as a "blues" singer does not have the field to herself. Practically every week brings one or more of the type around, but as far as those Atlanta sees, it can safely be said that Miss Griffith dominates the field—and how! it must be added.

She does not confine her work to the mere presentation of "blues" type songs, but presents them with what is really a very rare and immensely pleasing personality, which has made her a preeminent figure in her particular branch of stage entertainment.

Atlanta, known the country over as a cold-hearted and muchly hand-cuffed populace when it comes to cordiality toward stage amusement, has been completely captivated by Miss Griffith and consequently one may expect the current week at the Howard to prove one of the most delightful of the season.

Incidentally, Miss Griffith has appeared here with all the Howard bandmasters except Ray Teal, who left last week, and this week she will be seen with Tom Mack, one of those personality kids, himself.

"The Leopard Lady" To Play All Week At Rialto Theater

A motion picture mystery drama built along old-fashioned style of a smashing climax at the end, "The Leopard Lady" will be at the Rialto theater all this week. It will be accompanied by the ninth episode of the "Beauty Parlor" series, a comedy called "Peter's Pan."

"The Leopard Lady" was directed by Rupert Julian, whose reputation calls for a dramatic finish to his pictures. This film is the story of the mysterious murders that invariably followed each visit of the circus to a small Austrian village. It was written by Edward Childs Carpenter and was adapted to the screen by Beulah Marie Dix.

The murder of Frau Holweg by a "little old woman" starts off the mystery of "The Leopard Lady." The climax is a remarkable demonstration of a criminal's cunning and a dumb beast's aptitude for mimicry which brings about the solution of the mysteries which terrified the village for years.

Meantime the gamut that goes to make up the life of a circus and its followers is stirringly portrayed. There are the clowns, trained animals, acrobats and other adjuncts of circus life which vest the story with genuine atmosphere which young and old have been able to appreciate.

DENNEY TAG COMPANY OPENS BRANCH HERE

The Denney Tag company, of West Chester, Pa., has opened an Atlanta branch at 231 Healey building, it was announced by the industrial bureau of the chamber of commerce Saturday. Carroll L. Reed is district representative.

At the present time this is a district office covering the state of Georgia, but it is contemplated within the course of the next few months to make this southern headquarters, with supervision over other southern branches. The Denney Tag company is a large exclusive tag manufacturer.

WALTHAM WATCH CO. OPENS BRANCH HERE

The Waltham Watch company, of Waltham, Mass., has just opened its southern district office at 428 Candler building, it was announced by the industrial bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce Saturday. Guy V. Rogers is in charge of the branch.

This office has charge of 11 southern states and is the first southern office ever established by any American watch company.

The United States possesses over half the available coal resources of the world.

"Congratulations." "Have a cigar on me, Joe."

I know that it is unreasonable to expect that everything will be different after I get my new mustache perfected. Yet I believe there glows within me the dim, small hope that I shall then walk in a new world. I don't known just what it is I want different; I have been counting my blessings recently and they count up fairly well; yet I suppose it is true of human nature that no one ever becomes so healthy, wealthy and wise that he is unhaunted by unnamed yearnings—the more unnamed the more yearing. I don't know what I want diffent, but I want it different. As I once said to a conductor on the Sante Fe, I don't know anything about eternity, but I do know I want more out of this life than there is in it.

It is amusing how we thus expect all our affairs to turn a new hue upon the acquisiton of some new trifle. We buy a radio set, for example, with the idea that it will be just what we need to make life full and perfect. Perhaps it does actually help for a few evenings and then, likely as not, it becomes another nuisance on our list of nuisances.

It won't help me out a great deal if when my new mustache has reached full fruition people turn and look at me and remark: "Isn't he handsome!" For I know that handsome is as handsome does, and I don't do handsome. Even if I heard this on every hand it would lose its stimulation after the first three or four days. I have spent too many years of my life building up disdain for merely handsome persons. Nature forced me to this course, and I can't back-track now. No I don't want a mustache to add to my beauty.

To begin with, I can't decide what kind of mustache I want to raise or what effect I want to achieve. Do I want it to make me seem sinister, Machiavelian, Mephistophelian or light, airy, lyrical, dashing, or debonair? I got off on the wrong track at first. Early in its development I asked Charles Starr what the effect was and he said: "It makes you look like a chaser." I thought that over for a couple of days and finally shaved it in another fashion.

At any rate, it is something to do these long winter evenings. It is a wonderful adventure, this being turned, as it were, into a big department store and invited to chose a new personality. It is about as near as we ever get in this world to starting life all over again. Women must get a similar thrill every once in a while when they change the style of their bob, or when they select a new fur coat, or even a new gown, but we men have to wear about the same clothes and haircuts year in and year out and, confidentially, some of us get pretty tired of it. I have seen the time when it would have taken little persuation to have induced me to get tatooed all over.

Thre ought to be a literature or an advisory service for men in the throes of raising a new mustache. I need charts, diagrams or a gallery of wax figures, and I need friendly and grandfatherly counsel. I am suddenly conscions of all mustaches and it is amazing how many there are. I thought they were all gone. But you try it yourself—that is, just go out and see how many men out of the first hundred you meet still wear mustaches. I peer intimately into every male face that I pass, studying mustache styles, and if you read of me getting a sock in the jaw one day soon you may know I have stared a little injudiciously into the upper lip of some over-sensitive roughneck. But where else am I to turn for inspiration and guidance except to the living specimen? I tell you, raising a mustache is a pioneering business. I would be willing to pay a fancy fee for a good look at a row of dummies with all the known and accepted mustache trims.

While there are, perhaps, as many mustaches today as there ever were, it is no doubt true that there is, in America at least, a grand total of much less mustaches than there used to be. The wide-flung, flamboyant type is no more. Their has been a righteous popular wave of distrust of the microbe-monastery or soup-sweeper species of mustache. The mattress mustache passed with the advent of Pastuer. Today there is toleration only for the dot or wisp type, to which the vacuum cleaner may be easily applied, or which may be sent economically to the dry cleaner for Pasteurization.

I presume I have had mustache potentialities for many years, yet this is the first time I have ever been seized with the passion. I can't explain it. I suppose it is a budding of the mother instinct which lies latent in even the most masculine of us; we must raise something. Mayb if I had a garden that would have sufficed, but I am a roamer and not for nigh on twenty years have I set hoe to earth. My two daughters are well on their way toward middle age (one is nine and one two and a half) and I guess it was simply just about time for my interpreneur instincs to assert themselves somehow.

This mustache, understand, i not for adornment. It is an activity, an interest in life, a game. If it ever becomes second nature with me I shall strike it off relentlessly. As soon as it ceases to entertain me it shall perish. I am not concerned with this mustache as a mustache, but as something going on in a sometimes otherwise dull world. I shal never wear it subconsciously. If it becomes unexciting I shall banish it or else grow a flowing biblical beard and dye it blue.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

Ruth Suckow, writer, came home from a tea a few days ago to find herself burned out of her New York apartment. She was reduced in wardrobe to the clothes on her back and all her possessions, furniture, books and papers were consumed by the fire. (And no insurance!) Miss Suckow's fourth book, "The Bonney Family," has just been published by Alfred A. Knopf. Though an Iowan by birth, Miss Suckow lives in New York city, spending her summers in Iowa with her family.

RUTH SUCKOW.

The Bonney Family. By Ruth Suckow. There are quite a number of readers who thoroughly enjoy a story woven around the family circle and this is what the author has done. She has made a study of each character, their relationships to each other and to their friends.

She tells in a clever manner of the daily trials of a family, this family, to whom the reader is introduced in the backyard of the parsonage. This was a favorite place for Mr. Bonney to read the Congregational Herald to his wife, whose fingers were never idle, and the children, Warren, Sarah, Wilfred and Winfred. The members of a large family circle experiences pleasures, worries, disagreeable incidents, quarrels and make-ups that the small family never realize. But when the separation comes, as it always does, the common interest continues no matter how far away their lives have drifted.

The author writes interestingly of the husband and wife, father and mother, and the part they play in the household, but it is the children, especially Warren and Sarah, in whose lives the reader will note the characteristics of the old, old story of boys and girls, nothing new. (Alfred A. Knopf, publisher, New York.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

The Tick of the Clock. By Herbert Asbury. This is his second mystery story and while entirely different from his first book it will interest the reader from the arrival of the housekeeper at the Walton residence in the first chapter to the last chapter—the end. (Macy-Masium, New York.)

The Murder At Fleet. By Eric Brett Young. The name will look quite familiar to readers though is has been some time since the writer devoted enough time to writing to publish a book—and a detective story, too.

There's a problem to be solved—a probing to be made, and the reader will find himself busily engaged with the detective and the reporter if he decides to try this probing. (Lippincott's Book.)

The Curse of the Tarniffs. By Count Edouard von Keyserling. Illustrations by Arthur J. Ashton. The coat-of-arms of The Tarniffs is three heart-shaped leaves representing the hearts of three women which, tradition says, every Tarniff breaks. The young master had just witnessed the passing of his father—it is a story filled with tragedy.

The author is widely known as a popular story teller, and while this is true, he is also gifted in descriptions of the out-of-doors. For instance, "the young Tarniff turned away from the room in which silence and repose seem to reign and stood looking out of the window where great butterflies were hovering over the mignonette bed, moving idly as if their wings were heavy with color. Far away on the horizon a peasant was ploughing on the hillside, his tiny dark figure standing out against the shining blue sky. Sounds and voices floated to the window where the young aristocrat stood. Some one was laughing behind the currant bushes. Life was going on as usual in its cheerful and kindly way; he was sorry for the silent man in there who was to have no more part in this pleasant world."

The author, Count Keyserling, is called a great artist in America! (Macaulay company, publisher.)

We Sing Diana. A woman's revolt against a woman's world. By Wanda Fraiken Neff. (Houghton Mifflin company, Boston.)

The Bondwoman. By G. U. Ellis. "Women differ. Some live to serve, others to be served." (Doubleday, Doran & Co.)

Lovely Ladies. By Ferrin L. Fraser, who has woven a clever story around Billy Everett and one of the girls he has loved—for the moment. (J. H. Sears Co., New York.)

Martin Shuler. By Romer Wilson, with an introduction by May Sinclair. This is a reissue of the author's first novel long out of print. The author is one of a group of young English novelists "engaged in portraying the soul of a war-shocked world—a world in which scepticism and disillusionment predominates." Hugh Walpole says, "Miss Wilson's work gains its most important characteristic through her being at heart a poet. In all her work the poetic quality is notably present." (Alfred A. Knopf, publisher, New York.)

Concealed Turnings. By Pamela Wynne, who has woven her story around Hazel Anson, who is bewildered by the concealed turnings which suddenly develop in the seemingly straight road. It is a highly dramatic story. (Maccaulay's Book, New York.)

The Celibate Father. By Will W. Whalen, author of "The Girl From Mine Run," "The Girl Who Fought," "Twilight Tales to Tired Hearts," etc. This is the story of an old man, a priest, who tried to act as earthly father to the orphan children of his sister. It is a story that will appeal to the reader on account of the human touch that runs all though the story. (B. Herder Book Co., St. Louis.)

JUNIOR BOOKS RECEIVED.

The House of Many Stairways. A mystery story, by Hanel Johnson, author of Prydehurst etc. The literary market has been running over with mystery stories but none have been more sensational than this one in which a group of boys and girls, with their teacher, decide to spend the summer in a house which has been deserted for years.

The beginning of the sory is really after Joan Walker, the young heroine, marshaled her forces to the front gate, and from this time on, as Lucy Furman would say, there were "quare" things in evidence. Everybody got nervous on account of the sights and sounds and "Mortal Sin" and his mother, the cook, are ready to leave.

Finally a few of the braver boys decided to go on an exploration trip to the old tower—where interest, suspense, and dramatic climaxes occur in rapid succession—there are many thrillers which even the solution does not quiet at once—for of course, the little group had to talk it over. (D. Appleton & Co., New York).

The Jolly Roger. A pirate book for boys, by Joseph Louis French, editor great sea stories. "Go tell your king he is king of the land, but I am king of the seas!" Barbarossa to Charles V.

In this handsome volume tales are told of experiences with pirates on many waters. These stories are gathered from original ources, "they portray life on the high seas in the golden days of piracy" and they will thrill the spirit of adventure in American boys of today—"an enthrall older readers in whose hearts the spell of romance lingers." (Milton Bradley company. Springfield, Mass.)

Ken, the Courageous. By Robert Ames Bennet. When Ken got off of the train at the Bullhide railway station which was a little shack in the old west, the cowboys immediately sized him up and decided, judging from appearance, he was even lower than anything they had ever seen. And the welcome they gave him was quite what he expected.

From the very beginning Ken was "in wrong" with all the cow punchers, and finally he decided to pose as a greenhorn and to get into all sorts of scrapes knowing that he would be able to take care of himself.

The book is for boys and yet the author has spiced it with all the thrills of a real western story so that everyone will want to read it. The grand climax shows Ken not only to be a hero of the plains but also the successful winner of the Lady Boss of the Double Bar. (A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago).

POETRY AND DRAMA.

Washington, the Statesman. A drama, by Belle Willey Gue. For the first time through this contribution of the author the reader is given a real insight into the great soul of Washington. And there are also glimpses into the activities of two other renowned Americans—Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson. (The Canterbury company, publishers, San Diego, Calif.)

Poems. Robert Underwood Johnson. Poems of the longer flight with prefatory consideration of obstacles to poetry in America. Mr. Johnson's poems are always read with pleasure and the little volume of blue and gold is a collection that is worth while. Among the longer poems and one that will appeal to everyone at this time is "Gothals of Panama."

"Servant of man, well done!
The war of peace is won.
The dream of continents five and centuries four
Is dream no more.

"Then dedicate to dreams this dream fulfilled:
To Hope, the dream on which all dreams we build,
To Honor, what in honor was conceived,
To Brotherhood, whereby it was achieved,
To Peace, that there no hostile gun may sound
And all the earth at last be holy ground;
Ay, to that dream of dreams, most strangely wrought—
To Man, the Almighty's most amazing thought.
O soldier of the blameless sword.
Who serves mankind is servant of the Lord.
Servant of God, well done!"

An Etching. By Mary Fitzgerald. The foreword is by Flora Warren Seymour. "Economists may ponder over the causes of our farm problems; politicians may discuss legislative panaceas. The author of Etching comes without theory or bias, and the heart of the problem is one with her own heart." (The Torch Press, Cedar Rapids).

Bubble and Squeak. A book of light verse, by Harold Hersey. It is his last contribution. It is divided into three parts; Bubble and Squeak; Out Where the Vest Begins; Here and There—Mostly There. (The Author and Journalist, Denver, Colo.)

Bronx Ballads. By Robert A. Simon. Eleven illustrations and 11 gags by Harry Hershfield. The announcement is made that these ballads were not "edited" for publication. It is an anthology representing light verse. (Simon and Scuster, New York).

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

God's Law and Man's. Dedicated to William Jennings Bryan. By Frank H. Hallion.

The Winston Simplified Dictionary, Encyclopedia Edition, is a most useful book. In comparison with other books it will be found to be of splendid service. (The John C. Winston Co., Philadelphia.)

Troubles We Don't Talk About. By the well-known New York surgeon, Dr. J. F. Montague, F. A. C. S. It speaks for itself and it is the type of a book that will make people speak for it. It is written for the average man and woman in understandable language. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

A Pilgrimage to Palestine, by Fosdick, is a book that is well worth the attention of readers who like to spend a while in the land that never grows old. This appeared as a serial in the Ladies' Home Journal and much interest was aroused in the publication of the book. (The MacMillan Co., New York.)

CURRENT MAGAZINES.

The World Traveler presents a most colorful picture on its front page entitled "On the Spanish Main," the painting by N. C. Wyeth, with "Veasey Street, New York City," reproduction by Joseph Pennell. The leading article is "Egypt Knows What It Wants," with illustrations, among them being several of Lord Allenby, who was looked upon as a prophet by the Egyptians. Howard White writes of New York's "Four Thousand." "Through a Paris Mirror," Basil Woon, special Paris correspondent, ports of the world; and then there is no article which is more widely read than "About, Aboard, Abroad," which appears every month.

The Century Magazine. Under the initials "S. T." the leading article for this month is "A Modern in Search of Truth"—What is Christianity and this Business Called Life? These questions at the present time are being widely discussed at the round table meetings and through the press. This writer has given about six pages to his views on the subject. And there are other subjects of interest, especially appropriate is Silas Bent on "Smith Against Hoover—National Politics Taps New Levels." There's a poem "The Wall," by Roselle Mercier Montgomery.

Harper's for March carries a number of interesting articles among them being "Business and the Government," by John T. Flynn; "Back to the Old Diplomacy—Will the European Alliances Bring Another War?" by Sisley Huddleston; "Beauty and Religion," by Alvis D. Carlson; "Why They Failed to Marry?" by Catherine Bement Davis, and a most appealing poem written by Thomas Hardy in 1840.

MORRIS BROWN PLANS CONCERT AT BETHEL

The Alumni Association of Morris Brown university will sponsor a musical entertainment on Friday evening, March 9, at Big Bethel A. M. E. church.

The program will consist of group and individual numbers by Girls' Glee club, Washingtin High; Clarke University Choristers; Atlanta University Girl's Glee club; Morris Brown quartet, and musical selections from Spelman and Morehouse; E. M. Groves, organ; Graham Jackson, organ; Frances Grimes, piano; Christine Barnett, contralto; Venita Nichols, soprano; Callie Shy, soprano, and Callie Montgomery, soprano.

L'Envoi

(Parting Winter)

My teams are hitched and ready and my crew's in from its raids;—
My restless steeds are prancing for the fly;
And from my covered wagons pale and haggard snowy maids,
Are waving to the hills a long goodbye.

I gathered all the rich around the glow of friendly fires,
I made the poor folks shiver in the sleet;
And in the frosty robe that stilled the willow's weeping lyres
The dreamy asters found a winding sheet.

With a blade of silver when the autumn's golden sheen
Glowed amid the rustling of the oak;
I fell upon the grass that blessed the April with its green
And heartlessly I reaped it with a stroke.

But now my reign is over and from her far solstice gates,
The merry suns with friendly glows return;
The turtles in the valleys now are crying for their mates,
And for the leafy groves the thrushes yearn.

My teams are hitched and ready and my crew's in from its raids,
My restless steeds are prancing for the fly,
And from my covered wagon pale and haggard snowy maids,
Are waving to the hills a long goodbye.

BOZART RUGS

As you would expect from HIGH'S--and in line with the leading home-furnishers of America---we present BOZART RUGS.

To all who hold HOME dear—and welcome the achievements of modern craftsmanship that help to make it dearer—BOZART RUGS will arouse the warmest interest.

BOZART RUGS are a typically American triumph in rug-making—combining rare beauty in color and design with Lower Cost.

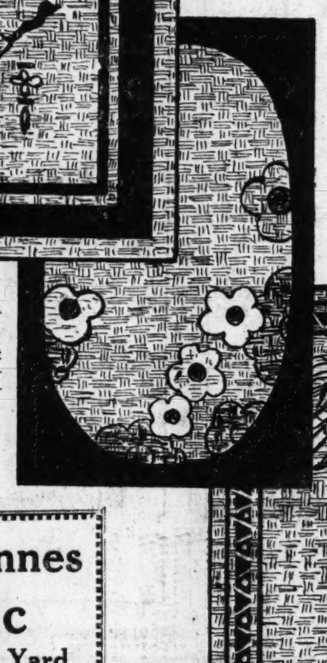

We want you to come to this exhibition, regardless of your present or prospective needs. We know you would not wish to miss this interesting exhibit. Come as our guest and critic.

The matchless beauty, color and utility of Bozart Rugs will surprise and delight everyone seeking something refreshingly different in floor coverings. Famous designers created the patterns. They are made of an exceedingly tough material known as Swedish Kraft. They are waterproof and fireproof and lie flat on the floor. They possess the atmosphere and charm of finest rugs, yet cost so little. There is a place and need for them in every home, even the finest. And this occasion enables all to buy them at unexpected prices. They come in sizes, shapes and colors to fit and match every room requirement. Note, please the extremely modest prices:—

And from Our Own Geargia

Comes to HIGH'S Monday a demonstration of every style, type and color of Floor Covering made by the world-famed VALWAY MILLS, the

VALWAY RUGS

Made in LaGrange, Georgia

These rugs will be arranged in the manner of an art gallery, so that you may more easily view the super-excellence of fabric, construction, finish and color harmony this great Georgia mill has achieved in their floor covering. Every rug will bear a card giving all particulars as to size, color variations in which it may be obtained, and price. You will be amazed at the beauty the Valway Mills have woven in these rugs, and also at the extent and diversity of this exhibition. Exquisite Suntone Embossed Chenilles, Suntone Jacquard Chenilles, Two-tone Oval Color Spots. Pleasing designs in scroll and Dutch tile effects, also effective geometric designs. The Valway Rugs are

Guaranteed Tubfast and Sunfast

For the entire life of the rug—GUARANTEED by the Valway Mills!—the most ironclad guarantee that could possibly be written—if the rug fades you get a new rug or your money back in full!—and to prove the tub-proof qualities of their product the Valway Mills will have in our rug department Monday TWO DEMONSTRATORS who will subject these rugs to the most severe tests in TUBS OF HOT WATER.

Miss Rita Brenan Weds Mr. Gilliatt In Paris, France

James Davenport Gilliatt, of Boston, who for a number of years has been a resident of France, yesterday married Miss Rita V. Brenan, of St. John, N. B., Canada, in a ceremony at the American church, 19 rue de Berri, with the Rev. Clayton E. Williams, assistant pastor, officiating.

The bride wore a bois-de-rose chiffon dress and a tight-fitting gray felt hat with a large pearl ornament, gray silk stockings and black satin slippers. Both Miss Brenan's bouquet and that of the matron of honor, Mme. George Droit, were mixed white lilacs and American beauties in a sheaf. Mme. Droit wore a periwinkle blue felt hat and dress, trimmed with fur. Joseph Backer gave the bride in marriage, while George Starke acted as best man for Mr. Gilliatt. Mrs. Gilliatt was formerly teacher of voice in LaGrange college, LaGrange, Ga.

Among the guests were Mrs. W. T. Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Shaw, Charles H. Tucker, M. and Mme. Jolly, Mlle. M. B. Quillon and M. Moulle. Included in the musical program played by Paul F. Bennyhoff, assistant organist of the American church, was Caesar Frank's "Pastorale Meditation," by Widor, as well as the wedding march from "Lohengrin," by Wagner, and Mendelssohn's wedding march from "Midsummer Night's Dream." After a month's wedding trip on the Riviera, Mr. and Mrs. Gilliatt will return to Mr. Gilliatt's home at Villa Conde Angouleme. Mr. Gilliatt is prominently connected with the United States Shoe Manufacturing company in France.

Junior Music Club To Present Act At Local Theater

The Junior Music club is branching out in a professional way this week in putting on a special act at the Ponce de Leon theater. There will be a morning matinee at 10 o'clock Saturday, March 10, the proceeds going to the club.

This is the first time the club has had an opportunity to display its junior and juvenile talent in a musical skit in connection with a motion theater program. The act will consist of four parts. The orchestra, under the baton of William Chase, will play several selections. Sam Young, the popular trumpeter of the orchestra; Dorothy Young, dainty dancer, and Charles Wood, the wonder boy of the drums, traps and xylophone, will constitute this "all-star act." The orchestra numbers 90 players in its personnel. Sam Young is 12 years of age, Dorothy Young is five years and Charles Wood is seven years.

Beautiful Bride-Elect

Miss Myrtle Craft, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Craft, 919 Argonne avenue, whose engagement to Vernon H. Smith is announced today and is of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends and relatives.

VAUGHN—HOLEVA.

AUSTIN—HAIRSTON.
Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Austin, of Decatur, announce the engagement of their daughter, Louise, to Burgess Hairston, of Decatur, the wedding to be solemnized March 17 at the home of the bride-elect's parents.

COOPER—POOLE.
Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lee Cooper, of Mitchell, Ga., announce the engagement of their daughter, Vera Kate, to John Thomas Poole, of Atlanta, the marriage to be solemnized early in April. No cards.

CHAMBERS—SHEDDAN.
Mrs. Ida M. Chambers announces the engagement of her daughter, Juiel, to Alfred Russell Sheddan, the marriage to be solemnized in April.

TURNER—QUARLES.
Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Turner announce the engagement of their daughter, Martha Ione, to Charles Day Quarles, the wedding to be solemnized April 2.

Plans Announced For Entertaining Missionary Group

The Woman's Missionary society of First Methodist church, Mrs. F. E. Thomas, president, is making extensive plans to entertain the annual conference of the Woman's Missionary Society of North Georgia, which meets in Atlanta April 9-13.

No detail which would in any measure contribute to the comfort and convenience of the guests is being overlooked. The luncheon committee, ably directed by Mrs. C. R. Justi, will serve luncheon each day to all official delegates. These luncheons will be served in the social hall of the church.

The music committee, Mrs. W. H. L. Nelms, chairman, will furnish appropriate music during the conference. Miss Elizabeth Richardson is chairman of pages.

Mrs. J. W. Setze, publicity chairman of the auxiliary, will handle the publicity for the auxiliary prior to and during the conference. Mrs. Ben Conyers, chairman of homes, requests all auxiliaries to send in names to her at 3660 Peachtree road, stating whether they are to be entertained by auxiliary or will visit friends.

Phi Delta Kappas To Honor Pledges.

The Georgia Alpha chapter of Phi Delta Kappa fraternity entertains at an informal dance at the D. A. R. hall Wednesday evening, March 7 in honor of the pledges of the fraternity. CALDWELL—M'KINLEY.
Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Caldwell announce the engagement of their daughter, Elena Jewell, to Elijah Franklin McKinley, of Zebulon, the wedding to be solemnized at an early date. No cards.

What's in a Name?

We naturally look for the maker's name on a manufactured article in order to determine its worth.

The average person is impressed by an appearance of quality, or the lack of it, but he verifies his judgment by observing the trade-mark or imprint.

Fine products are identified by the name of the maker, whose imprint enhances their value. The "Stevens" imprint on Engraved Stationery has earned an enviable reputation through half a century of experience.

Miss Ruth Hinman To Wed Charles Carter at Early Date

Miss Ruth Hinman, whose engagement is announced today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Hinman, to Charles Chamblee Carter, the marriage to take place in St. Luke's Episcopal church, the date to be announced later. Photograph of Miss Hinman by Thurston Hatcher.

Cordial interest centers in the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. George B. Hinman of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Ruth Hinman, to Charles Chamblee Carter, of this city. Miss Hinman is well-known through her connections with music and art circles. She attended school at Woodberry Hall and Washington seminary, later graduating from the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston. After further study in New York and Europe she returned to Atlanta and has been active in the Atlanta Music club and in St. Luke's Episcopal church.

The elder Hinman family came directly from England and have been prominent in the civic and cultural life of Atlanta for the past forty years. George Hinman was a contractor before his retirement some years ago, and built some of the south's largest cotton mills. He has been closely associated with St. Luke's Episcopal church, both as vestryman and as superintendent of the Sunday school. Miss Hinman is the niece of Dr. Thomas P. Hinman. Miss Hinman's maternal ancestors revert to Vermont in the revolutionary days. Mrs. George Hinman is known here as an active supporter of art interests. Both Mrs. Hinman and her mother, Mrs. Mary Farnsworth, were charter members of the Atlanta Woman's club.

The Carter family was originally from Virginia, settling in South Carolina just previous to the civil war, and, taking an active part in the war. Mr. Carter's mother was a Miss Chamblee. The Chamblee family moved to South Carolina in the seventeen hundreds. The Chamblee plantation extended into what is now the business section of Anderson, S. C., and the site of the present court house was donated to the county from the family plantation. Mr. Carter is a member of the Bell House, having lived there for some years past. He was connected with the Atlanta and Lowry National bank for several years, but is now with the financial sales department of the General Motors Acceptance corporation.

Shearith Isreal Sisterhood To Give Tea.

The Shearith Israel Sisterhood will sponsor a silver tea at the Jewish Woman's club on Washington street Monday, March 12, at 3 o'clock. A program presenting a Purim play by the boys and girls of the S. I. J. and T. E. L. Young Judean clubs; a musical program by well-known Atlanta musicians, and eminent speakers.

The Shearith Israel Sisterhood extends invitations to Jewish women of Atlanta to be present. Mrs. Paul Wolkin is chairman of the sisterhood, and in charge of preparations for the tea.

Talk on Gothic Art At High Museum.

An illustrated talk on Gothic art will be presented Sunday at 3 o'clock at the High Museum. The public is invited to attend. There is no admission charge.

Music Lovers Will Hear Famous Jascha Heifetz

Atlanta music lovers are anticipating the appearance of Jascha Heifetz, world famous Russian violinist, who gives a recital Friday evening, March 9, at 8:30 o'clock, under the auspices of the Southern Musical Bureau all-star artist series.

After two years spent in thrilling thousands in other parts of the world, Heifetz returns to America this season to make his greatest tour, a journey extending from coast to coast, from Canada on the north to Mexico and Cuba on the south.

No longer the boy prodigy who came to us out of the world war, Heifetz is today a mature artist whose place among the truly great is firmly established, not only in America but throughout the world. During his two years abroad he has added triumphs to an already notable list, again winning the unstinted praise of London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Petrograd and the great provincial cities of France, Great Britain, Scandinavia and Australia.

During the past 18 months Heifetz has concertized in 16 countries, crossed the Atlantic six times, the Mediterranean three times, and when he returns to America to begin his tour in October he will have made his fifth journey across the Pacific.

A master of tone and technique, whose problems seem to disappear under his bow, Heifetz brings forth interpretations of majestic beauty with a consummate simplicity and ease. The world has known many great artists that were masters of the violin, but it is a debatable question whether ever in one man were combined so many qualities of supreme excellence as are found in this Russian youth.

Vacant Chair Circle To Meet Thursday.

The Vacant Chair circle meets at the home of Mrs. H. Ewing Dean, 67 Inman Circle, Thursday morning, March 8, at 11 o'clock. All members are urged to be present and to telephone their acceptance of the invitation to the hostess, Hemlock 0857-J. Matters of importance are to be discussed.

Miss Barnett To Be Hostess For Miss Ellis

An interesting event of Saturday will be the bridge-tea at which Miss Helen Barnett wil lentertain at 3:30 o'clock at her home, 2 Sheridan road, honoring Miss Annie Stuart Ellis, whose marriage to Edmund Fay Pearce will be solemnized Wednesday, March 21. Miss Barnett will be assisted in entertaining by Miss Florence Perkins.

The guests will include Misses Phoebe Ellis, Phoebe Rhette, Kathryn Gilbert, Elizabeth Irwin, Elizabeth Plumb, Thelma Brown, Ethel Smith, Lida Mell, Mella Jameson, Mary Flooding, Evelyn Withers, Clara Kendrick, Mary Louise Bailey, Marian Battle, Mesdames Hal Hyde, Leslie Morris, Harry Hallman, Henry Quillan, S. G. Pearce, Loula N. Milton, W. D. Ellis, III, Allen Clapp, MacDonald Brittain, Anton L. Etheridge, F. A. Hooper Jr., and May Bickers Brine.

East Point Social News.

The Epworth League will present "My Irish Rose," at the Russell High school auditorium Friday evening, March 9, at 8 o'clock for the benefit of the league work.

Miss Annie Hollums is recovering from a minor operation.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Wilhite, formerly of Elberton, have taken an apartment at 215 North Church street.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Darcy are visiting in south Georgia.

Mrs. A. C. Curren has returned to Gastonia, N. C., after spending some time with relatives.

Little Miss Carol Campbell, who has recently returned from Jacksonville, Fla., is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. J. D. Campbell.

Harry A. Brown is out after an illness of three weeks.

Mrs. Paul Kohler entertained 25 guests Tuesday afternoon at her home, 402 Linwood avenue, in honor of her little daughter, Frances Kohler, who celebrated her eighth birthday. Games were enjoyed and Mrs. S. W. Wright and Miss Clara Short assisted Mrs. Kohler in entertaining.

Y.W.C.A. Business League Presents 'The Laughing Minstrel'

The Business Girl's league, of the Atlanta Y. W. C. A., presents "The Laughing Minstrel," a clever blackface entertainment, Thursday and Friday evenings, March 8 and 9, at 8 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A. building, 37 Auburn avenue, being the third annual production of this nature given by this group of girls. Miss Ethel Reese, chairman of the music committee of the league, and director of both previous minstrel shows, is in charge of the 1928 production. Miss Ora Dozier, president of the league, who, as "Goober," was the star of last year's performance, will again have a leading role. There will be a quartette offering a number of humorous and popular songs, together with other comedy and some lively blackface dialogue.

Other members of the league having prominent roles in "The Laughing Minstrel," include Mrs. Elizabeth C. Felds, Misses Dot Davenport, Dot McLaughlin, Ruth Palmer and Nell Guest, end men: Miss Pearl Friderici, interlocutor, and Misses Frances Nicholson, Louise Brooks, Mary Nell Smith, Marion Smith, Annie Mae Paris, Katherine Arwood and Mildred Wells. Admission to both performances will be 35 cents and tickets may be purchased at the Y. W. C. A. The proceeds of the production will be used to defray the expenses of a delegate from the league to the national biennial conference of the Y. W. C. A., to be held in Sacramento, Calif., in April.

The members of the council of the Business Girls' league meet Monday, March 5, at the association building to outline plans for the new term of activities of the league, beginning March 15. Among the subjects to be discussed will be the employers' banquet, conferences, convention delegates and the schedule of classes for the new term.

The entire membership of the league meets Tuesday evening, March 6. Classes will take place Thursday evening, beginning at 7:15 o'clock, but will be dismissed a few minutes early because of the minstrel to be given by the league at 8 o'clock.

Miss Katherine Butler, student secretary of the southern region of the Y. W. C. A., is in the city for conferences with the student associations in the neighboring colleges and will make her headquarters at the local association building while visiting groups at the Agnes Scott college, University of Georgia, Wesleyan, Georgia State College for Women and Spelman.

Mrs. W. W. Alexander offers a series of lessons in interior decorating at the Phyllis Wheatley branch of the association, to begin Wednesday, March 7. Miss Lucile Crabtree, physical director at the local Y. W. C. A., has been invited to referee the basketball game to be played March 10 between the Columbus Girls' club team and the Columbus High school team for the city championship of Columbus, Ga. Miss Crabtree, one of the leading exponents in Atlanta of the girls' rules system of basketball has been responsible to a large extent for the widespread revision to girls' rules by the girls' teams in the city during the season just closing. The Y. W. C. A. has sponsored many games during the season, many of which have been played on the Y. W. C. A. basketball court.

"The Fambly Album" To Be Presented.

"The Fambly Album," a delightful comedy, will be presented by the College Park Woman's club Tuesday evening, March 6, at 8 o'clock at the clubhouse, corner North Main street and West Rugby avenue.

Already a splendid cast of prominent local people have been selected and rehearsals are well under way, directed by Miss Christine Trimble, of College Park. The minuet and other quaint dances by the pupils of Miss Nellie Sullivan, will be features of the program as well as several musical numbers of merit.

SANBROOKE
The Sports Fabric of Spring

It is a Virgin wool fabric, very soft and light and fine. And at Allen's it is shown in some of the smartest interpretations of Spring sports coats—with and without collars of fur.

The model sketched ($110) shows the Jap Badger collar.

The same coat without fur may be had in two modes, one at $69.50 and one at $59.50. Still another version employs the the Kit Fox collar, and is priced $89.50.

On the Square---

Fashion is very much so this Spring! The new scarves are often square—except when they are folded into the eternally smart triangle or when they are cut on a bias. Designs run the rainbow of colors and are either conventional, futuristic, floral, or coin dotted! Allen's display is unusually colorful and interesting.

The square becomes a triangle and ties like this—or the scarf may be cut triangular in the beginning. It is, however, an integral part of the sports costume—either with sweater and skirt, sports frock, or ensemble!

Carmen

Carmen is brilliant, plain colored, and subtly flattering in line. And the little Carmen pin holds the scarf loosely yet firmly in place. This georgette scarf can transform the simplest of frocks into something charmingly bizarre—intriguingly feminine.

A Biased Opinion

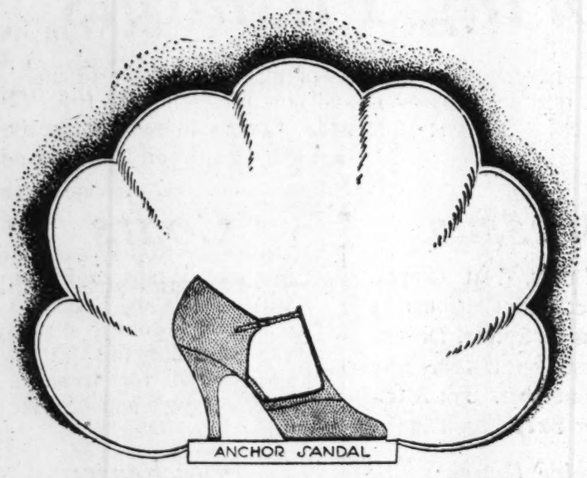

Fashion is no less sure of herself here—with these straight, biased scarfs—narrow, simple, tailored. Their simplicity is relieved by their coloring and designs. Batiks, florals, coin dots, prints in charming variety of color combinations.

There are, too, flowing end ties, four-in-hands, Windsors, in close competition for popularity with the wider scarves.

ALLEN'S

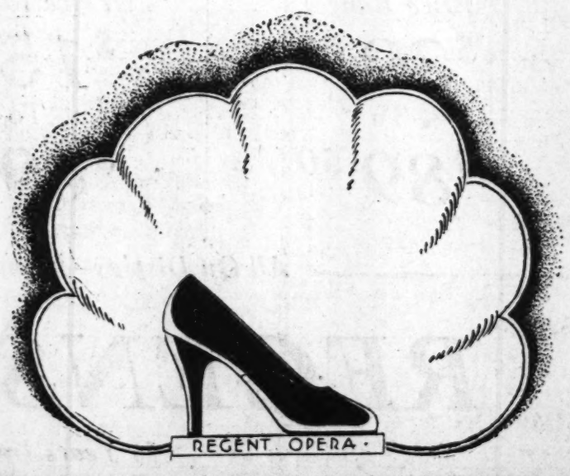

One particularly good model from Delman, whose shoes are exclusively at Allen's, is this anchor sandal, of French beige kid, piped in brown. It is shown, too, in white kid, with a delicate piping of champagne kid.

$27.50

Black patent and black satin are equally popular mediums for the Regent opera pump, all black and very chic for Spring, when black coats and black chiffons and laces are so very much the vogue.

Atlanta Camp Fire Council To Meet Monday, March 5

The girls' council of Atlanta Camp Fire will meet at Camp Fire headquarters Monday, March 5, at 2:30 o'clock. Luncheon will be served for 20 cents. One representative from each group in the Atlanta district is requested to be present with a report of the work of the past month done by her group.

The Guardians' association meets Tuesday evening, March 6, at 7:30 o'clock at the home of Miss Essie Belle Brockman, 920 Greenwood avenue, N. E. All guardians and assistant guardians are urged to be present. The association is divided into four groups under the following captains: Mrs. Harry L. Hall, Mrs. Virginia Wade Bolden, Miss Jimmie Brown and Miss Elizabeth Chapman. A prize will be given to the group having the best attendance. Motion songs to be used at the Grand Council Fire will be rehearsed, birthday week plans discussed, problems of guardians discussed and new guardians welcomed.

The committee of awards will meet at Camp Fire headquarters Wednesday, March 7, at 2:30 o'clock for the purpose of testing girls for rank. All girls are urged to come before the committee as early as possible in order that they may receive their rank at the birthday Grand Council Fire. Girls are reminded to bring with them all material to help the committee in determining just how honors were earned. All girls must bring health charts, head bands and honors listed.

The Swannannoa Camp Fire Girls met at the home of Mrs. J. Howell Green, 645 Sycamore street, Decatur, Tuesday afternoon and made infants' garments to be used in the baby ward of a hospital in DeKalb county.

The Luckie Street School Camp Fire Girls met Thursday afternoon and learned motion songs under the leadership of Gladys Pratt, assistant guardian.

Bowden-Dobbins Wedding Rites Will Be Solemnized in Thomson

Cordial interest centers in the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Sarah Dosia Bowden, of Thomson, to Hugh Clayton Dobbins, of Atlanta. The marriage will be solemnized at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday evening, March 20, at the home of the bride-elect in Thomson. The Rev. Lee Allgood, of Atlanta, uncle of Miss Bowden, will perform the impressive ring ceremony in the presence of a representative gathering of relatives and friends.

Miss Bowden has chosen as her maid of honor Miss Lucile Bowden, of Thomson. Miss Elizabeth Spence, of Camilla, will be the bridesmaid. The bride-elect will be given in marriage by her father, Paul Bowden. Paul H. Dobbins, brother of the groom-elect, will be the best man. Richard Bowden, of Thomson, will act as groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception will be held at the home of the bride-elect. The young couple will leave afterward for a several weeks' trip to Bermuda.

Miss Bowden graduated from Wesleyan Female college, Macon; Curry School of Expression, Boston, and Sargent School of Dramatic Art, New York city.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Bowden, of Thomson, and granddaughter of the late J. W. Minter, of Macon, and the late Rev. John M. Bowden, of the North Georgia conference, M. E. Church, South.

Mr. Dobbins is the son of Walter Clayton Dobbins, of Atlanta, and has been associated in the life insurance business since 1914 with his father, and his brother, Paul H. Dobbins.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Wilson entertained the Mr. and Mrs. Bridge club on Saturday night.

Mrs. M. E. Geldert Celebrates 96th Birthday Today

Mrs. M. E. Geldert will celebrate her 96th birthday Sunday, March 4. According to her custom for the past nine years, she has kept open house in the afternoon and evening of her birthday, and a large number of her friends and relatives will call Sunday at her home, "Whispering Pines," in East Lake, where she resides with her son, Howard Geldert.

Another son, Louis Geldert, of Memphis, Tenn., will be present at the celebration, coming to Atlanta for that purpose. Mrs. Geldert's other children are Brenton Geldert, of Sweetwater, Texas; Mrs. W. Beckwith, of Victoria, B. C., and Mrs. Fred W. Dimock, of Windsor, Nova Scotia.

Born in Windsor, Nova Scotio, Canada, in 1832, of English and Irish descent, Mrs. Geldert has been blessed with unusual good health and an abundance of energy and enthusiasm. On coming to Atlanta from Canada nearly ten years ago she united by letter with the Second Baptist church, where she has since been an active worker and a regular attendant at the Sunday morning services and many other gatherings of the membership. For 50 years Mrs. Geldert has been a member of the Baptist church. Since uniting with the Second it has been her pleasure to join in the activities of Circle 4, of which she is at present an active and beloved member. As a member of the home department of the Sunday school she takes part in all plans of the school and church.

Moritz Emory To Be Presented At Woman's Club Meeting

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president, announces the regular club meeting of the Atlanta Woman's club March 12, at 3 o'clock, in the club auditorium, at which time an unusual afternoon of charm will delight the members. Miss Nana Tucker, member of the music committee, will present Moritz Emery, eminent musician and composer, with the assistance of Mary Smith Webb, soprano, and Santo Martini, pianist, two of his pupils, in a beautiful interpretation of song and music. Moritz Emery will accompany Miss Webb in her numbers.

This program will be interspersed by a talk by Mr. Emery on "The Unifying Power of Music," with remarks about the various numbers to be performed. This will be one of the most brilliant features ever offered the members, and the president urges a full attendance to greet these performers.

At this time a "suggestion box" will be placed in the foyer of the auditorium, for the benefit of those members desiring to suggest names for the coming election of officers for the new year. The treasurer will also be on hand to receive dues from members desiring to pay at this time. Nonmember can attend by payment of 50 cents.

Art Committee Meets.

Mrs. Fred Bull, chairman, announces that the art committee of the Woman's club meets at 3:30 o'clock Tuesday, March 6, at the home of Mrs. John Morris, 1485 Peachtree street. A talk on "Carved Ivories" by Mrs. Morris will be the feature of the afternoon's program. Mrs. Morris has for some years been interested in collecting old ivories, and has a number of rare pieces of this interesting art, which she will use to illustrate her talk on the subject.

Narcotic Meeting.

An interesting meeting of Tuesday morning, March 6, at 10:30 o'clock, will be that of the public welfare department of the Atlanta Woman's club with the chairman, Mrs. George Ripley, Jr., and the members of the committee featuring narcotics. Mrs. R. C. Jessup, chairman of narcotics, will be assisted by Mrs. T. J. Ripley, Mrs. George Jewett, Mrs. Houston Johnston, Mrs. L. D. T. Quinby and Dr. Elizabeth Broach.

T. E. Middlebrook, the federal agent of narcotics, will make a talk on conditions in the city as well as in the state. Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the club, has worked untiringly in making the successful drive during narcotic week which was observed the past week. Mayor I. N. Ragsdale issuing a proclamation arousing widespread recognition of the traffic in drugs as a menace. At the world conference on narcotic education, a call for international observance of narcotic week was issued for February 22 through February 29. Many of the states observed this week and much publicity was given to this great question.

A cordial invitation is extended to the general public to attend this meeting.

The garden committee of the Atlanta Woman's club, of which Mrs. Joel Hunter is chairman, meets on Thursday, March 8, at 10:30 o'clock, at the club. John T. Boifeuillet will give a talk on "Gardens of the World." The garden committee and the Woman club have been interested for some time in establishing a garden for the city of Atlanta, which would open to the residents and the many tourists who visit the city. Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the Woman's club, has been assured by city authorities of their interest in a city garden, and under the direction and supervision of L. L. Wallis, superintendent of the city parks, and with the cooperation of the park committee of council, it is hoped that the garden will soon take form.

The garden committee and the club are especially interested in a rose garden. There are a few cities in the United States known as "The Rose City" because of their gardens, including Portland, Ore.; Little Rock, Ark.; Victoria, Texas; Thomasville, Ga., and in British Columbia.

The garden committee meets the second and fourth Thursdays in the month at the Woman's club. Visitors in the city, interested in gardening, are invited to attend the lectures, a small fee being charged. Mrs. Frank Fitten, chairman of program, has arranged an attractive program.

Literature Class.

The literature class of the Atlanta Woman's club is deriving much pleasure and profit from the year's work under the leadership of Mrs. B. H. Hill and Mrs. W. A. Robertson. The next meeting will be held March 26 in the palm room, and will be devoted to the reading of original short stories.

At the last meeting of the year a debate will be held: "Resolved, That Modern Literature Compares Favorably With the Literature of the Nineteenth Century." A benefit bridge sponsored by the literature class will be given Wednesday, April 11. Tables $1. Reservations may be made by phoning Mrs. Simmons Hemlock 0225, Mrs. J. Hinton Clarke, Hemlock 2830-J, or Mrs. B. H. Hill, Ivy 1544-W.

Charles Gos Will Address French Alliance

Charles Gos, noted writer and lecturer, will make his second appearance before the French Alliance of Atlanta at a meeting which takes place at the home of Mrs. Charles Loridans Thursday, March 8, at 3:30 o'clock.

An Alpinist by birth, Charles Gos has scaled most of the Alpine peaks without a guide, and he has applied to literature the "feeling for mountains" that his father expresses in his pictures. His first book, published in 1912 and illustrated by his father, "Near the Snows and Glaciers," immediately placed the young author in the front rank of European Alpine writers. A mountain artillery officer in the Swiss army, Captain Charles Gos has written two charming books, "Under the Flag" and "Frontier Sketches," the latter receiving a prize from the Swiss Schiller foundation. His latest book, "La Croix du Cervin," has just been translated into English under the title "The Cross on the Matterhorn," and for his play, "Verinoca," a drama having the mountains as its background, the well-known French composer, Vincent D'Indy, has written an important musical score.

Mr. Gos is also a journalist, writing for the Journal de Geneve, Le Correspondant (of Paris) and the Revue de Geneve. "The Writers and the Alps" is the subject of Mr. Gos' lecture.

Camp Walker, U. V. C. To Sponsor Dance.

The ladies of Camp Walker, U. V. C., will sponsor a dance at the Henry Grady Saturday evening, March 10. Tickets are $1 per couple. Mrs. G. E. Cooper and Mrs. Frank Golden will act as hostesses. The Kle club and their friends are especially invited.

Squad Chairmen Announce Dates Of Voters' Meets

Mrs. A. B. Heath and Mrs. J. F. Springer will be joint hostesses for the ninth ward, League of Women Voters, at 473-B Moreland avenue, Wednesday, March 7, at 3 o'clock. The subject for discussion will be "Schools." Mrs. Fred Ardary, ward chairman, will preside.

Mrs. N. W. Printup, chairman of the tenth ward, has announced that there will be a meeting for her ward at the Ragsdale school, formerly the Oakland City school, Tuesday, March 6, from 3 to 4 o'clock. The meeting is especially to welcome the new members of the tenth ward, who came in during the recent drive. Mrs. Printup will preside, Mrs. Alfred Bailey, president of the league, will explain the league principles; Mrs. N. V. Perry, chairman of the ward officers' council, will say a few words, and Miss Eleonore Raoul will touch upon the work the league is doing at present.

Membership Drive.

The membership drive, which has been carried on during the past month, came to a close Wednesday, with one of the squads in the eighth ward, headed by Mrs. C. H. Peters, winning the cup for bringing in the greatest number of members. The drive closed with approximately the same number taken in last year, the total reaching in round numbers 550. Last year it was 568.

The drive closed the fifth annual drive held by the league. Mrs. Harvey Payne, chairman of membership, was taken ill during the campaign and Mrs. Bailey, the president of the league, assumed her duties and urges all those workers who did not quite reach their quotas to continue their efforts and complete their work as soon as possible.

Miss Sikes Weds Lonnie E. Bridges.

A marriage of interest was that of Miss Ethel Mae Sikes, of Ty Ty, and Lonnie E. Bridges, of Tifton, which took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Sikes, at Ty Ty, Sunday morning, February 19, at 10 o'clock.

Prior to the entrance of the wedding party Miss Lillian Overstreet sang "I Love You Truly" with Miss Lucile Goggans, who played the wedding music, at the piano. Rev. D. C. Rainey, of Tifton, read the marriage service, during which Miss Goggans played softly, "The Flower Song."

The bride was lovely in her wedding gown of delft blue georgette, trimmings of dark shades, with hat, gloves, shoes and bag of blending shades of tan. Her flowers were a corsage bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. For traveling she wore a coat of tan, matching the other accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Bridges left immediately after the ceremony for a short wedding trip, after which they will be temporarily with the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. I. Bridges, on Central avenue.

Among those attending the wedding from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. B. I. Bridges, Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Pittman, Mrs. J. B. Hollingsworth, Miss Flora Hollingsworth, Willis Hollingsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Slack, Misses Lucile Goggans, Lillian Overstreet, Wilma Stipe, Elmore Jenkins, George Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Hill Pendley and others, of Tifton; Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Patrick and family, of Omega; Miss Jewel Varner, of Albany, and Miss Lucy Sikes, of Swainsboro, Ga., a sister of the bride.

Mrs. Thad E. Horton Honors Members of Macon Sewing Club

Mrs. Thad E. Horton entertained the members of the Sewing club of Macon, to which she formerly belonged, at one of the loveliest parties of the past week at her home on Clairmont avenue in Decatur.

The guests, who included a group of prominent young Macon matrons, motored up Wednesday afternoon and were entertained at a beautifully appointed dinner by the hostess. Blue and yellow formed the attractive color motif of the decorations, which featured quantities of jonquils, blue hyacinths and calendulas. The members of the club are Mesdames James C. Anderson, Pete Holliday, Ernest Corn, Persons Heath, Warren Limerman, Baxter Jones, Zeke Taylor, Marion Parr, Frampton Farmer, William Holmes, John McKay and Miss Catherine Williams. Additional guests invited for dinner included Mrs. Robert J. Taylor, Jr., Mrs. Virginia Fraser Pratt, Mrs. Earl McMurria, Mrs. Malcolm Wilkes and Mrs. Grady Poole.

Mrs. Horton entertained her guests at luncheon Thursday and they returned to Macon Thursday afternoon.

Spring Festivities To Begin March 16 On Emory Campus

The Little Commencement committee, headed by George Patterson, of Tallassee, Ala., announces final plans for the spring festivities to start at Emory university Friday, March 16, and continue through Sunday, March 18. A round of receptions, house parties, teas and the like will prevail.

Practically all of the thirteen fraternities on the Emory campus are planning house parties lasting the entire time. The Student Activities council is mailing invitations to young ladies from all over the south.

The opening reception will be given by the Chi Phi fraternity at Druid Hills Country club from 5 to 7 on Friday afternoon. This will follow the finals of the Pan-Hellenic basketball tournament which is a features of the annual Little Commencement festivities.

Emory university's latest musical organization, the Emory band, directed by Virgil Eady, will give its initial public concert for the benefit of the Little Commencement guests from 9 to 10 Friday evening. This will be followed by the annual Pan-Hellenic formal reception at 11 o'clock, at the Druid Hills club. The reception will be featured by a grand march which will be participated in only by the two Pan-Hellenic representatives and one alternate from each fraternity. The reception will close at 3.

On Saturday, the second day of Little Commencement, there will be three more receptions, a breakfast reception from 10 to 12 a. m., the Kappa Sigma tea from 5 to 7 in the afternoon, and the final reception from 9 to 12 Saturday night. All these will be held at Druid Hills.

Saturday afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock, the Emory chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary journalistic fraternity, will hold its annual roadster show. Immediately following, the Delta Tau Delta fraternity will entertain at open house in honor of the members of Pi Delta Epsilon and the sponsors of the roadster show.

Sunday will be a day of church and Sunday school parties in the morning, with numerous fraternities holding open houses. Throughout the three days, the individual fraternities have arranged for private entertainments, luncheons, and "feeds" for their own guests.

The Little Commencement celebration is an annual affair, which serves as a pause between final examinations of the winter quarter and opening of the spring quarter of the school year. It was inaugurated in 1925.

Fort McPherson Social News Centers Cordial Interest

Ft. McPherson, March 3.—The Fort McPherson officers club had an enjoyable evening of bridge Friday March 2. There were nine tables. Mrs. David E. Barnett and Lieutenant Syril E. Faine were awarded the prizes for high scores.

Monday afternoon Mrs. Nelson Myll entertaining the Monday Afternoon Bridge club at her quarters. The guest list includes Mesdames Harry J. Keeley, Stanley Blanton, Roy Turrentine, Robert Griffith Turner, Misses Margaret Casaday, Lucie Olive Gaines and Dorothy Tebbetts.

The chapel guild meets Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the officers club at the post with Mrs. Will L. Pyles and Mrs. Augustus B. Jones as hostesses.

Captain and Mrs. Samuel C. Harrison returned to the post Friday evening after a month spent in Florida. Their itinerary included Palm Beach, St. Augustine, Orlando and Miami. Captain and Mrs. Harrison were accompanied home by Mrs. Milton Hughes Pressley, of Miami, who will be their guest at the post. Cordial interest centers in this charming visitor who was Miss Etta Gregg, of Augusta. Mr. Pressley also claims Georgia as his native state, his home having been in Elberton.

Mrs. Samuel George Searing, who has made so many friends in army circles as the guest of her son and daughter, Captain and Mrs. Harrison, left Saturday evening for her home in Jacksonville, Fla.

Miss Robert attended the hop Saturday evening at the Georgia Military academy as the guest of Henry Hester, cadet at the academy. Sunday morning Miss Robert, Major Hester and Henry Hester joined the riders at the post to enjoy the many winding bridle paths.

Junior Red Cross Members To Fete School Principals

The Junior Red Cross members of the elementary schools will celebrate the tenth anniversary of the establishment of the organization by entertaining the school principals at a beautifully planned event to be given at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, March 6, at the Virginia Frances tea room.

Each classroom of every school in Atlanta has an active Junior Red Cross club and the officers of these clubs are chosen by the teachers and pupils to represent the school at the monthly council meetings. There are about 150 of these representatives who will be hosts to the school principals at the entertainment on Wednesday. A delightful program is planned and refreshments will be served, all arrangements for the occasion being undertaken and executed by the juniors themselves.

In this effort to celebrate the tenth birthday of the Junior Red Cross the younger juniors in the grammar schools are following the example set by the High School juniors in their successful "Interschool Frolic," given at the auditorium Friday night. These younger members decided that their celebration should take the form of a tribute to the school principals who have so materially helped the junior program for the year.

During the past six years the Atlanta juniors have worked under the leadership of Mrs. Louis J. Elsas, chairman of the Atlanta chapter of the Junior Red Cross, who has been assisted during most of that time by the secretary, Mrs. C. B. Dexter.

The Lady Arlington Silhouette

¶ How do fashion fancies that suddenly sweep two continents gain their heights of favor . . . ? Crosswords . . . hobble skirts . . . trailing gowns . . . and then short dresses . . . have commanded the world in their day—

¶ Now comes THE LADY ARLINGTON SILHOUETTE . . . who is Lady Arlington? We confess we had not heard of her till now . . . a charming Viscountess, surely, who did appear at Saint Moritz and the Riviera in this stunning silhouette—

And now the whole fashion world is intensely excited, and happy and thrilled over it as over no other fashion-wave in years—

¶ The LADY ARLINGTON SILHOUETTE is strictly dinner and evening . . . long, graceful lines of regal poise . . . trailing to the back a bit, and lifting just a little to the front—This beautiful influence extends to Millinery, Footwear, Hosiery . . . Laird-Schober bring the LADY ARLINGTON SLIPPER . . . Gary has simultaneously heard the mystic word . . . There is the LADY ARLINGTON HAT!

Other hours of the day are under this popular spell — the VISCOUNTESS MODE for STREET and SPORT—

Suddenly we are all-new—because the second daughter of an Earl became beautifully revolutionary at the smart resorts where Paris watches everything!

THE LADY ARLINGTON SILHOUETTE IS STRICTLY ONE OF DINNER AND EVENING

yet the same "influence" is governing the NEW trend for street in the Viscountess mode for Street and . . . AFTERNOON

. . . the Viscountess trend rejoices in street-chic and afternoon —and touches most wondrously on sport . . . this new, revealing expression of youth, and elegance and spring is to be exhibited in detail tomorrow at Muse's . . .

FURNITURE IN KEEPING WITH THE MODERNISTIC TREND.

THIS is the modernistic period in furniture just as surely as there has been a Hepplewhite, Chippendale, Tudor and Italian Rennaissance period there will be a modernistic period, for there is a definite trend towards the modernistic in everything—clothes, automobiles, jewelry and home furnishings.

This week Davison-Paxon company will have there Spring showing of everything pertaining to the home. The most outstanding display will be the first authentic display of genuine Modernistic creations in furniture and home furnishings ever displayed in any Southern store.

Among the beautiful importations from France created for Davison-Paxon company I saw modern divans chairs in groups, attractive coffee tables and many other artistic pieces.

This type of furniture is very popular in the east and is in great demand. It is not a fad—but a definite period in this modern age. Don't fail to visit Davison-Paxon's Spring showing this week.

BEAUTY HAS SO MANY FORMS.

A lovely coiffeur, for instance—such as Maison Adolphe can arrange. He has added another new waving machine to his already completely equipped Beauty Salon at 622 Peachtree street, and it is now possible for the women of Atlanta to receive a wave under Maison Adolphe's personal supervision for $15 and up.

Maison Adolphe was one of the first Eugene wavers. He came to this country in 1921 and Mr. Eugene came over the same year. Monsieur Adolphe was then connected with Alexander's on Fifth avenue in New York city. One of the first Eugene machines was installed in Alexander's, where Adolphe was taught the correct method of permanent waving by Mr. Eugene himself. He then assisted Mr. Eugene in demonstrating and giving some of the first permanent waves given in this country.

So you can readily understand why I say that Mr. Adolphe is one of the oldest and best permanent wave experts in America.

The coiffeur of the moment is feminine rather than severely boyish. Hair is arranged with loose wide waves and with softening locks about the the face. Maison Adolphe achieves these new effects.

The waves given by Maison Adolphe are beautiful and natural looking, framing the face in soft undulated waves.

And there is another thing that has impressed me about the Maison Adolphe Beauty Salon, and that is the ring roller reducer. A great many have already tried this wonderful new reducing machine and are very much pleased with the rapid loss of superflous flesh.

In fact so many women and men are taking these treatments that Monsieur Adolphe has set aside hours in which men can take the Ring Roller Reducing Treatments.

This machine will reduce any part of the body, so if anyone wishes to reduce they can lose flesh quickly by the Ring Roller Reducing Treatments given at Maison Adolphe's, 622 Peachtree street.

I ATTENDED the opening of Franklin's new store and I was so excited over the music, and the many beautiful things on display, that I did not, of course, see everything. So yesterday I went again to Franklin's. I stopped in the Shoe Department and there I saw the smartest of spring shoes, the newest leathers, the modish trimmings and the exquisite workmanship that distinguishes Franklin's shoes were there in all the glory of spring. They were all designed by J. B., who is a noted designer of ladies' "Beautiful shoes for stage and street." One shoe that I especially liked was called "The Teaser." This beautiful shoe was of all patent kid leather, the "T" strap and sandel effect, with high spiked heel, $5.85. This shoe can also be had in the low heel.

Another was called L'Amour, a Parisian Sandelette. This smart shoe is made up in dressy patent, and in biscuit parchment.

Franklin's shoes have three wonderful assets: Quality, style, and the cost is so reasonable that milady can have a pair of shoes to correspond with every costume.

GORGEOUS FURS FOR THE SPRING WARDROBE.

NECK pieces, exquisite pelts shown in single and double choakers are on display in the Fur department of Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company.

With the first warm days of March, milady will emerge bedecked in her spring dress or ensemble suit but no spring costume is complete without the addition of one of these smart furs. And at Chamberlin's you will find one of the largest selections of furs for spring wear in the city of Atlanta. Russian Sable, Stone Marten, Baum Marten, Kit fox, Silver fox, Bisque fox neck pieces in the exquisite quality to be expected at Chamberlin's are being shown for spring and summer wear in the fur department of Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company.

NEGLIGEES in soft tones, of blue, rose, yellow, orchid and a combination of many colors are displayed at the Fifth Ave. Linen Store, 69 Whitehall street, S. W., are now on sale at less than half of the original value.

These dainty garments are being sold at a sacrifice and anyone who loves pretty things should see them. Perhaps you are collecting a hope chest for your trousseau, if you are, here is a chance to buy a very beautiful silk negligee at less than half of the original price.

The Fifth Ave. Linen Store is noted for its fine linens, and laces, they also have a beautiful line of silk and satin step-ins, nightgowns and negligees. So, if you love pretty things now is the time to visit the Atlanta branch of the Fifth Ave. Linen Store.

The smart world has definitely placed its stamp of approval upon the tailored suit for spring. While the classic Tailleur is always in perfect taste a few variations are permissible and have a distinction all their own.

A BEAUTIFUL FACE IS A WOMAN'S BIRTHRIGHT.

BUT her face cannot be beautiful unless it is free from unsightly hair.

This is one of the most common of facial blemishes, and is a blemish that is very noticeable, for there is nothing so unattractive as ugly stiff hair on the face of an otherwise beautiful woman, so my advice to anyone who is troubled by such a blemish is to investigate the Tricho System, for these treatments will painlessly remove this blemish with the most scientific method known. Tricho System removes superfluous hair from any part of the face or body forever, leaving the skin soft and beautiful.

There is a lady operator in charge who will gladly give you free consultation. A booklet will be sent to you upon request. Write to Tricho Institute of Atlanta, 622 Candler Bldg., or phone IVy 3639.

GENERAL ELECTRIC Refrigerator

Fifth Article of Miss Alice Bradley's Series of Menus for Different Occasions.

After-Theater Luches.

WHEN you are entertaining friends at the theater you often want to offer them some refreshments after the performance, but an after-the-theater supper at a restaurant or hotel is often expensive and a home meal may be more delicious and interesting.

Place beverages to chill and put a delicious mousse or parfait in the chilling unit of the General Electric Refrigerator immediately after dinner and it should be ready to serve upon your return from the theater.

With an electric refriegartor and an electric grill a dainty and appetising supper may be ready to eat shortly after your return.

THE SPRING ENSEMBLE DEVELOPED IN TALK O' TOWN SILKS AT J. M. HIGH'S.

THE Talk O' Town Silks are rich in color and are of the finest pieces of flat crepe made today. These hand-blocked silks bespeak the spirit of spring; they remind me of a garden in bloom for each design is a picture, a riot of color—the newest smartest and most beautiful shades are blended together and form patterns that are different from anything you will see in any other silks.

There could be nothing more beautiful for spring and summer than a frock or an ensemble made of any one of the many designs of Talk O' Town silks on display at High's.

One piece of the exquisite hand-blocked Talk O' Town silk was a blending of gold, rose, new green, fawn and a touch of red. Another design was depicted on a background of new grey with a rose-wood motif blended into shades of old rose with touches of blue and gold. Still another design was of blue and white mingled with orchid, lavender touches of purple, green and gold.

You cannot picture the exquisite beauty of these gorgeous silks, and when you see them you will wonder how a human hand could perform such work or how these colors could be blended except by the brush of an artist. By all means don't fail to see the Talk O' Town silks at High's. They are really the talk of the town.

A BEAUTIFUL costume can be so easily spoiled if one does not have a pair of shoes that are smart, dainty and made up in the attractive spring styles.

At the Mirror, 46 Whitehall street, I found a shoe that was neat and refined, and yet, it was unusual looking. The vamp and heel was of patent, the quarter of fawn colored brocaded silk. The dainty bow of brocaded silk was piped in gold. I liked this pair so much that I purchased them. The price was $7.50.

But I saw still another shoe that was also very beautiful, it is pictured above, "Clara," is the name of this dainty pump. It is a patent slipper with silk kid collar, gold buckle studded with topaz brilliants. This slipper is also designed with a black satin vamp and heel, honey beige paradise silk quarter, gold silk kid collar with rhinestone buckle to match. You can see by the picture that it must be an adorable shoe and the price is $9.50.

You should see the beautiful selection of spring styles at the Mirror before selecting your spring wardrobe.

AS FOUR WOMEN HEAR IT

THE IDES OR MARCH reveal a record number of feminine hats tossed into Fulton county's political arena, with the 1928 campaign waxing most exciting and spirited on the eve before Atlanta voters rush to the polls next Wednesday to exercise the privilege of electing favorite daughters in the primary. Although Mrs. L. D. T. Quinby, out for deputy in the tax receiver's office, has never before announced for office, she possesses a decided flair relative to political measures, inherited from her late father, William A. Hemphill, serving as his honor, the mayor of Atlanta in 1892. She was a very young girl when the title of chief magistrate was conferred upon him, but well remembers the many incidents following in its wake, and was often called upon to dispense social hospitality in his name at the parental mansion on Peachtree street. Back in those days when the flourishing little city enrolled fewer names in the directory, the mayor's salary was set at $100 per annum, and Captain Hemphill turned back to the treasury this designated sum, declining its acceptance on the plea that the honor of being Atlanta's mayor was sufficient unto itself.

Perhaps the greatest constructive and most outstanding civic work ever achieved by Mrs. Quinby is exemplified in the erection of the infected hospital opposite to and under the supervision of Grady hospital. It was done while she was chairman of the jail committee of the Atlanta Woman's club, and she hammered down upon the subject with so much force, making it of such vital consequence, that council voted $25,000 and Fulton county matched this amount with an appropriation applied towards its construction. Mrs. Quinby was mistress of ceremony at its dedication and functions today as a very necessary factor in the civic life of a growing metropolis.

In staging her contest for county treasurer, Mrs. J. R. Wakefield has permitted none of the verdant sward to grow under her feet. As chairman of ways and means committee of the Home for Old Women, she is Mrs. F. M. Farley's right bower, ably aiding the president in every possible manner in putting and keeping the institution upon a sound financial basis. With truly feminine instinct, Mrs. Wakefield supervises and directs the beautification of the yard surrounding the home on West End avenue, in West End, at the same time keeping tab upon the exact amount expended for this work. The insurance business has held her interest for the past six years and like other nominees for office she was a licensed teacher for eight years following her graduation from the State Normal school.

Then there's Mrs. Mabel MacNeill Abbott, who wants to be the county treasurer, a post she believes she can successfully fill because of her association in the office with her father, William Abbott, the incumbent. Ever since her graduation from Girls' High school, Mrs. MacNeill has continuously made her own living, gaining proficiency as a business woman, always enjoying the confidence of her employers and patrons. Her acquaintance and experience with public matters has made her very competent and she combines a very gracious personality with decided beauty.

Mrs. J. E. Maddox, another popular member of the fair sex, running for deputy on the tax collector's ticket, was inspired to seek office through her trained familiarity with Fulton county tax books, upon which she has been consistently engaged for five months at a time during a period of four years, and prides herself upon the statement that she knows every tax payer in the county. She comes from a family of educators, having won high acclaim for herself as a teacher in the county schools. Her father, Prof. W. L. Parker, of College Park, is one of Georgia's most learned men, known in educational fields from boundary to boundary, and under whose tutelage Mrs. Maddox was prepared for entrance into LaGrange Female college, afterward joining the ranks as a teacher. She is the widow of J. E. Maddox, who served as Atlanta's councilman for several years.

Politically bent Mrs. J. T. Hemperley, running on the tax receiver's ticket, was born Miss Pauline Shirley, of Atlanta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Shirley, who received her education in Fulton county schools and spent her married life in East Point during her husband's lifetime. Left a widow several years ago she allied herself with business activities and takes the greatest interest in her church work.

A foursome has entered the race for deputy sheriff, one of whom, Mrs. Julia Jackson Turner, has been a resident of Atlanta for 25 years and secretary in the office of the solicitor of the criminal court of Atlanta for the past four years and has taken an active interest in civic work. Still another, Mrs. Ruth Huie Wood, is said to be the first woman in Fulton county to hold the office of deputy sheriff, having been sworn in in 1[illegible] serving in that capacity up to the present time. Mrs. Nellie Trammell Goldsmith moved to Atlanta from South Carolina as an infant and received her education in the Atlanta public schools, graduating from Commercial High school in 1922. She is the daughter of Robert Trammell and a niece of Frank Trammell, who is connected with the Grady hospital. Mrs. L. K. Stallings holds a three-year Red Cross record made during the world war, and was twice sent to Washington to attend important conferences. Mrs. Annie E. Reynolds, who has been sworn a deputy sheriff since 1922, was educated at Temple college in Newnan, has resided in Atlanta since 1917, and she received her early schooling at Cedartown High school.

Running on the ticket for Atlanta criminal court solicitor is Mrs. Matt W. Layton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Coleman, was born in Atlanta and has always been active in religious work. She is a charter member of the International Machinist Union, and is the widowed mother of two children. Last, but by no means least, comes Mrs. Beulah Donehoo Manston in the race for county treasurer, who acceptably combined as only modern women know how, the roles of mother and teacher. Immediately after her graduation from Girls High in 1897, she began to teach in the county school system, only laying down her duties as instructor to be married in 1900. In 1909 she was left with three children to support—Richard, Carl and Virginia, and with only a small amount of savings which she had been able to put away during her married life, she set about the task of maintaining herself and these three children, and before long she was back in the schools teaching. Her first position was as grade teacher, but so pronounced was her ability both as instructor and as executive, that within a very short time she was placed in charge of a school as the principal. Supplementing her income from daytime teaching by teaching at night, she was able to build and pay for her home, which cost her around $3,000, but is now worth about $6,000, and which she owns free from encumbrance. In 1916 she took a much larger school in the county school system, being made principal, and this position she held until she gave up teaching in 1921. She was born in what is now the Center Hill district of Fulton county, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Donehoo; she was one of 14 children.

COINCIDENT with the celebration of Dr. and Mrs. Adiel J. Moncrief's silver wedding anniversary at their home on Adams street in Decatur, came the announcement of their only daughter's engagement. Little Tracy Horton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Horton, dressed as Cupid in white satin with gauze wings, a silver bow, arrow and quiver, carried a silver tray with a card for each guest with a poem printed in silver, the rhyme announcing the engagement of Miss Roslyn Moncrief and Holmes Du Pree Jordan, the following rhyme singing of the marriage 25 years ago of Dr. and Mrs. Moncrief with the last verse revealing their daughter's betrothal.

"Five and twenty years agone,
We joined our hearts and hands,
Through these years we've walked as one,
In sacred marriage bond.

Today, dear friends, to you this tells
Of other love-vows plighted,
For soon again the wedding bells
Will ring for hearts united.

When June its sunny days shall bring,
And love's sweet words are said,
When bridal voices, joyous, sing,
Our daughter will be wed."

TELEVISION has startled the land. Some one saw across the ocean. How marvelous!

Four Women have seen equally as far, that if letters can be said to bring pictures of those who are traveling on the other side of the sea. Word has been received by friends here from Mrs. W. S. Elkin, who with Dr. Elkin sailed from New York January 21 for a Mediterranean cruise, which has included such points as Funchal, Madeira, Malta, Luxor, Egypt, whence the letters were dispatched, and will be completed with the Holy Land and a last stop in Paris. Mrs. Elkin was accompanied by her sister, Miss Jennie Duncan and her cousin, Mrs. Juliette Barnard. The party will return to America in April.

Mrs. Elkin writes: "We are just back from our day at Funchal, Madeira, and it would take the pen of an artist to even begin to tell you of the beauty and charm of that place. We took a cog-whel railroad for the top of the mountain and it seemed as each view was more extraordinary than the last. One wall as long as from your house to mine hung robed in bignonia, hedges of poinsettia as tall as your crab-apple tree, a mass of bloom, boganvellia in every shade hiding the ugly out-houses, walls and fences. One wall had scarlet geraniums six feet high all the way around and fuchsia as tall as I am in full bloom; big trees of camellias in every shade and calla lilies as plenteous as our daisies."

In a letter of later date Mrs. Elkin continues the story of her trip. "No language that I have command of could give you an idea of the quaint charm and beauty of Madeira. The ox sleds over the cobble stones through the narrow streets with gorgeous colored flowers hanging in festoons from every rock wall, tree and door. The wonderful view from the mountain, down over house and tree tops, colored like a Persian carpet with the ocean out in front as far as the eye could see shimmering and glistening in the sunlike gold and silver makes an impression unforgettable.

"I spent one day in Gibralta yesterday sightseeing and shopping," she continued. "A big dance on board last night with all the officers from the six battleships in the harbor. All the girls put on their best and they did look pretty and had the time of their lives."

AN "Eat and Giggle party is the latest innovation in the manner of entertaining. Recalling the days of yesteryear when groups of neighborhood children in the fashionable Inman Park section, enjoyed an hour's play every evening underneath the brilliant rays of the corner electric light absolutely undisturbed by the present-day high-powered motor cars, prompted Mrs. Edwin Yancey to issue invitations to such an original and novel party.

Mrs. Yancey was born Miss Marion Perdue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Perdue, whose gray stone mansion was numbered among the handsomest in this former exclusive Atlanta suburb along with the Candler, Winship, King, Woodruff, Hightower, and many other fashionable homes.

Those remembering the bygone days call to mind little Miss Perdue's extreme fondness for chocolate bars, dill pickles, cheese and the numberless goodies dear to every child. Perhaps it was this disposition to be eternally munching goodies that made her playmates dub the tiny golden-haired child "Piggie." Retaining the belief that "old friends are best," and eliminating a game of bridge as an excuse for a party, Mrs. Yancey invited a number of her childhood playmates to join her for an afternoon of reminiscences while "we eat and giggle," as she so cleverly expressed it.

REFLECTING glory upon its competent instructor, Miss Nan Stephens, the playwriting class of Agnes Scott college has to its credit two productions that have entered the field of competition for the Belasco cup, the awarding of which is the most important event of the year in little theater guild work.

These plays will be produced in New York the first week in May, the scope of the contest including both English and American one-act plays. "The Hero," by Miss Frances Hargis, of Atlanta, now a student at Agnes Scott, was recently awarded the $100 prize offered by the Little Theater Guild of Savannah for the best one-act play on a southern theme. The guild has entered this play, the scene of which is a small town in Georgia, in the New York contest and its members will produce it at that time.

Miss Margaret Bland, a member of the Agnes Scott faculty, is the author of the other play, "Tink and Patches," entered in the Belasco cup competition. The Blackfriars, well-known dramatic club of Agnes Scott, will produce the play, which is a charming story of mountain life and folk, under the direction of Miss Frances K. Gooch, head of the spoken English department of the college.

Miss Bland, who is a native of Charlotte, N. C., is well acquainted with the theme and atmosphere of mountain life, which she portrays with much truth and realism. She was a member of the first class in playwriting organized, and taught by Miss Stephens, who ranks with the country's eminent playwrights and who gave the first impetus to the portrayal of southern themes in theatrical productions.

TUCKED away in the heart of Paris is a gray stone university somber and silent and still—the Sorbonne. On the sidewalks before its stately buildings students of France and those fortunate ones from other parts of the world, stroll, unmistakable evidence of purpose and high resolve, reflected in their walk and manner.

From the sophomore class of Smith college 40 young girls have been chosen to join this ambitious throng, selected for their ability, their integrity, their poise and innate feeling for the French language.

The forty were chosen from among 600 students. One of this forty, of whom Atlanta should be justly proud, is Miss Rachel Neely, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Neely, of this city.

This announcement is of interest to those who know this charming, intellectual Atlanta girl, and the part which she has played in the varied field of her activities here. And, it is interesting from the standpoint of the advancement of educational processes.

Miss Neely entered Smith college after four years of training at Girls' High school. Those who form the faculty of this institution should feel gratified with this evidence that they are preparing young women to cope in this first college of the nation with those of all sections and all walks of life.

These 40 girls will take this course of instruction in France during their junior year. It is the custom at Oxford university, England, to allow upper classmen free rein, with exceptions of course, to pursue their studies at Oxford, of if a fuller comprehension of the subject demands, in France or other parts of the continent. The question arises: What is the trend in modern American educational practices? Are they being planned along the lines of those venerable institutions which have enriched America and given England without question, her place in the sun?

The group of which Miss Neely will be a member, will be accompanied to France by a member of the French faculty of Smith college, who will conduct these students first to Grenoble university for intensive study of the language and later to the Sorbonne.

The banquet that was being planned for Miss Del Ray Adams, worthy grand matron of Georgia O. E. S., March 30, has been postponed until late spring. Ample notice will be given worthy matrons of all chapters.

S. A. E. Fraternity Celebrates Founders' Day Next Friday

The Founders' day banquet of the S. A. E. fraternity will be held at the Piedmont Driving club Friday evening, March 9, at 8 o'clock, attended by many socially prominent members of the S. A. E. Atlanta Alumni association and members of the S. A. E. chapters at Georgia School of Technology, University of Georgia and Emory university, commemorating the founding of the fraternity March 9, 1856, being the seventy-second anniversary of this fraternity, founded by Noble Leslie DeVotie, of Tuscaloosa, Ala.

The officers of the Atlanta Alumni association are: Baxter Maddox, president; Eugene O. Lee, Jr., vice president; Cobb Torrence, secretary and treasurer. The chaperons are as follows: Mesdames Robert F. Maddox, John D. Little, Charles F. Stone, John F. Glenn, William D. Thomson, Strother Fleming, John F. Denton, W. Troy Bivings, Lee Ashcraft, Robert Tye Jones, Jr., Robert P. Jones, Sherwood B. Blodgett, Claude McGinnis, Eugene Lee, William O. Chears, Walter S. Coleman, Henry Ewing Dean, Roy Dorsey, J. Edgar Hunnicutt, George R. McAliley, Wilmer L. Moore, E. F. Pomeroy, C. Fred Stone, R. J. Thieson, Samuel Y. Tupper, Clifford M. Walker, Frank O. Walsh. The dance committee consists of the following: Cobb Torrence, chairman; S. B. Blodgett, W. M. Montgomery, Eugene Lee, Baxter Maddox, E. F. Pierce, Claude McGinnis and Thomas Walsh.

A large delegation of active members with their guests will attend from the University of Georgia chapter at Athens, and members of the Atlanta Alumni association and wives and guests have already made reservations and the list includes many of Atlanta's socially prominent people.

Any member of the S. A. E. fraternity may make application for tickets and reservations by applying to the committee. An elaborate menu has been arranged and dinner will be served at 8 o'clock, after which election of officers for the ensuing year will take place. Mr. Maddox will call a short meeting of the Alumni association immediately following the banquet, and the remainder of the evening will be enjoyed in dancing, with music furnished by one of Atlanta's leading orchestras. The committee has arranged elaborate decorations for the tables and the banners, colors and flowers will be worked out in purple and gold, the fraternity colors.

Simplified Shopping

There's much talk for and against the hurry and skurry of present living. Good or bad, new or old, it is undoubtedly here. Circumstances must adapt themselves to the hastened tempo.

"We have so little time," say the housewives. And the business women echo, "We have so little time." Time of their own, they mean. Time that they used to spend in leisure, and in long-drawn-out shopping.

Women still shop, of course. But they do it quickly, efficiently.

For instance, they shop for frocks at Lewis' where the dress department is on a level with Whitehall street. It's a quick matter for a woman to run in, see the frocks that interest her, make her decision, and go—well within the prescribed time for parking or the brief lunch hour. No waiting for an elevator, no hunting for the department. The modern woman shops where she will probably find what she wants—in the minimum time.

And when she shops at Lewis' she shops in the largest first floor dress department in the city. A decided distinction, since Lewis' is not exclusively a dress shop, but carries the other wardrobe items—the hat, the coat, the accessories—also.

In brief, Lewis' offers simplified shopping as an an added inducement to trade where business is transacted between friends.

Un Mot Ici, Est Bien

By MRS. J. J. HARRIS, Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

This month has been selected for the advancement of historical work. The division president, Mrs. W. Trox Bankston, today issues a message of interest. She asks that the members of the Georgia division pay especial attention to the plans which will be made for the organization by our brilliant assistant historian, Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, of Madison. Mrs. Anderson will later in the month give some information quite worth while and we are deeply indebted to her for her research work which will be of great benefit to the division. Mrs. W. Trox Bankston, division president, recently has been the recipient of many invitations. On Monday last she was the guest of Miss Mary Booker, chairman of the star chapter requirements, and vice president of the Fort Tyler chapter, of West Point. This organization gave a brilliant reception for Mrs. Bankston Tuesday afternoon, to which the D. A. R., the Woman's club, the Ladies Memorial association and the Service Star Legion were invited. The division president made an inspirational address upon this occasion. On Wednesday a buffet luncheon was given for Mrs. Bankston by Mrs. C. E. Wright, guests of this function being the officers and chairmen of the West Point Woman's club. Mrs. Bankston has accepted an invitation to a luncheon given by the Agnes Lee chapter, Decatur, Friday, March 9. She will be the guest of Conyers chapter at a later date. So along with the strenuous duties of division president comes the pleasure of mingling with old friends, and the cementing of new friendships.

Mrs. Merchant, president general U. D. C., writes most enthusiastically of the essay contest. She is most interested in the campship for girls and boys being offered by the Georgia division. Her letter appears elsewhere.

Mrs. J. L. Beason sends a message of interest relative to the historical essay contest literature which is ready for distribution, some of which appears on the page today. The Dixie camp offers two campships for the boy and girl winning the first prizes. This generous offer is made by Mrs. A. A. Jameson, of Atlanta, owner of the Dixie camps. The value of both campships totals $450. Camp Dixie for boys is at Wiley, Ga., in the famous Tallulah river country. Camp Dixie for girls is at Clayton, Ga. The subject of the historical essay is Alexander Stephens. The second prizes are medals which will be presented by the Georgia division U. D. C. at the next state convention. The new chairman of the historical essay contest, Mrs. J. L. Beeson, Milledgeville, most painstakingly has prepared an authentic pamphlet. Her work has been carried on most efficiently and with great care. She is greatly to be commended for the brilliant effort put forth to sponsor this important department. She has talked to two schools relative to the contest and on Friday last delivered an address on Alexander Stephens before the Kiwanis club of Milledgeville.

With the breath of spring in the air, harbinger of the balmy season ahead, two brilliant bridge benefits were staged by the Atlanta chapter and the Rebecca Felton chapter February 29. It was most inspirational to attend two such interesting functions and the writer was highly gratified at being present. The Atlanta chapter carried out plans for an elaborate luncheon with Mrs. J. E. Cooper chairman of the arrangements and Mrs. James Stanley Moore chairman of prizes, which by the way were most beautiful and artistic, showing not only exquisite taste but great discernment in the selection. Mrs. Stafford Seidell, president, was most efficient in her official capacity, dispensing charming hospitality to her guests. After the luncheon the writer spent a most enjoyable afternoon as guest of the Rebecca Felton chapter, entertaining on the Ansley roof garden. This chapter, full of zeal and patriotic enterprise, is forging ahead at a great rate despite the fact that it was the "official baby" of the state convention October last in Covington. Its membership has increased apace and the state has every reason to be proud of this youthful organization in the division. The benefit bridge which was the first entertainment of the kind arranged by the Rebecca Felton chapter was delightful in every way. Mrs. Walter Lomax, the charming president, won all hearts by her ease and poise and the delightful cordiality she displayed. The prizes were exceptionally interesting and beautiful, intriguing even the most languid player to feel an added interest in the game. The writer was made most happy by a gift of American Beauty roses accompanied by a card with such kind expressions thereon that it will be ever kept among her treasures. Colonel Clarke, pension commissioner, accompanied by his wife, were honored guests of this most interesting occasion. Mrs. George W. Grubbs, acting as chairman, and Mrs. Lomax, president, and all who assisted in the arrangements for the afternoon cannot be praised too highly for the success and charm of the occasion.

In a few minutes time, your hair is soft, silky and radiant with life, gloss and lustre.

To have beautiful, fresh looking hair is simply a matter of proper shampooing.

While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why discriminating women, everywhere, now use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather which cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

It leaves the hair soft, silky and easy to manage and makes it fairly sparkle with new life, gloss and lustre.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store.

A four-ounce bottle lasts for months.—(adv.)

State President Issues Message To Members of Georgia Division

Fom reports that are coming in your president feels encouraged to hope that February was a success in our educational work. Now as March comes in let's continue our historical essay contest. The literature is all printed and ready to be sent out. And along this line we hope to stress all historical work. The assistant historian Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, Madison, has wonderful plans. Do what she asks you to do and help Georgia win some general prizes at Houston.

Then we must begin our fire-proof library-museum. Let us show Miss Nellie that we do appreciate the history she has compiled for us by beginning now to collect for this building. Mrs. Lamar Lipscomb, Tugalo, Ga., is chairman of this fund and she will tell you about her plans.

Your dues are now due. I have promised to cooperate with our president general, Mrs. Merchant, in getting each chapter to send in a typed list of all paid-up members on the special blanks provided. This is a law and we must obey or we will have no vote in convention. If you have not received your blanks write to the treasurer, Mrs. Julian C. Lane, Statesboro, for them. If you have already sent dues and did not have these blanks write Mrs. Lane for them and put your typed lists of members on them.

MRS. W. TROX BANKSTON,
Covington.
President Georgia Division, U. D. C.

Historical Essay Contest Rules Are Issued

The Georgia division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, with the desire of stimulating among the young people of the state an interest in the study of history, especially the history of the south, again offers prizes to the successful contestants among the school children of Georgia. The Selden banner will be awarded to the U. D. C. chapter showing the greatest increase in the number of essays written in the schools. All teachers in the state are requested to encourage and to urge their pupils to enter the contest.

Contest Rules.

The contest rules and regulations are as follows: 1. Subject: "Alexander Hamilton Stephens." 2. The contest is open to all white children of Georgia under the age of eighteen years. 3. The length of the essay shall be from one thousand to fifteen hundred words. It should be written neatly with pen and ink. 4. Preparation for the essay may be made at home or elsewhere. Any material bearing on the subject may be used. 5. The essay must be written in the presence of a teacher or some member of the local U. D. C. committee. 6. Each essay shall be signed with a fictitious name and shall be accompanied by a sealed envelope addressed with the same fictitious name. Within the sealed envelope must be the real name and address of the writer, together with the name of the school he or she attends. 7. Manuscripts are to be graded upon subject matter and style. 8. Each member of the state committee shall have charge of the work in all chapters in the district designated to her. Each member of this committee shall, in her district, see to the appointment of a local committee in each U. D. C. chapter. This local committee shall be known as the Historical Essay Contest Committee in its chapter. 9. The principal of each contesting school will please send to the local committee of his county, the best essay from his school, stating at the same time the number of essays which were written in his school on the subject assigned. 10. Each chapter committee, as an auxiliary to the state committee, shall stimulate an interest in the work in the county. This committee shall receive the essays sent in by the contesting schools, and select from them the best one to represent the county. This committee shall send this essay to the member of the state committee within whose jurisdiction the county falls, and shall state the entire number of essays which were written. 11. Each district chairman shall, with such assistants as she may appoint, select the two best essays submitted to her from the entire district. These two essays shall be sent to the state chairman, together with the number of essays written in the district. 12. The state chairman of the historical essay contest, shall send the entire number of essays sent to her, in quick rotation, to all the members of her committee. The grading of these essays shall be sent directly to the state chairman as soon as practicable after the reading. 13. Essays are to be sent to the local committee on or before April 1. The best essay from each county, and the number of essays, must be sent by the chapter committee to the chairman of the district to which they are assigned on or before April 5. The best two of the essays submitted to each district chairman must be sent to the state chairman on or before May 1.

The committee includes: Chairman, Mrs. J. L. Beeson, 202 Columbia street, Milledgeville, Ga.; Mrs. Edgar Alexander, 900 Penn avenue, Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. H. T. Harris, Washington, Ga.; Mrs. W. C. Wilson, 123 Seventh street, Augusta, Ga.; Mrs. Sidney DuBose Wright, Columbus, Ga., and Mrs. Thomas Coxon, Ludowici, Ga.

State Director Makes Appeal To State U. D. C.

Mrs. Charles Leonard Anderson, chairman and director for "Women of the South in War Times," issues an important message to members of Georgia division, U. D. C.:

"As chairman and director for Georgia for 'Women of the South in War Times' I hope every president in outlining the year's work for their chapter will not forget to include several of our U. D. C. book, 'Women of the South in War Times.' This book was compiled and published for our organization to show the bravery, fortitude and sacrifices suffered by the women of the south during the four years of the war between the states. These stories are of actual occurences and written by the participants themselves. Much interesting history is contained in these records. In here is also stressed the work of our organization during the Spanish-American and world wars. Our U. D. C. did perhaps the most remarkable work of any patriotic body in the world war. All figures in every line of work are recorded. To buy this book is one of the star chapter requirements."

Chapter Meetings

An important meting of the Covington chapter, U. D. C., was held at the library Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. W. T. Bankston, president, in the chair. Mrs. C. W. Dyal, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting, which were adopted and gratifying reports were made by Mrs. J. M. Edens, treasurer, and other officers and chairmen of committees.

Mrs. Earl M. Smith, corresponding secretary, read a letter from S. Charles Candler, general chairman, thanking the chapter for their generous donation to the Emory Junior college fund. She also read the standard of excellence to be a star chapter.

Mrs. W. T. Thomas reported a box of fruit sent to Dr. W. W. Evans, of Oxford, Confederate veteran, who continues quite ill. Mrs. R. M. Mobley, reported $25.37 made from sale of Georgia flags recently. A vote of thanks was given to Misses Caroline Lee, Georgia Watson, Rolline Taylor, Gene Pittman, Ruth Odum and Sara King, who sold the flags.

Mrs. A. A. Harrell, chairman of essay contest, reported material for essays on hand and the chapter gave an additional $5 to be used as prizes for the county schools. Chairmen of the various circles were apointed as finance committee for the year. On motion, the chapter resolved to be a star chapter again this year. The president is to appoint a committee to investigate the marking of Confederate graves in Newton county that are yet unmarked.

Mrs. H. O. Whelchel was extended an invitation to join the chapter. Mrs. C. A. Sockwell gave an interesting and comprehensive report on the state board meeting which was held recently in Atlanta. Mrs. C. C. King, Mrs. R. M. Mobley, Mrs. Luke Robinson and Mrs. C. D. Gibson were appointed a committee to investigate the cost of historical books for the library. The president announced the various committees for Memorial day.

After business was concluded the meeting was turned over to the entertainment committee, of which Mrs. Lester Lee was chairman and the following splendid program on "Georgia" was presented: "Important Facts Concerning Georgia," by Mrs. J. M. Edens; poem, "Georgia's Birthday," Mrs. Nelle Womack Hines, read by Mrs. R. M. Mobley; sketches of prominent Georgians, by Mrs. Count D. Gibson; "Red Old Hills of Georgia," by Mrs. C. A. Sockwell.

Charles Zachry Chapter.

The Charles T. Zachry chapter, of McDonough, met recently at the home of Mrs. J. M. Carmichael with Mrs. L. D. King as joint hostesses. The meeting was opened with the president, Mrs. E. J. Reagan, presiding. The historian, Mrs. Roy Turner, presented a most interesting program. Misses Trellis Carmichael and Annie Laura Smith sang and were accompanied on the piano by Miss Martha Leslie; little Carolin Carmichael favored the guests with several readings; "The Life, Character and Influence of Lee" was given by Mrs. J. M. Stroud; an original poem on Lee was given by Mrs. Adam Sloan; solo by Mrs. Frank Reagan, of Macon; sketch of Stonewall Jackson, by Mrs. Anna Upchurch; Mrs. Charlie Kimbell sang, "Stone Mountain Memorial;" reading, "Stone Mountain," by Mrs. Adam Sloan.

MARION COUNTY CHAPTER.

Marion county chapter U. D. C. met at the home of Mrs. Frank Lowe in February, with Mrs. Lowe, Miss Frances Hadley, Miss Minnie Lowe as joint hostesses, and the president, Miss Minnie Lowe, presiding.

The Christmas seals committee, of which Mrs. F. W. Lowe was chairman, reported $50.00 worth of seals sold to assist in combating tuberculosis, and it was decided to buy a cot for the emergency room at the Buena Vista High school. A cabinet filled with medicine for first aid was placed there in December by the chapter.

The year book committee with Mesdames F. W. Lowe, T. W. Hollis, T. N. Williams, Leroy Hurshburg and W. W. Green, have completed books and they were distributed at this meeting.

It was voted at this meeting to send a box to the Soldiers' Home, containing 50 bibs for the veterans who are able to go to the dining room.

A Georgia day program was rendered by Mesdames W. R. Zachay, J. L. Williams, Nellie Wommach Hiner chapter and W. B. Clements.

A committee was appointed to sell Georgia flags for the benefit of the Helen Plane Scholarship Loan fund.

U.D.C. Announces Rules Governing Essay Contest

Mrs. J. L. Beeson, chairman of the historical essay contest, Georgia division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, announces this week the rules governing the contest.

The subject of the essay is to be "Alexander Hamilton Stephens," and the contest is open to all white children of the state of Georgia under the age of 18 years. The essay is to be between 1,000 and 1,500 words long and is to be written in the presence of a school teacher or some member of the local U. D. C. committee, some time previous to April 1.

It is the desire of the U. D. C. to stimulate among the young people of the state an interest in the study of the history of our southland.

The winner of the girls' contest will receive as a prize a season at Camp Dixie for Girls and the winning boy will receive a season at Camp Dixie for Boys. These prizes are the gift of A. A. Jameson, owner of the Dixie camps, which are located in north Georgia.

This essay contest has been officially approved by the board of education of the Atlanta schools and every boy and girl is being urged to write an essay.

President General Commends Contest.

"Chatham, Va., Feb. 20, 1928.

"My dear Mrs. Bankston: Please accept my very great appreciation for the literature of the educational and historical departments, Georgia division, which you sent me. It is all wonderful, but I was particularly impressed with your essay contest, offering a boy and girl a season in camp.

"How far-reaching and effective may be the value of this prize.

"Some student, weary from the winter course of study, exactly in condition to be the prey of the many diseases lurking in wait for those whose vitality is low; will find here the life-giving, strength-establishing balance, fitting her and him for a life of usefulness. It is wonderful and I congratulate you most heartily."

"Sincerely,
"MAUD MERCHANT,
"President General, U. D. C."
Mrs. W. C. Merchant,
President General, U. D. C.

"Slide, Kelly, Slide," Is Feature Picture.

"Slide, Kelly, Slide," with William Haines in the title role, features the children's Saturday matinee at the Howard theater at 9:30 o'clock, with admission 10 and 25 cents. Sallie O'Neal, Karl Dane, of "Big Parade" fame; Harry Carey and other favorites are included in the cast. Pupils of the John Rogers Dancing school feature the prologue.

Presentation of prizes to the winning P.-T. A. in the recent attendance contest will be made. The children of the winning school will have an interesting part at the presentation. The matinee committee, Mrs. H. S. Parks, chairman; Mrs. Moreton Rolfestone, prologue chairman, and Mrs. J. G. Courtney, chaperon chairman, will be assisted by the Boy and Girl Scouts and members of the P.-T. A. division.

Historical Essay Contest Chairman Issues Message

Mrs. J. L. Beeson, of Milledgeville, chairman of the historical essay contest for Georgia division, U. D. C., issues the following message to members of Georgia division:

"Will you today read the two enclosed pamphlets and appoint your historical essay committee? Write today to your division chairman for the number of pamphlets you need. Interest your town and county in the historical essay contest. Ask Georgia teachers to tell Georgia children the story of Alexander H. Stephens. Tell the school children, through your newspapers, about the two wonderful campships which A. A. Jameson, of Atlanta, has offered—one for the boy and one for the girl who wins. Tell them of the medal which the Georgia division, U. D. C., has offered as a second prize. Let us have a great essay writing."

Power Company Circle To Sponsor Dance.

The Business Woman's circle of the Georgia Power Company Woman's club will sponsor a script dance Friday evening, March 9, in the Transportation building, 36 Piedmont avenue, S. E. Dancing from 8 to 11. Price $1. Mrs. J. E. Picklesimer in charge.

"Man's Divinity" Is Lecture Subject.

Continuing her free vital health and success lectures, Addelna Menzel will speak Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in assembly room No. 2, Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, using as her subject "Man's Divinity." A musical program will be given under the direction of J. Gordon Moore. Robert Bryan Harrison will preside.

Atlanta Music Club To Present Brilliant Pianists This Week

The Atlanta Music club, under the presidency of Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore, is presenting two programs of interest this week. Ossip Gabrilowitsch, world renowned pianist and conductor of the Detroit Symphony orchestra, gives a recital Saturday afternoon, March 10, at 3 o'clock at the Woman's club auditorium.

Hugh Hodgson, concert-pianist, teacher and composer, assisted by Mrs. Hodgson and several of his professional students, will appear on the "morning musicale" Wednesday, March 7, at 11 o'clock at the Woman's club auditorium. Taking part will be Miss Caroline Gray, Mr. Hodgson's assisting teacher at Lucy Cobb in Athens; Mrs. Harriet Hirsch, formerly of Minneapolis, but now making her home in Atlanta; Miss Irene Leftwich, prominent teacher in Decatur, and Miss Lucy McDermed, assistant in the Atlanta studio of Mr. Hodgson. The program is uniquely built of Bach works only, Mr. Hodgson giving an informal talk preceding each number. Mrs. Moore urges a prompt attendance for the special business session at 10:30 o'clock.

Mr. Gabrilowitsch's appearance is anticipated with cordial interest. Since his marriage in 1909 to Clara Clemens, the daughter of Mark Twain, he has identified himself more and more with the life of America. The final steps in his process of Americanization came in 1921 when he became a citizen of the United States, sealing the bonds of allegiance to the ideals and musical future of this country. His Atlanta program will include "Air and Variations," Handel; "Prelude A-minor" and "Rondo Espressivo," by Bach; "Allegro 12-minor," Haydn; "Sonata B-minor," Liszt; "The Fountain," Ravel, "Nocturne B-major" and "Valse A-flat major," by Chopin.

State Publicity Chairman Issues Important News

Mrs. Ira E. Farmer, state chairman of publicity, issues the following news letter: Presidents who have not secured the book list from Mrs. W. P. Martin, Gainesville, Ga., chairman children's reading, should do so at once and be ready to form summer reading circles. Those presidents who have not had a program on social hygiene will find much helpful information in the letter of Miss Olive Smallwood, New Holland, Ga., chairman social hygiene. Associations are warned by the state treasurer that March 15 is the dead line for states dues if they wish to be represented at the state convention. Address Mrs. H. G. Parks, 329 Sutherland terrace, N. E., Atlanta, Ga. Let local and council chairman observe this same date in sending reports to district chairmen if they wish this information incorporated in the state reports.

Gavels from the oak tree that stood in the yard of the former home of the late Mrs. Theodore Birney will be sold at the state convention by Mrs. Ed A. Pierce, state finance chairman, the proceeds to go into the state treasury. The Glade P.-T. A. has been presenting some interesting programs. A topic recently discussed was "A Mother's Leisure Time." The publicity chairman would like to know when that is."

Publicity Scrap Books.

"Rules for publicity scrap books are the same for local, district, council and state. Chairmen will please clip and preserve. 1, Bear in mind that this is to be a publicity book, and not an association scrap book, and that the material must be legitimate publicity. 2, Books should not exceed 12x16 inches, should be hung from the top and open upwards; 3, On the cover or on the first page, give the period covered by the publicity, as 'May 1927 to May 1928'; 4, Mark each clipping with name of paper in which it appeared and the date it appeared. If notation is made on the clipping, use pencil as ink blurs; if made on the leaf of the scrap book, use ink; 5, Make the book as attractive as possible and as artistic, keeping in mind that it is a publicity book, and that writing of articles with pencil or with ink is not publicity. Only such notations as are necessary to identify the article should be used, but mounting or outlining of articles, scrolls, or any arrangement which will call especial attention to an article, or which will add to the appearance of the book is entirely permissible; 6, Give some thought as to content, selecting the clippings carefully, using preferably those with new publicity ideas. The first consideration in rating the book will be quality and not quantity; 7, Arrange clippings in proper sequence, letting announcements be followed by write-ups, or following a project through; 8, Make use of pictures which have had publicity. Those give life to the book; 9, Arrange book in three divisions: (a) Publicity from the association; (b) Publicity concerning the association from other soures; (c) Membership publicity.

"The first division would contain only publicity sent out by the association; the second would contain publicity which had been given through some channel other than the association—for example a write up by the district or state press chairman, an article in some magazine concerning the work the association had done; and the third would be publicity which went only to the members of the association or to the school patrons. This is necessarily limited publicity. In this last group might be included samples of the artistic notices sent out to members, and samples of programs sent to members."

Peeples St. P.-T. A. Features Child Welfare Program

A very important part of the Peeples Street school P.-T. A. meeting held Tuesday afternoon at the school was the talk on "Child Welfare" given by Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, who is anxious and untiring in her efforts for the welfare of children. Beginning by paying tribute to Mrs. Phoebe Hearst and Mrs. Alice McBirney, Mrs. Richardson talked briefly on the events leading up to the modern child life, and urged, that first of all, to let the child come from the law-abiding home. Another feature enjoyed was the assembly singing of the P.-T. A. songs by over 200 members present. The membership chairman announced 200 members now enrolled; all other chairmen gave encouraging reports.

Miss Ruby Jones, principal, told of the two splendid classes for children with defective eyesight, a worthy accomplishment for Atlanta children which are conducted in the Calhoun Street school. She also made the announcement of the Junior Red Cross play to be given under the direction of Mrs. Louise Elsas, the proceeds to be used for scholarships to Tallulah Falls school. Attendance rewards went to Mrs. Standridge's class, and to Miss Grant's kindergarten class. Mrs. J. Q. Hooper, president, presided.

I. N. Ragsdale P.-T. A. To Honor Mayor of Atlanta

On March 8, Thursday, from 8 to 9:30 o'clock, the I. N. Ragsdale school P.-T. A. will give a reception in honor of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Ragsdale in the school auditorium. Mr. Ragsdale, Atlanta's distinguished mayor, holds a particular place in the hearts of the pupils of the school which is named for him. At the entertainment in his honor all past presidents and officers and former patrons, all graduates of Oakland City school, members of past and present general council and county commissioners are invited. An especial invitation is extended to all those who attended the Anna Dill institute, which formerly occupied the present site of the I. N. Ragsdale school. The reception will be informal and notable for the omission of long speeches. The banner, pennants, and caps given to I. N. Ragsdale school by Mayor Ragsdale, will be worn for the first time on this evening.

On March 5, 7 and 9 the I. N. Ragsdale school will have charge of radio programs for the Atlanta public schools.

On Monday, Miss Margaret Ashley, who is assisting Dr. Warren K. Moorehead, of Phillips academy, Andover, Mass., in his Indian mound excavations in the Etowah Valley, will tell the Atlanta children tales of the home life of the Georgia Indians. Miss Ashley is highly interested in Indians and delights to have children for an audience.

Just before Mrs. Ashley's talks high six will sing "By the Waters of Minnetonka" and at the close of her talks they will sing "Zuni Sunrise Melody," using the Indian words. Miss Ida Hurtel will direct the singing.

On Wednesday the Boys' High concert orchestra will give selections from the music memory list. G. N. Walter is the director of the orchestra.

On Friday, the program will be in charge of Miss Mary Buttrick, kindergarten assistant of I. N. Ragsdale school. Songs, stories and poems will comprise the first half of the program. The second half will be solos by Miss Buttrick, Mrs. Ralph Meeks and Miss Elizabeth Tillman.

Atlanta P.-T. A. Council Urges Payment of Dues to State

March 15, the dead line for paying dues to the state P.-T. A. was set Thursday as the final date for making reports to council chairmen by the Atlanta P.-T. A. council meeting in Rich's schoolroom. It was found that this is necessary in order for the state chairmen to receive the information in time to be incorporated in the state reports. No association will be issued credentials unless dues are paid to Mrs. H. G. Parks, 329 Sutherland terrace, N. E., state treasurer, by date named. Donations to the Alice Hilbun Endowment fund should be sent to Mrs. E. J. White, 572 Ashby, S. W. Mrs. T. R. Finley, 102 Atlanta avenue, S. E., recreation chairman, asks that any pictures of recreation groups be sent her with reports.

Mrs. Ira E. Farmer, care M. Rich & Bros. Co., chairman of publicity for council and for state, asked that duplicate copies of all publicity be sent her for the two publicity scrapbooks. This includes all folders, calendars, and other printing of the associations in addition to news clippings. Mrs. H. W. Lay, chairman of juvenile protection, distributed the findings of the grand jury regarding juvenile delinquency. Mrs. J. A. Beall, chairman motion pictures, announced the attendance prizes for the Saturday morning matinees of $20 and $10, to be awarded to the school which had been most largely represented during the winter.

Mrs. J. P. Wall, safety chairman, announced that the best work in safety could be done by organizing junior safety councils in each school, that habits of safety be formed. Mrs. Wall will visit any association and assist in forming the junior councils.

Mrs. J. Q. Hooper, 531 Holderness street, S. W., announced funds on hand for teaching adult illiterates and asked that names of such be furnished Mrs. Charles J. Foster.

Oral Hygiene Work.

The president called attention to oral-hygiene week, April 2, and health week, first week in May, and asked that Mrs. T. F. Abercrombie, chairman of health and hygiene, receive cooperation from every association. Mrs. J. P. Mims, chairman of citizenship, announced a splendid program on citizenship by the Capitol View association, where the members are almost 100 per cent registered. Mrs. Hubert Rawiszer reported 27 associations contributing to the child welfare birthday gift. A letter of appreciation was sent to the Georgia Power company for modification of the rules governing certificates for school children's car tickets. The president urged the use of the reference department of the Carnegie library by parents and children.

Luncheon Committee.

The committee appointed for the luncheon to be given by the Atlanta council for the executive board of the state P.-T. A. during the state convention is: Mrs. George W. Howsman, chairman; Mrs. G. D. McDonald, Mrs. R. F. McCormack, Mrs. Cliff Barnes, Mrs. E. W. Smith. All persons having rooms available during the state convention, April 10-14, are asked to notify Mrs. G. W. Howsman, Hemlock 1088.

Echoes from the Founders' day program, broadcast by the Atlanta council on February 17, were heard from Washington, D. C., Mrs. Jennie Holtzman Tolson, charter member, from Pennsylvania; Mrs. Reeves, national president, and from Marietta, Mrs. Birney's old home, where a party of 300 listened-in.

J. B. Barron, president of the Atlanta Teachers' association, announced a series of conferences, beginning the third Friday in April and continuing for three months, on "Know Your Own School System." He invited the council to send a representative to each meeting to participate in the discussion. Speaking on the finance sheet for the Atlanta schools, Mr. Barron stated that there was a gain of between three and four thousand children of school age in Atlanta this year.

Cascade P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The Cascade School P.-T. A. met at the club rooms, Cascade Heights February 21, with nine old and one new member, Mrs. J. C. Cuther, present. The fourth grade won the banner for having the greatest percentage of mothers present. A number of committees reports were received. Mrs. Frasch, the president, was appointed delegate to the state convention. Founder's day and George Washington's birthday were celebrated jointly. Refreshments served by the third grade mothers carried out the George Washington idea and a beautiful birthday cake in patriotic colors was donated by Mrs. H. Way and Mrs. J. F. Dunton. The next meeting will be held the third Tuesday in March at the club rooms.

Chattahoochee P.-T. A. Reports Meeting.

The Chattahoochee P.-T. A. had its birthday party Tuesday afternoon in the school auditorium after the business meeting and a founder's day program Mrs. Reynolds, the president, presented the association with an embossed cake with the symbolic candles burning. Special guests were Mrs. Gramling, past president of Bolton P.-T. A., and the county commissioner, Mrs. J. D. Mason, was hostess for the third grade.

Moreland P.-T.A. Features Home Making Program

The outstanding feature of the Moreland P.-T. A. meeting Tuesday afternoon was the inspiring address given by Mrs. F. A. Askew, of the faculty of North Avenue Presbyterian school. Fully two hundred members heard this message on "Making Home Memories." Mrs. Askew impressed the fact on her hearers that memories of childhood never die, and that it is our duty to make these home memories happy ones for our children.

The Girls' High Mandolin club, which is composed of twenty members, under the direction of Mrs. Reynolds Clark, with Miss Dozier Haynes as pianist gave several selections.

Miss Lillie Wurm, principal, presented the health program of the public schools. "We have three main objectives with the children," said Miss Wurm. First—One hundred per cent good teeth; second—To bring the children up to proper weight by urging plenty of rest and food and by taking part in the milk compaign now being conducted. By inducing the children to drink milk at school, much improvement in weight has already been noticed; third—Have all physical defects corrected and return the cards sent you by the schools with your physician's signature. Miss Wurm urged the hearty cooperation in these matters and announced that the first prize given for milk posters by the city of Atlanta was won by June Harvey, fourth grade pupil of Moreland school.

A communication from Professor Sutton was read by Miss Wurm urging all parents to stimulate an interest in a sight-saving class now being conducted for children with defective eyesight.

Mrs. R. P. Smith, president, announced that the March program will be in charge of the faculty. Miss Mary Postell will be the speaker and the kindergarten will give a demonstration in rhythm.

In observance of Founders' day, Mrs. D. W. Durden read a tribute to Mrs. Theodore McBurney and Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, founders of the national congress of parents and teachers.

Mrs. Durden announced a carnival to be sponsored by Moreland school April 13. She urged the assistance of every member to make it a success. Any one wishing to help will telephone Mrs. Durden. Moreland P.-T. A. has now a membership of almost eight hundred. Miss Belle Cockerell, sixth grade, and Miss Lucy Harris, first grade, were awarded the prize for the largest attendance of mothers.

The executive board of the Highland P.-T. A. meets Wednesday, March 7, at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. A. E. McCann, 1327 Fairview road, N. E.

Mrs. H. G. Parks, pre-school chairman of the Atlanta P.-T. A. council, will talk to the parents of the Pryor Street School P.-T. A. Tuesday, March 6, at 2:30 o'clock in the school auditorium. Camp Fire Girls will care for babies and small children of mothers attending the meeting. All patrons of the school are urged to attend.

Emory P.-T. A. meets Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the school building. A citizenship program has been arranged with interesting speakers.

Grove Park P.-T. A. Meet Featured By Unusual Program

The Grove Park P.-T. A. met Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the assembly room, Mrs. I. C. Dearlso presiding. A program was given by pupils of the fourth grade under the direction of Miss Edith Philips and Mrs. Freeman Groover. Miss Frances Speer had charge of the program. A piano solo was rendered by Miss Elizabeth Jones. A playlet, "A Test For Bravery," was presented by several members of the class. Splendid reports were made from the chairmen of all committees. Mrs. T. C. Chambers was elected thrift chairman at this meeting.

Mrs. George A. Mattox from the League of Woman Voters, gave an interesting and helpful talk on "Adult Education," stressing the ballot.

Mrs. R. B. Brown's room won the dollar and tickets to the Howard theater for having the highest percentage of mothers present.

Thirty-one mothers took part in a Founders' day quiz. Mrs. I. C. Dearlso contributed the beautiful birthday cake bearing thirty-one candles which was sold to the highest bidder. Mrs. W. O. Sanders was the most generous bidder. Mrs. P. H. Jeter, state president of P.-T. A., will be the main speaker at the March meeting. Mrs. J. E. Coursey and Mrs. W. T. Speer, class chairmen of fourth grade, served delightful refreshments at the close of the meeting.

Reports of Chapter Meetings Interest Readers of D.A.R. Page

Accounts of the meetings of various D. A. R. chapters throughout the state will be read with interest. The La Grange chapter met for its February gathering in the home of Mrs. D. M. Andrews, when the regent, Mrs. T. G. Pollàll presided. The program was in joint celebration of international day, Georgia day and Washington's birthday. Miss Julia Prentiss led discussion of current events, having for her subject, "International Relations." Mount Vernon was the subject of an interesting talk by Miss Roberta Black, and Mrs. Forrest Pruitt read a paper on the 195th anniversary of the founding of Georgia. Miss Ida Boll gave a sketch of Meadow Garden, home of George Walton, one of the Georgia signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Delegates were named to represent the chapter at the state conference, and continental congress meeting in Washington, D. C., in April. Those were Mrs. H. R. Black and Mrs. D. M. Andrews, respectively, with six alternates for each. A vote of thanks was extended Mrs. W. S. Davis for the gift of 137 dogwood trees, which have been planted along the Vernon highway, the chapter sponsoring the work. Trees will be planted by the chapter along the highway between LaGrange and West Point if present plans are realized.

During the social hour the hostess displayed an interesting collection of antiques of the revolutionary period.

Augusta Chapter.

The Augusta chapter, D. A. R., held open house on Washington's birthday at Meadow Garden, celebrating the 196th birthday of George Washington. Mrs. Sanford Gardner presided, assisted by members of the chapter. The quaint old home of George Walton was festive with open fireplace and vases filled with early spring blossoms from the garden. Appearing on the program were Miss Grey Storey and Miss Mary Shivers, soloists, accompanied by Mrs. Barton. Mrs. Alfred Lombard contributed a whistling number, being her own accompanist. Concluding the musical program, tea was served. Mrs. Nebit Wingfield presided at the tea service. Afterwards the guests were invited to the basement and enjoyed looking over the old kitchen, with its pots and pans, its huge old colonial fireplace with its swinging cranes. Spinning wheels, wool cards and other things in use in the days of Washington were of much interest to the large number of members and guests enjoying the entertainment.

Baron de Kalb.

The February meeting of the Baron de Kalb chapter, D. A. R., of Decatur, was held in the home of Mrs. Nellie Scott Candler in observance of Washington's birthday. Dr. J. R. Cain, president of Agnes Scott college, spoke on the high character and wonderful achievements of George Washington. A musical program of vocal and violin selections was given during the afternoon.

Washington's prayer was repeated by the regent, Mrs. John Montgomery, who presided at the meeting. Much constructive work has been accomplished by the Baron de Kalb chapter, which has subscribed for two square yards of the Wakefield estate, and has contributed to the fund for the Georgia bell at Valley Forge. In cooperation with the S. A. R. three citizenship medals will be presented to outstanding students of the Decatur Junior High school.

Three bronze tablets have been ordered and will be placed on granite boulders marking the old stage coach road from Augusta to Nashville;; one where the Hightower trail crosses the National highway, and another marking the Shallowford Indian trail. A substantial offering was made to the Kenmore fund also, this chapter being 100 per cent in every cause pertaining to D. A. R. work.

Three new members were welcomed into the chapter, including Mrs. R. P. Gillespie, Miss Louise McCrary and Miss Mary Ellen Bennett. The two latter, nieces of the state regent, Mrs. Herbert M. Franklin, will serve as pages at continental congress in Washington, D. C., in April.

Peter Coffee Chapter.

"Peter Coffee" chapter, D. A. R., of Abbeville, met at the home of Mrs. R. P. Brown. The regent, Mrs. Chauncey L. Foote, presided.

Delegates to the state conference were elected as follows: Delegate, Mrs. C. L. Foote; alternates, Mrs. W. L. Harrell, Miss Julia Louise Bass, Mrs. E. P. Dunaway.

The following candidates were unanimously indorsed for election at the state conference at Augusta: Mrs. H. Fay Gaffney, Mrs. John D. Pope, Mrs. Bun Wylie, Mrs. Mell Knox, Mrs. B. C. Ward, Mrs. C. H. Leavy, Mrs. Bertha Kellogg Tyler, Mrs. John W. Daniel, Mrs. Fannie Mae Dabney, Mrs. Alva Weaver, Jr. The chapter indorsed Mrs. Julius Talmadge for president general N. S. D. A. R.

George Washington's birthday was jointly observed with Georgia day and international day. Mrs. E. P. Dunaway gave a talk on "Mount Vernon," the home of George and Martha Washington, followed by short talks of impressions made on those who had visited the home. Mrs. Hal Lawson gave a talk on "Wakefield," the birth place and boyhood home of George Washington. Miss Addie Bass, regent of "Tomochichi chapter," gave an address on Georgia's revolutionary home, "Meadow Gerden," and America's first orphans' home, "Bethesda." Savannah, Ga., 1740-1927, and the life of Peter Tondee, one of the first "Bethesda" boys. Mrs. Charles Sheldon gave an address on the "American International College;" Mrs. R. P. Brown read "Georgia Day," written by Mrs. Herbert M. Franklin; Miss Julia Louise Bass gave a talk upon "The Girl Home Makers" and "Better Homes for America." Mrs. C. L. Foote read "Home Keeping Hearts," by Henry W. Longfellow.

Hostesses were Mrs. R. P. Brown and Mrs. C. L. Foote.

McIntosh Chapter.

The William McIntosh chapter, D. A. R., met with Mrs. C. W. Buchanan and Miss Bessie Waldrop. The regent, Mrs. A. T. Buttrill, presided. Alternates to the state convention in Augusta in March were elected as follows: Miss Corneil Varner, Mrs. J. B. Settle, Mrs. J. B. Harrison, Mrs. W. F. Malaier, Mrs. J. M. Leach and Mrs. J. D. Jones.

The flag lesson for the month was read by Miss Mary Downs. Flag codes were distributed for the benefit of the school children. The budget as made out by the executive board was adopted by the chapter, with all honor roll requirements met. Mrs. J. D. Jones was program chairman for the afternoon and gave an interesting account of President Washington's visit to Savannah in 1791. Miss Corneil Varner told of her visit last summer to Mount Vernon and Mrs. W. F. Malaier read "Outstanding February Dates in American History."

Knox Conway Chapter.

The Knox Conway chapter, D. A. R., of Ashburn, was entertained at the home of Mrs. Luther W. Green, in Sycamore, 14 members being present. Mrs. John A. Ewing, regent, presided.

An interesting feature of the work of the Knox Conway chapter, is sponsoring patriotic singing contests, both in the public schools and in the negro schools. A Bible has been affered as a prize in the negro school for the pupil memorizing the greatest number of Bible verses by the closing of school. The review and criticism of the book on the life of John Rogers Clarke was interestingly reported by the regent, as well as three new articles covering the proposed history of Turner county, which the chapter is compiling. The D. A. R. national magazine has been placed in the school library for use in the history classes. The magazine subscription has been renewed for 1928 by the chapter. An interesting article on Mount Vernon was read by Mrs. Kate Betts, in observance of Washington's birthday.

Funds Are Requested For Georgia Flag.

Mrs. J. Tom Wood, state chairman of conference subscriptions for the Georgia flag at Valley Forge, has requested the editor to make a last appeal through this column, for additional subscriptions to the fund for purchasing a Georgia flag to be placed in Memorial church at Valley Forge. Mrs. Wood states that many chapters are yet to be heard from and greatly desires that those which have not contributed to the fund do so at once, that the required amount, $185, may be in hand when the state conference convenes, March 27. Some chapter or individual may wish to give an additional sum to this worthy cause, and these Mrs. Wood will be glad to hear from. The Georgia flag to be presented by the Georgia D. A. R. to Valley Forge church, Mrs. Wood states, is to be a very handsome silk, hand-embroidered one, and she is anxious to secure the full amount required for its purchase, that the work may be reported as completed at state conference. Mrs. Wood's address is 1105 East Thirty-eighth street, Savannah, Ga.

Mrs. Franklin Named On Highway Committee.

It will be of much interest to Georgia D. A. R. to know that the state regent, Mrs. Herbert M. Franklin, has been appointed by J. A. Rountree, of Birmingham, Ala., director general of the United States Good Roads association, to act on the national highway beautifying committee. This committee has for its object the beautification of the highways in this state and throughout the United States. The Georgia unit will organize the various cities and counties in this state for the work of beautifying the main highways and Mrs. Franklin states she has accepted the appointment, and will make a special effort to enlist the Georgia D. A. R. particularly, in the work, as well as other women's organizations.

New Chapter At Barnesville.

Mrs. Durwood C. Collier has been appointed by the state regent, Mrs. Herbert M. Franklin, as organizing regent of a new chapter to be formed in Barnesville, an interesting preliminary meeting having already been held in that city. Mrs. Alvah Weaver and Mrs. D. B. Black, prominent members of the Thomaston chapter, were special guests at the meeting, and are assisting in the organization of the chapter at Barnesville.

Already the required number necessary to organize have applied for membership, and several local members of the state at large will join the new chapter. Besides Mrs. Black and Mrs. Weaver, those present were Mrs. M. W. Smith, Mrs. C. H. Willis, Mrs. J. W. Reeves, Mrs. Charlotte M. Ashley, Mrs. J. M. Rogers, Mrs. J. C. Collier and Miss Lily Mitchell. Barnesville is the girlhood home of the state regent and those interested will organize this new chapter under her administration.

Spring Term Opens Monday.

The spring term of the Atlanta School of Oratory and Expression, 402 Wesley Memorial Church building, opens Monday, March 5, both day and evening sessions.

President General Sounds Timely D.A.R. Suggestion

Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, president general of the national society D. A. R., contributes today a timely message to Georgia D. A. R., with a number of important suggestions relative to clearing up all work before continental congress in Washington, D. C., in April. Mrs. Brosseau says:

"In the affairs of our national society, March is a harvest month. It signifies the gathering in of reports, of all outstanding money, and the completion of unfinished bits of work, to the end that April may find us able to say to ourselves and to our co-workers, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

"If you are a chapter regent, will you not see to it that by March 5 at the latest, all reports of chapter work accomplished are in the hands of the various state chairmen and that contributions to national causes have been transmitted to the state treasurer? Undoubtedly the state chairmen and the state treasurers will stipulate an even earlier time for the collection of data and funds in their direct communications to you, but I am asking now that you establish March 5 as the final 'clearing up' date in your chapter.

"On the part of state regents I urge the same vigilant attention in regard to state matters. The books of the treasurer general close March 31 and funds received after that date cannot be included in the report of the current year's work. Practically the same rule applies to the national chairmen.

"The national officers and chairmen take great pride in making 100 per cent reports to continental congress, and it is needless to say that you, on your part, experience a tremendous satisfaction when you hear your state honorably mentioned. By the exercise of personal attention and united effort we can have this thirty-seventh continental congress one of record-breaking reports, showing unprecedented achievements, and I am relying upon each and every officer and chairman to do her glorious bit. To show a balanced sheet on the ledger of your chapter or state may mean extra work for tired hands, but the satisfaction and the pride of achievement will be quite sufficient reward for any pains of endeavor. After all, the cheerful acceptance of responsibility is the keynote quality of leadership."

Congress Delegates Given Information.

As the date for the thirty-seventh annual congress, in Washington, D. C., draws near delegates expecting to attend will be interested to know that headquarters for the Georgia delegation will be established at the New Willard hotel. Date of continental congress is April 16 to 22 and Tuesday evening, April 17, at 6:30 o'clock, the Georgia delegation will entertain with an elaborate banquet at the New Willard. Reservations for this annual event may be made with Mrs. H. Fay Gaffney, Columbus, Ga., and the cover charge will be $4. Mrs. Gaffney states reservations should be made with her as soon as possible.

Delegates and alternates are advised to have their identification cards, duly signed by the chapter regent and chapter secretary, as this important matter is often overlooked by those attending congress. Delegates may register at the Washington auditorium Friday or Saturday, preceding congress, as the sessions will be held there instead of at Memorial Continental hall, where the seating capacity is inadequate. The state regent, Mrs. Herbert M. Franklin, will be glad to assist delegates in registering, if they will send a card to her at the auditorium, where she will be in attendance at the board meeting, April 14. Mrs. Franklin has appointed a group of lovely girls who will act as pages at Continental congress, Georgia being allowed six. Every section of the state will be represented and the number includes Miss Louisa McCurry and Miss Mary Ellon Bennett, of Decatur; Miss Jessie Collier, of Barnesville; Miss Ida Shelnut, of Sandersville, and Miss Catherine Rourke and Miss Caroline Lovell, of Savannah.

Social Program Of State Convention Is Announced

The state convention of the Georgia Daughters of the American Revolution, meeting in Augusta March 27, 28 and 29, will assemble a large number of prominent women from all parts of the state, and several distinguished guests from other states. Among this number will be the president general of the national society, Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, whose address will be a feature of the opening night.

The sessions of the conference will be held at the Junior College auditorium, and many brilliant social features are being planned for the meeting. There will be a reception at Meadow Garden, following which the guests will attend in a body the unveiling of the tablet that marks the Nancy Hart highway, the first highway in Georgia to be named for a woman. Honorable John N. Holder will make the principal address on this occasion.

Delightful luncheons each day of the conference, given by local women's organizations, and a barbecue on the opening day, given by the hostess chapter, are other entertainment features. After the evning business sessions, an informal program of music and some special features will be given on the stage of the college, Mrs. M. M. Macferrin having charge of the music of the conference. The entire conference program will be published at an early date.

Petrel Follies' Cast To Be Honored.

Mrs. Charles A. Conklin will entertain at a reception Wednesday afternoon, March 14, at her home on Peachtree street in honor of the Petrel Follies cast, the affair to follow a meeting of the Oglethorpe university board which meets promptly at 3 o'clock.

Alpha Delta Pi Alumni To Meet.

The Atlanta Alumnae club of Alpha Delta Pi meets Tuesday at 1 o'clock in the Atlanta Athletic club for the annual election of officers. This is the regular monthly luncheon date and has been designated election day for the convenience of Alpha Deltas who might not be able to attend a special meeting. Besides the election other business matters will be discussed, particularly a continuance of the popular social events. Reservation: should be immediately made with Mrs. McDonald Brittain, Hemlock 2651.

Recording Secretary Makes Request.

State Officers, State Chairmen, Chapter Regents—Please send to me at once your annual reports for compilation in the proceedings, not later than March 20, that there may be no delay after conference, in Augusta, March 27, 28 and 29. Chapter regents are to send their detailed reports and not the questionnaire blanks. All reports must be typewritten, on one side of the paper only. March 20 is the "zero hour" for reports, so please let me have these immediately.

MRS. BUN WYLIE,
State Recording Secretary,

Ponce de Leon P.-T. A. Sponsors Story Hour.

The library committee of the Ponce de Leon P.-T. A., of which Mrs. J. W. Stipe is chairman, is sponsoring the story telling hour at the Decatur library every Monday morning, during the month of March.

A number of members of the association will be on hand at 10 o'clock each Monday morning to tell stories to the children, who are urged to take advantage of it, and also to read the many good books at the library, suitable for children.

LAWN GRASS SEED

The extreme cold weather the past few weeks has played havoc with the lawns, but you can still have a beautiful lawn for this Spring and Summer, if you plant Letton's Druid Hills Lawn Mixture now.

We strongly advise planting as soon as possible so the seed will get well rooted before the hot Summer comes. Certainly there is no better lawn mixture than ours.

As a fertilizer for the lawn, we advise using either Bone Meal, Sheep Manure or Vigoro.

Time now to get busy with the garden, we have good fresh stocks of both Garden and Flower Seed.

Mrs. David Woodward Issues Message to State Clubwomen

Mrs. David Woodward, chairman of student aid foundation, issues her first official message to the club page in The Constitution in which she says:

"Dear Friends: It is a pleasure to send to the clubwomen of our state, through the medium of the club page, my first message as chairman of Students' Aid Foundation. For so many years our beloved Mrs. H. B. Wey has been the guiding spirit of the organization and we are fortunate in having her retain the position of honorary chairman, continuing to give to us the benefit of her counsel and experience. In assuming the responsibility of the work, I earnestly ask the cooperation of the clubs, and invite the district presidents especially to take a vital interest in placing the Student Aid before their respective bodies. A brief history of the organization and how it operates, may make its own appeal. In July, 1908, there was conceived in the heart and brain of one of our prominent clubwomen, Mrs. Emily Hendree Park, the idea and plan of the Student Aid Foundation and in the home of another prominent clubwoman, Mrs. Frank Woodruff, the first meeting was held.

Recent Donation.

"The recent donation of Mrs. Alonzo Richardson of $100 in memory of her husband, has touched us deeply, recalling those early days of our organization when he was a trustee and also treasurer. Though a very busy man he would always take time for our affairs, consider our problems, and give us his wise counsel. It was service for which we could never pay but shall never cease to be grateful.

"The two outstanding institutions of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, the Student Aid Foundation and the Tallulah Falls school, are today not only the pride of every Georgia woman, but in our national federation, Georgia has a special claim to distinction, because of these splendid organizations. The purpose of the Student Aid Foundation is to give to girls striving for an education loans which enable them to go to the college of their choice and the loan is paid back out of their first earnings. The Student Aid justifies its existence in the record it has made. It operates to stimulate the girl to her best endeavors in her school work and in promptly returning the loan, so as to pass on to some other deserving girl the benefits she has had. Failure in payment rarely occurs. The management of the foundation has been entrusted to an incorporated board of trustees composed of responsible business men. The Student Aid committee appointed by the president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, investigates applications, recommends loans, collects outstanding indebtedness and keeps in touch with those to whom loans have been made.

Student Loan Books.

The books show since 1908 some $56,288.25 has been loaned to 384 girls. Each year between $6,000 and $10,000 is loaned. Last year 33 new loans were granted, 42 girls were in school, fifteen of these received diplomas and begin payment of loans this fall. A large number of applications could not be granted for lack of funds. The schools attended last year were Twelfth District A. & M., Valdosta Normal, Athen State Normal, State College of Agriculture, Y. W. C. A., New York; Columbia university, N. Y.; Teachers college, N. Y.; Anderson college, S. C.; Berry school, Wesleyan, LaGrange college, Agnes Scott college, University of Georgia, Georgia State College for Women, Emory university, Fifth District A. & M. school, Carnegie Library school and Bessie Tift college.

"The towns represented were 36 in number and were from every part of the state. No one section or district receives more benefit than another. From the extreme northern part in the mountains to the smallest village in the southern part of Georgia and the hamlets of middle Georgia, all are equally granted the benefits of help from the Student Aid Foundation. The home economics scholarship fund becomes more and more interesting as the different districts add their quotas to the list. Another time we hope to give you the whole history but this time we can only mention that three girls are now using it and that two who have used it, have graduated and paid back their loans. The third district has completed the first quota, $250, and named it the Louise Hayes scholarship. The seventh district plans to complete theirs in honor of our beloved Mrs. Wey.

Letters Too Personal.

"I regret the letters we receive are too personal to give the contents of some of them through the press, but if your hearts ever need the glow of a fervor that only comes to those who give the 'helping hand,' we invite you to attend a meeting of our committee and hear some of the expressions of gratitude from these wonderful aspiring girls. Where does the money come from for the Student Aid? There are on our books the names of a few generous friends who annually make gifts from $100 to $500, then we must rely largely upon the support of the district presidents and their individual clubs. In making out the budget for the year, dear district presidents, let me urge upon you the position you hold as godmothers of these girls who are willing to work and sacrifice to gain an education. Thanking you for your support in the past and asking for your larger sympathy and interest."

Mrs. Brenner Tells Of Home Economics Work Done in 1912

When Mrs. A. H. Brenner, of Augusta, first vice president of Georgia Federation, spoke in Athens recently before the Farmers' conference she was guest at a luncheon put on by the junior class in home economics of the State Agricultural college, at which Mrs. Charles M. Snelling, club institute chairman, and Mrs. S. V. Sanford, second vice president, were among the distinguished guests.

In the course of the luncheon Mrs. Brenner told of one of the first luncheons ever put on by a home economics department of any Georgia school, given in Augusta in 1912, when the late Mrs. Harry White, of Athens, visited Augusta. In order to show the quality of work done by the home economics department in the John Millege school, one of the pioneer departments of home economics in the state, this luncheon was served by Miss Mathilda Calloway, who was in charge of the department of this particular school. One of the unique table decorations was a map of Georgia done in cottage cheese, with the location indicated in green, on the cream map of each town represented by a guest at the luncheon. Augusta was one of the frist places in Georgia to inaugurate a department of home economics and Miss Calloway was one of the most successful teachers. Long after the interest in vocational training spread through the state and realization of the importance of this specialized training for young women resulted in the splendid schools now functioning in Athens. Augusta was accredited as being about ten years ahead in starting this work.

Mrs. Sheats Entertains Kingston Histor yClub.

Mrs. Irby Sheats was hostess to the Kingston History club Thursday afternoon and to Mrs. Herbert Hague, of Marietta, president of the seventh district, and Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, president of the Cobb County Federation and district chairman of conservation. Mrs. Claude Irby, president of the club, presided, and Mrs. Gordon Rogers, secretary, called the roll, members responding with names of Georgia governors. The library was opened Saturday afternoon and Mrs. Hague announced that the district executive board would meet in the Kingston library Tuesday, March 13, with a script luncheon served to officers and delegates, appointining the following committees: House and decoration, Mrs. Rogers, Miss Hargis, Miss Bell Bayless; table and service, Mrs. Calhoun Rollins, Mrs. Tucker, Mrs. Gallagher, Mrs. Moore; luncheon, Mrs. C. E. Johnson, Mrs. Ellis, Mrs. Pratt, Mrs. Hargis; train, Mrs. Isaac Rollins, Mrs. McKelvey.

Mrs. Claude Irby has been appointed parliamentarian; Mrs. McKelvey, chairman of thrift, and Miss Bayless, press chairman. Mrs. Irby Henderson resigned as a member because of moving to Rome, as did Mrs. James Jolly, whose home is too far away to permit her regular attendance. The name of Mrs. Amos Cash was presented by the membership committee to be voted on at the March meeting.

Mrs. Hague gave a talk on the "Business of Being a Clubwoman." Among the items stressed were promptness, be on time and enjoy the meeting; boost the club, and never knock. A good clubwoman will have the interest of home, town, state, country at heart. She will respect her flag and all it stands for, and have love and charity for all mankind. Once a year at least the constitution and by-laws of the club should be read, and new members should familiarize themselves with this document, which like the constitution of the United States, is the foundation of government. Clubwomen should be conscientious about accepting office, not doing so unless with the intention of serving in that capacity. Committee members should work, not promise to do so and then leave it all for the president. Parliamentary law should be observed so that personal feelings be not brought into play. A club officer should always be impersonal. What takes place in an executive board meeting should be inviolate.

Mrs. Sheats, in presenting Mrs. Bailey, past president of the Carrie Dyer Reading club, said she felt partly responsible for that organization since Mrs. Dyer, when both were brides, visited her and said she missed her old club, the Lesche, since moving to Acworth. Mrs. Sheats suggested that she organize a club there, which was done with a nucleus of eight women. Mrs. Bailey gave an outline of the aims of her department, that of forestry and conservation, and did it in a way to rouse enthusiasm, until at the close a resolution was passed urging the state school book board to incorporate in the readers of every grade a program built around that topic, until from the primer up every child would know the value of our natural resources. Mrs. Bailey complimented Kingston school because it has made such signal improvement within the past year, with two clubwomen on the board of education. Mrs. C. E. Pratt read an informative article on "Georgia's Lost Towns."

Assisted by Mesdames Rogers and Tucker, Mrs. Sheats served refreshments. Prior to the meeting Mrs. Irby entertained at luncheon in honor of the visitors. Covers were laid for Mrs. Hague, Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. Sheats, Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. Branson, Miss Hargis and Miss Bayless.

Mrs. Brenner Speaks In South Carolina.

The tenth district of Georgia Federation, Mrs. J. W. Hooks, of Gordon, president, issues the following article to the official club page:

"Possibly no club woman in the Georgia Federation enjoys a closer association with clubs in an adjoining state than does Mrs. A. H. Brenner with the clubs of South Carolina in the vicinity of Augusta. For many years Mrs. Brenner has been an honorary member of the club at Beech Island, and can look back with pardonable pride on the many occasions she has been called on to present various phases of work to the clubs of Aiken, and to speak at county and district meetings.

"She addressed the new Century club of Johnston, S. C., in February. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. James White, with Mrs. A. J. Lewis as joint hostess. Being an old study club, department work was under consideration, though the club is now doing splendid work along several lines. Delegations were present from the Woman's club of Columbia, S. C., and the Woman's club of Batesburg, S. C. The Augusta delegation accompanying Mrs. Brenner was composed of Mrs. H. P. Burum, president of the city federation; Mrs. W. M. Howard, president-elect of the Philomathic club, and Mrs. P. F. McNally."

Elberton Civic League Indorses Clubwomen.

The Civic League of Elberton takes pleasure in indorsing Mrs. A. P. Brantley, of Blackshear, for state director of general federation and Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens, for state president of Woman's Federated Clubs. Mrs. Brantley has given much of her time and talent to Georgia and Georgia women. Her club work has ever been characterized by depth of thought and purpose; though quiet withal her efforts have been justly blest with success. Mrs. Sanford is also well known and loved by the Georgia women, and her work of the past is proof in itself that she is the person for the state president of Women's Federated Clubs.

Mrs. R. G. Braselton Issues Public Welfare Plan for 9th District

Mrs. R. G. Braselton, of Braselton, ninth district chairman of public welfare issues a plan for a health campaign through her district. She says:

"Health being the first division and one of great importance because of the many vistas open to improvement, gives this division an unlimited source of work for those wishing to raise the health standard in our communities. It is well in carrying out plans for this work to be closely affiliated with out state organizations in order to derive benefit from their wide experience and investigations into these problems. Mrs. Hudson, the state chairman of public welfare, proposes to make a statewide May day health survey, by having the largest club in each county make a study of health conditions in their respective counties, reporting their findings by March 1, so that judges may report by May day. This May day health campaign, originated by the national health organization, of which Mr. Hoover is president, has planned an all-year round health program, ending in a May day health celebration. This work has been started by issuing material covering the subject in every district in the state.

"In order to bring our district up to the highest health standard and spare our children the great suffering caused from contagious diseases, we recommend the adoption of the Ellis health law in every county. There is now only one county in the ninth district which has this law enforced. Dr. Winchester, director of county health work, state board of health, offers his assistance and material on this law in putting it before the grand jury in your county. He will send you a leaflet on the Ellis health law, explaining the process by which it is adopted. If the counties feel their inability to have this law enforced, it would be well to enlist the help of a neighboring county in forming a health unit, thereby deriving full benefit from this wonderful work, but cutting the expenses in half. Do, by all means, ask for this booklet before having your health program, for it will be invaluable as a reference.

Child Welfare.

"It has been said 'When we start looking forward with a child, instead of backward with the adult criminal, society will have made great strides in the prevention of crime.' Increasingly the thought of prevention is taking hold of the public mind, preventing crime by throwing around the child his right—a wholesome environment in which to develop. We propose to carry on a concerted educational campaign for the understanding and support of the children's bills to come before our next legislature. The fact that we have two years in which to become thoroughly conversant with these laws, i. e., juvenile court law, mother's aid, desertion and non-support and illegitimacy laws which failed of passage in this last legislature, means that we have not time to lose in starting our educational program. We hope to have in the hands of every club president before long, a short and clear synopsis of these laws. A letter will go with this literature urging each president to give at least one of her programs during the year to a discussion of the laws. Ask the state department of public welfare for their January issue 'Public Welfare,' also procure list of above laws and make study of same.

"Over five hundred children were immunized against diphtheria in the ninth district last year by giving the toxin-anti-toxin. Let us keep this work going forward—making as our aim a district free of this disease.

"The state chairman requests that jail visiting committees be appointed at all county seats. This is a great and good movement that the public welfare department in Atlanta has carried out through Mr. Fuller, and the literature and information regarding jail requirements and splendid work of this branch of the welfare department will be sent out on request to all club committees formed this year. We shall also request local jail visiting committees to include the city stockade in their visits. These city institutions are not under the charge of our state department of public welfare, but the club women can do a wonderful amount of good by visiting them with an informed mind, and reporting back to their clubs as to conditions. Our program must include regular visits to local institutions, such as orphanages and old peoples' homes, (if managed by the city or county), and the almshouses. Perhaps more important than any of these are the boarding and detention homes of the juvenile court. There is a great need of women's interest and help in this, a pioneer movement in Georgia. The probation system, after seven years' educational work on the part of the state welfare department, has only been established in thirteen counties, less than ten per cent of Georgia's counties. This is women's work, 'the saving of children's souls.' Tragedies happen every week in Georgia, we read about them in the papers, that could have been prevented by intelligent probation. Men will never see the need of probation for children as more important than 'good roads' for instance, and it is only through women's understanding and support that our county commissioners may be persuaded to appropriate funds for a probation system.

"Regarding the sub-committee on state sanitarium at Milledgeville, and Gracewood hospital, (school for feeble minded children), chairmen for these two important committees have been appointed in the ninth district. One hundred names of the inmates of the sanitarium at Milledgeville were distributed over the ninth district before Christmas, asking for gifts. Each club responded with a nice Christmas box, feeling it was a privilege to bring cheer to these poor unfortunates. The sending of articles requested by the patient is so much better than a hit or miss plan, and Mrs. Keefer, of Manchester, has information as to the gifts needed ready for new chairmen. Let us stand ready to help these worthy organizations all through the year.

"Division of anti-narcotics. We will distribute informing literature on the anti-narcotic movement and endeavor to mould public opinion to lead to proper legislation. Quoting Mrs. Hudson we find the following true statement: 'This is a full and far-reaching program, and one that will take perseverance to carry out, but the organization of the welfare department of the state federation is a large one with the foregoing list of three divisions, three subcommittees, as well as twelve district chairmen, and fifty-three district chairmen of the seven divisions and subcommittees. With an army of about seventy interested women to spread the news of 'What Georgia needs, and how to get it,' we should be of use to our communities and to our state.' It is a great pleasure to offer these few suggestions and it is sincerely hoped that they may be the basis from which you may derive some working ideas. Public welfare touches every walk of life and offers an unlimited chance for betterment of humanity."

Mrs. Hastings Issues Letter to Chairmen.

The following letter has been sent to district chairmen of the division of child welfare by Mrs. H. G. Hastings, of Atlanta, state chairman, requesting prompt attention that the federation may learn of the work and so that Georgia will get due credit in general federation:

My Dear Chairman—The report of the state chairman to her organization may be somewhat of a dull thing or it may be a fascinating story of undertakings and accomplishments, which, when passed on, inspires others to go and do likewise. In order that this report of the division of child welfare to the coming state convention may be an interesting one, will you not begin soon to get together stories of the very live and worthwhile work, which I know has been done in your district and get your report to me not later than April 1? Will you secure specific statements from every club in your district doing welfare work on the following items:

Has your club actively furthered programs for the hygiene of maternity and infancy? How have you cooperated with the division of child hygiene? Has your club been active in birth registration campaigns?

To what extent has your club cooperated in county-wide our statewide projects? To what extent has your club familiarized itself with the work of state or county public agencies working for the welfare of children—supporting and promoting the work of these agencies when possible? Has your club carried on any definite piece of work for the betterment of the conditions surrounding children? Has your club particeipated in any work for cripple children? Has your club made any study of the causes of and methods of preventing juvenile delinquency in your community? Has your club done any work for dependent children? Has your club done anything toward elevating standards of institutions for children? How many child welfare programs has your club had this year? Have you had any study circles on child welfare? When you have completed the survey of your district, will you not summarize it in a somewhat brief form, particularly stressing those projects which have laid the foundation for permanent and constructive child welfare programs?

Ella F. White Endownment Fund Chairman Makes Plea

Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, state chairman of Ella F. White endowment fund for Georgia Federation, is making a strong appeal to clubwomen, stressing the importance of meeting the obligation before the May convention. Photograph by Harris and Ewing, of Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick is making a strong effort as chairman of the Ella F. White Endowment fund for Georgia federation to impress upon clubwomen the importance of meeting the obligation of paying up the endowment fund before the May convention to be held in Decatur. She recently received a copy of the letter from Mrs. Joseph M. Toomey, of Washington, Ga., eighth district chairman for the fund, to presidents of delinquent clubs in her district, which reads:

Dear Madam President: Some years ago a fund was started by the State Federation of Women's Clubs. Each club within the state was pledged to contribute 75 cents per member, which may be paid in three installments of 25 cents per year. This fund is to be an endowment fund, the interest derived therefrom to be used to help defray expenses in carrying forward the activities of the Georgia Federated clubs.

Our own eighth district was signally honored in having this fund named in memory of one of its beloved women, Mrs. Ella F. White, of Athens, who at one time was state president of the federated clubs, and who died while attending a state meeting in Augusta.

As soon as a club redeems its pledge the name of the club is placed on the honor roll and I am writing to know if you will not take this matter up with your club immediately and, if possible, send a check to cover your full assessment of 75 cents per member. This will place your club on the honor roll and will also help to make the eighth the honor district.

We owe it to the memory of the noble daughter of the eighth district, for whom the fund was named, to fulfill our pledge and thus enable the state federation to carry forward the work to which Mrs. White gave so freely of her time and talents.

As the time of the annual convention draws near, when we must all give an account of stewardship, I am most anxious to hear from every club in the district. Will you not write me at once telling me that your club will redeem its pledge in full within the next month? Think how proud we all would be to have our dear old eighth district placed at the top of the list of those contributing to he Ella F. White, Endowment fund.

With best wishes for your club and hoping for your cooperation in putting our district over the top before the May convention."

Mrs. Johns' Death Deplored by Women

Club members will learn with regret of the death of Mrs. G. A. Johns, chairman of community service in Georgia federation. She had been ill for several months and passed away at her home in Winder last Tuesday.

Talbotton Club Plans Community House.

Talbotton Woman's club met in the home of Miss Mary Graham, with Miss Graham, Miss Gussie P. Childs, and Miss Martha K. Smith, hostesses. Mrs. W. L. Perryman made a statement in regard to the shrubbery placed on the courthouse lawn since the last club meeting, which added attractiveness to the square, and efforts are to be continued to add more. The social hour was enjoyed with the faculty of the Talbotton Consolidated school as honor guests. A special effort will be made by the club to help raise enough funds to finish the remodeling of the old Levert college building to be used as a community house and be called Levert-Strauss hall.

Mrs. Norman Sharp Makes Request.

Mrs. Norman Sharp, state chairman of junior membership for the federation urges district chairmen to send her a report of the number of new junior groups organized in their respective districts during the past year. The Dora Hill loving cup which the state federation offers to the district organizing the largest number of junior groups during the year will be awarded at the state convention in May to the district that reported the greatest number of new junior groups organized during the past club year. Reports must be sent in by April 1 as no report can be considered later than this date, according to the rules which govern the cup award.

Mrs. Brenner Indorsed By Georgia Clubs.

Harlem Woman's club and the Woman's Club of Warm Springs have indorsed Mrs. A. H. Brenner for the office of president of Georgia Federation.

Mrs. Lumsden Named Education Chairman.

Mrs. W. B. Lumsden, of Nocoochee, is ninth district chairman of education, having been appointed by Mrs. J. E. McElroy, of Norcross, district president.

Covington Club Votes $200 to Emory Junior College

Covington Woman's club donated $200 to Emory Junior college at the February meeting held in the library, following a talk on the subject by Mrs. W. C. Clark. Mrs. S. L. Waites presided and minutes of the last meeting were read by Mrs. W. F. Lee, secretary. In the absence of the corresponding secretary, Mrs. G. B. Nixon, Mrs. C. A. Sockwell read a letter from Mrs. Verner, of Athens, asking that the club have a child health and a May day program. A committee with Mrs. W. C. Clark as chairman was appointed to serve in the matter and report at the March meeting. Mrs. T. G. Callaway made a gift of twenty-five children's books to the club. Mrs. T. C. Swann, cahirman of civic committee, reported a plot nicely prepared at the entrance of the city, also on the side of the City Pharmacy building. The club indorsed the serving of a Georgia Product dinner the first Sunday in every month.

A rising vote of thanks was given Isaac Robertson, county commissioner, for coal sent the club. Flags were sold Saturday, February 11, by the pages of the recent state convention for the benefit of the Helen Plane educational loan fund. The following names were presented and elected to membership in the club: Mrs. W. T. Irvine, Mrs. R. P. Walker, Mrs. W. E. Atkinson and Mrs. Charles Hill. The program on "Georgia" was in charge of Mrs. Clifford Campbell's committee and the following program was presented: Roll call was answered with the name of a Georgia product. Vocal solo, "Georgia Land," Miss Emily Elliott, accompanied by Miss Carolina Lee at the piano. Questions and answers on Georgia, Mildred and Mary Almand. "There Is No State Like Georgia," Miss Susie Shaw. "Things in Which Georgia Comes First," Miss Carolina Lee. Vocal solo, "Mighty Lak a Rose," Miss Emily Elliott, and "Call To Our Georgia," Miss Mary Wood Gaither.

Mesdames Clifford Campbell, A. C. Vining, G. B. Nixon, E. J. Dennard, C. B. Almand and Miss Annie Mae Berry served refreshfents.

Mrs. Brantley Indorsed By Eleventh District

The executive board, eleventh district, assembled Friday in regular session in Waycross, and unanimously indorsed Mrs. A. P. Brantley for director for Georgia in the general federation.

Manchester Club Indorses Mrs. Brenner.

Manchester Woman's club, with Mrs. J. H. Montgomery, president, indorses Mrs. A. H. Brenner, of Augusta, for president of State Federation.

Library Day Program Given For Coming Year

Library day program for 1928, arranged by Georgia library commission, includes: Roll call. "My Favorite Book of the Year;" "How Can We Give Our Community and County a Model Library?" (Compare your local library with the measuring rod provided by the commission); "The General Federation's Program for Library Extension"; "Rural Public Library Service—How May Georgia Attain This Goal?" "The Man, the Place and the Book," a true story of a library—could the same be told of your library? "The Value of 'Systematic Reading,'" reading courses, etc.; "Discussion of Some of the Outstanding Books of 1927" (list will be furnished by commission; also one or two volumes for review, if desired).

"Shall We Have Complete and True Library Service for Every Individual in Every County in Every State?" is the slogan of the General Federation committee of library extension with Mrs. Allen H. Suggett, chairman, 850 Francisco street, San Francisco, Cal. And the lowest per capita cost is another question asked by this General Federation chairman.

Brunswick Fine Arts Members Study Savannah Architecture

The department of fine arts of the Brunswick Woman's club arranged a tour of artistic and historic Savannah and 21 members of the Brunswick club drove over to Savannah last Wednesday to make the tour and were met by a committee of Savannahans headed by Miss Harriet Colquitt and including Mrs. F. W. Altstaetter, Mrs. J. S. Howkins, Mrs. E. R. Corson, Miss Phoebe Elliott, Miss Maud Heyward, Miss Dora Mendes, Mrs. Peter W. Meldrim and Mrs. Neyle Colquitt, the latter having planned the trip, designed to take in the points of interest not usually seen by the casual visitor, especially the artistic houses of old Savannah with their interesting doorways and iron work.

Among the places visited were the Owen home built by the architect, William Jay, in 1812. This beautiful home is really the show place of Savannah, being equipped and maintained in the style which prevailed at the time of its building. Here the visitors were shown the drawing room, dining room and two bedrooms filled with "Early American" furniture and furnishings of exquisite design—many more examples than one would find in a dozen antique shops. Another interesting house was the Scarborough house on West Broad street, the former home of the man who built the first steamship to cross the Atlantic, the Savannah. The interesting iron work on this building and on the building which is now used to house the Savannah Female Orphan asylum is of great artistic value. A visit was made to the Independent Presbyterian church on Bull street, the interior of which is a replica of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, London.

Another interesting Savannah home, being Tudor in its style, is that of Judge and Mrs. Peter W. Meldrim. This house was built by an Englishman who brought all the materials from his former home. This is the home used by Sherman as his headquarters when he occupied Savannah. After the trip around the city the visitors gathered at the Little House for lunch, where they were joined by Mrs. J. W. Griffith and Mrs. T. F. Winter, two former Brunswickites now living in Savannah. Mrs. Peter W. Meldrim, of Savannah, acted as toastmistress and introduced the Savannah ladies, while Mrs. G. V. Cate introduced the visitors.

The clubwomen visited Telfair Academy of Arts and Sciences under the guidance of Mrs. Mills B. Lane, an artist of high rank, who proved a most admirable guide. This gallery contains a fine collection of paintings and sculpture, together with the beautiful old furniture of the Telfairs. Recently through the generosity of Mrs. B. F. Bullard, the kitchens have been restored to their former glory and are now a splendid example of the sort of kitchen that would have been seen in the American home a century ago. The entire trip was a success; the weather was perfect and there was not even a puncture to mar the pleasure of the pilgrimage. Mrs. G. V. Cate was general chairman of arrangements and Mrs. W. S. Nathan acted as chairman of transportation. The Brunswick club members who went on the trip were Mrs. Paul Morton, Mrs. Maxfield Parrish, Mrs. George T. Brown, Miss Laura Blessner, Mrs. G. V. Cate, Mrs. Clarence Gowen, Miss May Smith, Mrs. M. N. Diefenderfer, Mrs. Frank Stacy, Mrs. R. L. Sparks, Mrs. S. K. Brown, Mrs. C. L. Elliott, Mrs. Royal K. Tucker, Miss Phyllis Hofmann, Miss Marie Torras, Mrs. Lydie Boisfeuillet, Mrs. W. S. Nathan, Mrs. J. T. Hoteh, Mrs. D. W. Kraus, Mrs. Bertha Nathan and Mrs. J. J. Vickers.

Winder Womans' Club Observes Library Day.

The library committee of the Winder Woman's club, consisting of the following ladies, Mrs. Reese Couch, Mrs. Claude Mayne, Mrs. Marie Thompson, Mrs. H. A. Carithers, Mrs. T. B. Strange, Mrs. R. H. Kimball, were hostess at a "Library Tea" last week, in the rooms occupied by the library, on the fourth floor of the Winder National Bank building, assisted in receiving and entertaining by Mrs. A. D. McCurry, president of the Woman's club; Mrs. P. M. Wise, second vice president; Miss Lona Reese Couch, assistant librarian; Misses Annie Hunter Hargrove and Mary Mayne.

It has been the custom of the club for several years to celebrate "Library Day," in an appropriate way. Several new members and renewals and 15 new books were added. The records show 565 volumes in library, 100 having been added during the year, 38 of which were a donation by the Rev. J. M. Dodd.

Besides keeping the library open once a week, the library committee loan books to teachers to be read in the schoolroom to the children and have visited several schools in the county and city, giving talks on "Reading," and carried hundreds of magazines to the county schools, working with the county school commissioner in stimulating "better reading" for the children. The Winder Woman's club sent 100 books to Alto Sanitarium library, out of the 153 sent by the ninth district. The club has recently placed 25 reference and reading books in the Winder Public School library.

Lesche Club Indorses Prominent Clubwomen.

The Lesche Woman's club, of Dalton, Ga., went on record as indorsing, by unanimous vote, most capable, wise and loved Mrs. Brantley for the office of general federation director for Georgia, and heartily indorses Mrs. W. R. Alvord, of Detroit, Mich., for the office of recording secretary of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. The club believes that those who work so intelligently and efficiently should be honored with state and national offices.

New Hair Style Rage in New York

"Wherever you go in New York now, you are sure to hear girls talking about the new way thousands of them are doing their hair to keep it in place and make it soft, lustrous and beautiful," says Miss Theresa Kloss, 7130 72nd Place, Glendale, New York city. "I have hardly any time to give my hair. So this new style just suits me. All you do is put a few dashes of Danderine on your brush every time you use it. The first few applications get rid of all my dandruff, and every time it gives a new sparkle and life to my hair that makes everyone admire it. It keeps your hair in place, too, just like you arrange it."

Every application of Danderine refreshes your scalp and invigorates your hair. It removes the oily film and makes every strand gleam with new lustre. Dandruff disappears when you use Danderine. Waves "set" with it stay in longer. It's neither sticky nor oily. All drug stores have the generous 35 cent bottles. A fragrant necessity for the well-groomed girl.—(adv.)

The Power Of Thought.

As you think, you travel; and as you love, you attract.

You are today where your thoughts have brought you; you will be tomorrow where your thoughts take you.

Pou cannot escape the result of your thoughts, but you can endure and learn; can accept, and be glad. You will realize the vision (not the idle wish) of your heart, be it base or beautiful or a mixture of both, for you will always gravitate toward that which you, secretly, most love.

In your hands will be placed the exact results of your thoughts; you will receive that which you earn; no more, no less. Whatever your present environment may be, you will fall, remain, or rise with your thoughts, your wisdom, your ideal.

You will become as small as your controlling desire; as great as your dominant aspiration.

Gordon Street Baptist Church To Begin Training School

The Bible school of the Gordon Street Baptist church, Dr. W. H. Faust, pastor, will begin its semi-annual training school March 12, lasting five evenings. The following books will be taught in the course: "Young People and Adults," George W. Andrews, Sunday school secretary, of Georgia; "Building a Standard Sunday School," Dr. W. H. Faust, pastor of the church; "New Testament Studies," by Dr. L. M. Jones, pastor Cascade Baptist church; "Teachers That Teach," by Miss Essie Hall; "Working With Juniors," E. J. White, of West End Baptist church. Each evening at 6 the teaching periods begin. After 45 minutes lunch will be served, then a brief devotional and another 45-minute teaching period. Superintendent J. P. Bonner feels that there will be over 150 taking this course.

The Woman's Missonary society of the Gordon Street Baptist church had an all-day study course last Tuesday, conducted by the pastor, Dr. W. H. Faust, on the textbook, "The New Challenge of Home Missions." A large number took the course. Mrs. J. I. Oxford is president and Mrs. J. S. Price is mission study chairman.

Dr. John E. White, pastor of the First Baptist church, of Savannah, Ga., and formerly pastor of the Second Baptist church, of Atlanta, will conduct a series of evangelistic services at the Gordon Street church, commencing Sunday, April 22. Mr. Fred Barnes, of the evangelistic staff of the home mission board, will conduct the singing.

SECOND BAPTIST.

The Business Women's league of the Second Baptist church meets in the Sunday school auditorium Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Circle G, Mrs. G. E. Cooper, chairman, and Miss Earle Carter, co-chairman, will be in charge. Morgan Blake will be the speaker. Preston Epps will sing. The public is invited by the president, Mrs. Frederic J. Paxon.

The Women's Missionary and Benevolent society of the Second Baptist church will meet in the Junior Business Women's class room at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. Mrs. John R. Dickey, third vice president and chairman of the missionary department W. M. S., has prepared an attractive Ruby anniversary program. The pastor, Dr. Carter Helm Jones, will make a short talk on "Soul-winning," which is one of the aims of the W. M. U. Mrs. J. Furniss Lee is president.

In the absence of Mrs. Carter Helm Jones, chairman social department W. M. S. of the Second Baptist church, who is visiting her son in Allendale, N. J., Mrs. D. B. Graze was hostess at the church dinner Wednesday evening. Mrs. Graze was assisted in serving by circle 6, of which Mrs. William Walker Brooks is chairman.

Many circles have met during the past week for mission study. Circle 9 met in the church Monday and completed "Along the Highway of Service," under the leadership of Miss Cora Anne Brown. Mrs. S. L. Taylor taught "Looking Forward in Latin America" to the study class of circle 7 Tuesday in the home of Mrs. Mary B. Garwood on Ponce de Leon avenue. Mrs. M. L. Brittain was the teacher for circle 6, of which Mrs. William Walker Brooks is chairman. The first lesson in "Today's Supreme Challenge to America" was enjoyed from 4 to 5 o'clock in the church Wednesday afternoon. Each Wednesday at this hour the class will meet for study until the book is completed, the members remaining for dinner and prayer service.

Mothers:

Don't have those worries that almost any baby's mother can easily avoid having! Castoria, an old-fashioned but time-honored preparation soon ends those cross or fretful spells. Simple, safe, but works like magic. The helpful influence of Castoria makes itself felt throughout baby's tiny system. It helps make pale babies rosy-cheeked, and seems to give strength and life to frail, sickly babies. It regulates baby's little bowels—relieves colic, constipation, diarrhea—gives him good appetite and digestion. And how it relieves congestion when a baby catches cold! Never give baby paregoric or any other opiate. A few drops of Castoria are just as soothing, and no harm is done. Even castor oil can not compete with Castoria; and Castoria is vastly better for a baby's system. Castoria is purely vegetable, harmless, pleasant-tasting. You can use it as often as baby is "upset" or fretful. Only one thing to be careful about—see that you get the genuine—the bottle which bears Fletcher's name. It isn't expensive. Doctors have recommended Fletcher's Castoria for over fifty years and millions of mothers swear by it. With each bottle you get "Care and Feeding of Babies," the book any mother or prospective mother will find worth its weight in gold.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Miss Black Brings 100 Children To Christian Church

Bringing into the Sunday school of the First Christian church more than 100 children not affiliated with any other Sunday school and many of whom had never been to Sunday school at all is part of the work being accomplished by Miss Vista Black, former missionary to China, a staunch member of the First Christian church.

Her report made before the Business Woman's circle at its meeting Monday night, February 20, shows the following interesting facts: 140 children were brought into the Sunday school since June 1, 1927 to January 1, 1928, mostly from homes in the vicinity of the church where no apparent effort was made to send them to any Sunday school. Of these 14 were Greeks and two Jews. Of the 140 there are now 50 in the Sunday school of First church. Fifty have either moved from Atlanta or out of reach of the church. Of the remaining 40, 25 whose parents were members of other churches have gone with their children to their own Sunday schools. Fifteen have dropped out because of indifference of the children and their parents.

Through Miss Black's efforts and the assistance of members of the woman's council, clothing and shoes have been provided for 30 of these children who could not otherwise have attended Sunday school. The problem of getting these children to Sunday school and home again has been well taken care of by several members with cars.

The results of such a work cannot be told briefly but suffice it to say not a few of these homes have shown a change of heart and a deeper interest in the Christian life through the better influence of the Sunday school.

Another feature of special interest on the circle program was the talk given by Mrs. C. R. Stauffer, on internationalism as it relates to missionary work both at home and in the foreign fields.

Hospital Auxiliary To Honor Mrs. Jones.

Mrs. James L. Key, president of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Georgia Baptist hospital, announces a memorial service for Mrs. Sam D. Jones, founder and honorary president, to take place at the hospital Friday morning, April 13, at 11 o'clock. The many friends of Mrs. Jones throughout the city and state are invited to attend.

7 Denominations Are Present On World Prayer Day

The world day of prayer for missions, sponsored annually by the Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions and the Council of Women for Home Missions was held at the Lutheran church of the Redeemer Friday afternoon, February 24, at 2:30 o'clock, under the auspices of the Federation of the Church Women of Georgia, Mrs. Charles P. MacLaughlin, second vice president, presiding.

The "Day of Prayer" and program arranged was broadly missionary in scope, being international, interracial and interdenominational. Seven denominations were represented at this meeting, viz.: Episcopal, Presbyterian, Baptist, Methodist, Christian, Congregational and Lutheran. Responsive reading and prayers were led by Mrs. H. J. Mikell, Mrs. L. H. Keller, Mrs. Arthur Hale, Mrs. C. R. Stauffuer and Mrs. I. B. Smith.

Dr. W. E. Davis, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church was scheduled to make the principal address, but having been unexpectedly called from the city, Dr. Charles P. MacLaughlin kindly made an acceptable substitute. Two students from Emory university, C. J. Aukers, of India, and J. K. Ono, of Japan, took part in the program.

Big Bethel choir added to the program of music by giving three well received numbers. An offering was received for world wide missions.

Briefly Told

Mrs. Ben S. Thompson, of Madison, vice president of the Georgia Baptist Woman's Missionary Union and chairman for Georgia for Ruby anniversary, passed through the city last week and visited headquarters in the Palmer building.

Mrs. W. J. Neel, of Cartersville, president of the Georgia W. M. U., was in Atlanta Friday, February 24, in conference with the executive committee of state missions.

Special interest centers in the musicale to be given by Woman's Auxiliary of Wesley Memorial hospital at the home of Mrs. Henry Heinz, 1810 Ponce de Leon avenue, Friday afternoon, March 9, at 3 o'clock.

Barnesville Missionary society of the Methodist church has nearly 100 members. The three circles with the newly elected chairmen have met with a representative attendance. Plans are under advisement for the new year's work. Literature for jubilee year is in evidence.

President Emeritus of W. M. S.

Mrs. W. B. Higginbotham, president emeritus of the North Georgia conference Woman's Missionary society, who passed her 75th birthday February 21. Mrs. Higginbotham served the conference for 27 years, first as president of the home mission work and later as president of the foreign mission work. She resigned recently and was succeeded by Mrs. J. N. McEachern.

Methodist News Is of Interest Throughout State of Georgia

One of the largest attended services at the Inman Park Methodist church this year was the service presenting the missionary pageant, "America's Obligation," Sunday evening under the direction of Mrs. Iverso Buell. The theme of the pagent was America's duty toward non-Christian lands. The stage was decorated with the Christian flag and Old Glory. Picture frames containing human pictures representing pioneer missionaries lined the choir loft. America and the church occupied elevated chairs draped with flags at the center of the stage.

About 90 persons from all departments of the church took part. The characters taking speaking parts were chronicler, Dr. James Thoroughman; the church, Miss Mary Penick; missions, Miss Mildred Butler; America, Mrs. Edgar N. Good. Miss Martha Anderson, as foreign fields, sang "Tell Me the Old, Old Story." Roy Liddell, church organist, was in charge of the music, assisted by Mrs. L. G. Martin, contralto soloist.

Capitol View.

The business meeting of the W. M. S. of the Capitol View M. E. church was presided over by the president, Mrs. R. S. Carroll.

Mrs. W. J. Culpepper, superintendent of publicity, presented the Bulletin. A report from the ways and means committee, given by Mrs. P. E. Davenport, indicated the success of the committee's efforts to raise funds for the church.

Mrs. J. L. Jepson, superintendent of study, announced plans for the all-day meeting which will be devoted to the study of the book, "New Tasks for New Times." Representatives from other churches will be invited to attend that meeting.

The Mission Study cluass of the Capitol Avenue W. M. S. held its all-day mission study meeting at the church Wednesday, February 22, under the leadership of Mrs. J. L Jepson, superintendent of study. The book studied was "New Tasks for New Times." The following are some of the topics that were presented for study and discussion: "The Responsibility of the United States in Christian Missions;" "America Preparing for the Task;" "Why Foreign Missions?" "Some Achievements of Missions;" "The Work Is Not Finished;" "Problems in Administration."

Hartwell.

The first quarterly meeting for the year of 1928 of the Woman's Missionary society of the Hartwell Methodist church was held Tuesday afternoon, January 17 at 3 o'clock, with a large crowd in attendance. An impressive installation service was conducted by Mrs. W. B. Richardson, district secretary. The new officers are: President, Mrs. S. R. Patton; vice president, Mrs. Howard H. Page; tre surer, Mrs. J. B. Shaw; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Ira Adams; recording secretary, Mrs. W. B. McCurry; superintendent young people, Mrs. J. L. Massey; superintendent juniors, Mrs. Hoyt Baker; superintendent social service, Miss Mary Holland; superintendent supplies, Miss Emma Kay; superintendent study, Mrs. J. W. King; superintendent publicity, Mrs. J. M. Carlton; superintendent local work, Mrs. R. C. Linder; agent for Voice, Mrs. E. B. Herring; superintendent baby division, Mrs. W. M. Yarbrough; circle leaders: "Lizzie Hodges," Mrs. Walter L. Hodges; "Ellen Bobo," Mrs. J. M. Carlton; "Lessie Kendrick Page," Mrs. J. Loyd Teasley.

Mrs. Hoyt Baker was elected to represent the society at the annual missionary conference which will convene in Atlanta this spring. Mrs. T. H. Johnson was elected alternate. Mrs. W. C. Thomason, of Lavonia, a former conference officer, was introduced to the society and made an interesting talk. On Tuesday evening, February 7, a Georgia products banquet was given at the Hartwell High school auditorium for the benefit of the Woman's Missionary society. The menu was prepared in the domestic science department by members of the society. An interesting program was rendered.

Hospital Auxiliary To Sponsor Musical.

The music lovers of Atlanta will be interested in the announcement of a benefit musicale at the home of Mrs. Henry C. Heinz, 1810 Ponce de Leon avenue, on Friday afternoon, March 9, at 3 o'clock.

This musicale is sponsored by the house committee of the Woman's Auxiliary to Wesley Memorial hospital, through the Methodist churches of the North and South Atlanta districts. Mrs. John C. Staton is chairman of this committee. Tickets or information may be secured by calling her, 'phone Hemlock 1818-J.

Girlish Complexion Easily Acquired

An entirely safe and very effective way to keep the complexion young-looking and beautiful, is to apply ordinary mercolized wax at bedtime, using it like cold cream. This gradually absorbs the withered, faded cuticle, bringing to view the more youthful, pink tinted underskin. One ounce of the wax to be had at any drug store is enough to completely rejuvenate a worn-out complexion. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles, always a sign of age, use as face lotion 1 ounce powdered saxolite and 1 half pint witch hazel.—(adv.)

Mrs. Wilbur Jones Makes Announcement.

Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones, superintendent of the Baptist Woman's Missionary union of Atlanta association, calls attention to the fact that there remains only one more month for making the "A" record of "Enlistment" for the Ruby anniversary program of 1928. This "Enlistment" requires that all new societies that are organized during 1928 shall function at least nine months. Therefore no society organized after April 1 can be counted as one of the accomplishments of the fortieth anniversary program. The Atlanta W. M. U. has made a fine record up to date, in reporting new societies of all grades, and in the month that still remains it is confidently expected that the organization of other societies will be promptly affected and reported to Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones, superintendent.

Interest Is Shown In Meets.

Steady increase in attendance and interest is being shown in the interdenominational services of meetings which are held daily at 12:15 o'clock in the First Baptist church, Peachtree and Cain streets.

These services, sponsored by the Christian council and Ministers' association, have a two-fold purpose, to give an opportunity for praise and to draw the various denominations into closer bonds. It may be readily said that there has never been such a concerted movement toward a realization of Christian unity as is now manifest at these noon-day meetings.

For the past week the pulpit has been filled by local ministers. In the forthcoming weeks the meetings will be addressed by leaders of religious thought from many sections of the country as Dr. Massie, from Tremont Temple, Boston; Bishop Johnston, of Colorado; Dr. Irmsides, of California; Dr. Dodd, of Louisiana, and others to be announced later.

Dr. and Mrs. Cooper To Be Honored.

The membership of West End Baptist church will entertain at a reception in honor of Dr. and Mrs. M. A. Cooper at the church Monday evening, March 5, at 8 o'clock. Members of the church and congregation are invited.

Service Star Legion Meets Next Wednesday.

The state division of Service Star Legion meets in executive session Wednesday morning, March 7, at 11 o'clock, in the Atlanta Woman's club.

The plates for the luncheon will be $1 each and members are asked to make reservations immediately with Mrs. L. P. Rosser, 2230 North Boulevard, telephone Hemlock 7008-W.

Only through Fit, Fashion and Fineness can you achieve Elegance, Excellence and Economy

Fineness

BENEATH the surface—what? That is the question to which the buyer of everything under the sun must have an answer before he or she can determine the degree of value they are receiving in return for their money.

FINENESS can be veneered on or built-in. If it is only a polish it soon wears off. If it is built-in it lasts throughout the whole life of the product of which it is a part.

Shorter Club Plans Reception For Atlanta Seniors

The Shorter club will receive in honor of the seniors of Washington seminary, North Avenue Presbyterian school, Woodberry Hall, Girls' High and all the high schools of the city Thursday afternoon, March 16, from 4 to 6 o'clock at the home of Mrs. L. G. Hardman, in Ansley Park.

The program, under the direction of Miss Bennett, will be rendered by a group of students from Shorter, accompanied by the president, Dr. Furry, and other representative members of the faculty. A group of the Rome alumnae will also be among the honored guests.

The receiving line will include Mrs. Hardman, Mrs. John H. Owen, president of the club, and a group of notable past presidents. The reception rooms will be decorated with spring flowers and foliage from Mrs. Hardman's own gardens. This is an important annual event which every member of the Shorter club is urged to attend. The friends of Shorter college are invited to join the club in making this a memorable event in its history.

Mrs. High Indorsed for Office By Daughters of Colonists

Georgia society, Daughters of American Colonists, indorsed Mrs. J. M. High for the office of honorary national vice president for life, at its annual meeting Friday at the Capital City club, the election of Mrs. High to take place at the national assembly in Washington, D. C., in April. Another outstanding feature of the meeting Friday, at which Mrs. Bun Wylie, state regent, presided, was the election of the following delegates to the Washington general assembly: Mrs. Richard Brooks, Forsyth; Mrs. Bert Tyler, Dalton; Mrs. John M. Slaton, Atlanta; Mrs. Fay Gaffney, Columbus; Mrs. John D. Pope, Albany; Mrs. O. C. Kauffman, Atlanta. The alternates elected include Miss Lillian Tidwell, Mrs. J. O. Wynn, Mrs. T. C. Mell, Mrs. John Montgomery, Decatur; Mrs. J. C. Gentry, Mrs. Howard McCall, Mrs. Julius Talmadge, Athens; Mrs. J. N. Bateman, Mrs. W. E. Mann, Dalton; Mrs. David Woodward.

Mrs. High reported that shrubs and trees had been planted in Patriot circle in Piedmont park, the plot assigned to the Daughters of the Colonists, where the marker and fountain are located. The Daughters of American Colonists has planted a tree in the plot in honor of Mrs. High, who is the founder and vice president general of the Daughters of American Colonists in Georgia.

Mrs. Eli Thomas, chairman of Wesleyan scholarship memorial to Mrs. Emily Willet Davis, gave a report of the fund and the scholarship girl. The Georgia society has a valuable collection of old wills and records and is endeavoring to add to this collection. Mrs. Frances Brown Chase, first vice regent, presented the recommendations fromthe executive board. Mrs. Eugene Chubbuck, of Peoria, Ill., prominent D. A. R. and Daughter of American Colonists, who is visiting Mrs. Charles Rice, was presented by the regent. Mrs. L. D. T. Quinby, president of Fulton chapter, U. D. C., was introduced. She extended cordial greetings to the D. A. C. from Fulton chapter.

A delightful program followed with Solon Drukenmiller, Miss Marianna McClellan, Mrs. Dennie Peteet and Cobb Edwards taking part.

State's First W.C.T.U. Leader Passes Her Nineteenth Birthday

By M. Frances Meadors Burghard.

The first president of the Georgia Woman's Christian Temperance union, Mrs. William C. Sibley, celebrated her ninetieth birthday February 13, amid showers of congratulations, good wishes and love and honor, at her home in Birmingham, Ala.

Mrs. Sibley, then of Augusta, was president of this organization from 1883 to 1900, having served the three previous years as president of the Augusta W. C. T. U., which now bears her name. Those witnessing the ease, gentleness of manner, sweetness of spirit and power of utterance which characterized the first president of the Georgia W. C. T. U. will readily agree that God had set her apart as a leader of her people," wrote Mrs. J. J. Ansley, author of "The History of the Georgia W. C. T. U." She continued: "She was a providential woman peculiarly endowed with the qualifications which that stage of the work demanded. A woman of less gentleness, less grace, less delicacy, less softness of voice and graciousness of bearing, less devoted to her home and children, would have failed utterly to enlist southern men, and especially southern women."

An Ante-Bellum Belle.

Mrs. Sibley was reared in luxury and refinement, with all the educational and social advantages of wealth, she was a gracious and merry "befo' de wah" beauty, belle and wit. Then the year that Abraham Lincoln was elected president she became the beloved wife of a distinguished citizen and soldier, who rose to the rank of a Confederate major. Both Mr. and Mrs. Sibley were earnest workers in the First Presbyterian church of Augusta, of which the father of the late President Woodrow Wilson was pastor, and Mr. Sibley at the time of his death was the senior elder in that historic church, which was built on land ceded by King George of England. In the early days of the W. C. T. U. the great Frances Willard was a congenial guest in the "prophet's chamber" in her beautiful Augusta home. She resigned from the state W. C. T. U. presidency to devote her time to the care of her husband when his health failed, and after his death moved to Birmingham in 1904 to make her home with her sons, prominent business men of that city.

Sees Prohibition Progress.

Through the vista of years she has seen in the making some of the most important historical events in this country and the world. She has seen time and space well nigh annihilated as far as communication and transportation are concerned—a lumbering stage coach to the aeroplane, a messenger on a mule to a wireless and radio; candles to electricity; scientific and industrial development and marvels of invention which put fairy tales to shame. She has had a resultant part in temperance all the way up from the failure of curative measures to the success of preventative means as exemplified in prohibition, and worked for laws to close saloons on Sunday and election days, and prevent the sale of intoxicants to minors on to state and national constitutional prohibition. Mrs. Sibley has seen the saloons which flourished on every city block and country cross-roads swept away forever, until today the sale of a halp pint of liquor in a back alley or the manufacture of a barrel of "stump-rum" in a swamp has sufficient news value to receive front-page space in a city daily. She has seen drunken reeling on the streets as a common sight, until now a staggering man attracts as much notice as a circus parade—until he is arrested, locked up and tried in court for "violation of the prohibition law," instead of being assisted home and put to bed or allowed to "sleep it off" in a ditch, vacant lot or wherever he chanced to fall.

An Advertisement.

The changes for the better in liquor selling and drinking are illustrated by the following advertisement published in one of Georgia's oldest papers when liquor was sold in groceries and general merchandise stores. It appeared during Mrs. Sibley's girlhood and was one of several similar ones in the paper when the city in which it was published was only a town:

"Have just received s hogsheads St. Croix sugar, 6 hhds. Orleans sugar, 20 bags coffee, 100 barrels whiskey, 50 bbls. IV gin, 10 barrels Portland rum, 25 bbls. potatoes, 5 hhds. molasses, 5 bbls. peach brandy, 40 kegs nails; 57 pieces cotton bagging, 2 a5 barrels Boston rum, 10,000 lbs. Sweeds iron, from 11 and 4 to 8 in., 150 bbls. flour, direct from Baltimore, of superior quality, 200 bbls. Philadelphia whiskey," cambric, satin, gause veils, mackelel and shoes were listed in the advertisement which ended with "which they will sell low for cash. On hand—300 bushels Liverpool salt, 100 bbls. Monogahela whiskey, 8th and 9th proof, 1 pipe Holland gin."

She has seen the description of W. C. T. U. member changed from being classed as "a fanatic" to being referred to as a "heroine," and the National Woman's Christian Temperance union grow from one organization of 51 national organizations federated in the World's W. C. T. U.

Thanks God for Prohibition.

Mrs. Sibley has had an enviable part in prohibition's progress. She is quoted as saying on her ninetieth birthday: "It is the joy of my life that God spared me to see the fruits of great victory, both in my native state, Georgia, and my adopted state, Alabama, both of which won statewide prohibition. And later for the eighteenth amendment to the federal constitution, for which I can never show myself sufficiently grateful through all eternity." Even to the infirmities of age "she stretched out the hand to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy" forever "in her tongue is the law of kindness." As an active prohibition leader, church worker, wife, mother, friend, everywhere her life has been a benediction to all it touched, and her Georgia comrades, as well as her children "rise up and call her blessed, and "her works praise her." On her ninetieth anniversary Mrs. Sibley was happy in the love and tender care of three sons, Grigsby T. Sibley, John W. Sibley, of Birmingham, Ala., and Rev. Julian S. Sibley, D. D., of Shelbyville, Tenn., two daughters, Mrs. John A. Law, of Spartanburg, S. C., and Miss Grace Sibley, of Birmingham, and 27 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren, and many other relatives.

Campaign Conference.

Mrs. Marvin Williams, Atlanta, and Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, Milledgeville, returned the past week from Jacksonville, Fla., where they were speakers at one of the national W. C. T. U. campaign conferences, the one for the states of Georgia, South Carolina and Florida. Mrs. Atkins "made speeches" there and one at St. Petersburg, Fla., and another at Nashville, Tenn., and fills lecture engagements in Tennessee the next four weeks.

Mrs. Williams spoke on "Prohibition Accomplishments" at Jacksonville at the conference, which was outstanding in that representatives from 21 states of the union were in attendance and earnest national leaders "were at their best" on the program. She stressed the splendid accomplishments in health, industrial conditions, decrease in crime, which she proved by the latest report of the board of public welfare in Georgia, showing a decided decrease in jail population. Then she said that the most outstanding accomplishment of the principle of prohibition was the eighteenth amendment. Prohibition, she said, had been tired out in all the smaller units, and it worked, and it is working in the larger unit.

Mrs. Armor Made Trustee.

Glowing accounts of the speeches of Mrs. Mary Harris Armor in Georgia towns and cities have reached my desk. Everywhere large audiences hang on her words, and everywhere the ministry urges her to "talk plainly about the candidates, tell the people the truth about them," and everywhere she urges the solid south to be solid in demanding dry candidates and dry platforms. She has been made a trustee of Asbury college, of Wilmore, Ky., a world school in the heart of the famous blue grass section. She also was invited to be the college speaker at commercement in June.

College Park News Items.

A social event in the young musical contingent of College Park was the recital sponsored by Miss Eloise Olds at the Woman's clubhouse on Friday afternoon. A program composed of members of junior and intermediate classes of Miss Olds was rendered.

Kindergarten Alumnae Holds Meeting.

The Atlanta Kindergarten Alumnae club met Friday afternoon at the residence of Miss Margaret Thornton, 1045 Lucile avenue. Miss Margaret Thornton, Miss Evelyn Bird and Miss Sarah Suddeth were joint hostesses. A doll show was an interesting event of the afternoon, as a number of the guests responded to the request to bring their favorite dolls.

Dolls of many nations, new dolls and old dolls, machine-made dolls and ingeniously constructed hand-made dolls were on display. A quaint "Old Mammy" doll, having come down to the third generation and now the favorite possession of little Miss Virginia Simmons, was presented by her mother, Mrs. T. H. Simmons. A collection of Chinese dolls, presented by Miss Adelaide Thompson, who bought them while in China, was especially interesting. These dolls were exquisitely hand-carved in wood, painted and dressed in exact representation of Chinese of wealth and those of the domestic class.

There will be no regular meeting of the Kindergarten alumnae club in April, owing to the meeting of the Georgia Educational association in the city at that time.

:-: OUTDOOR SPORTS AND ACTIVITIES INTEREST MILITARY SOCIAL SET :-:

Social interest of Atlanta's popular military contingent at Fort McPherson centers around outdoor sports and activities with the approach of the spring season. Dress parades, always evoking both military and civilian attention, are of first importance, as the above group of prominent young army maids and matrons testify. They were snapped recently as they witnessed one of these inspiring scenes and include, left to right, Mrs. S. E. Faine, Mrs. W. W. Peck, Mrs. R. G. Turner, Miss Doris Houston, the attractive guest of Mrs. John Weckerling, Miss Dorothy Tibbetts and Mrs. Weckerling. In the lower group are three charming devotees of sports who are famed as riders among the military set and were caught by the camera with their spirited mounts just as they started for a canter through the bridle paths of the reservation. They are, left to right, Mrs. R. S. Moore, Mrs. G. Proctor and Mrs. H. S. Wagner. The photos are the work of the Rogers and Farmer studio.

Carnival Ball Planned for Opera Week

Opera week social plans engage the attention of Atlanta society, with a carnival ball scheduled for Wednesday evening, April 25, at the Piedmont Driving club sponsored by the Opera club, this spectacular event to be attended by Metropolitan artists, and most of the guests will attend in costume. Many brilliant entertainments include dances by the corps de ballet of the Metropolitan company and songs by leading artists of the company, with the Metropolitan orchestra playing accompaniment, and following the special entertainment features there will be general dancing.

Members of the Opera club may apply for reservations to Mr. Negri, manager of the Driving club. There will be only 500 guests, including those invited from the Metropolitan company.

Monday night, April 23, the Capital City club will give a supper-dance in honor of the directors, officials and artists of the Metropolitan Opera company and the directors of the Atlanta Music Festival association.

The annual opera barbecue takes place at Druid Hills club Thursday noon, April 26, given in honor of the officials and artists of the Metropolitan company and of the Music Festival association of Atlanta.

Friday evening, April 27, the directors of the Music Festival association will give a supper-dance at the Capital City club in compliment to the directors, officials and artists of the Metropolitan company and members of the board of directors of the Capital City club.

Parties Assemble At Driving Club.

Congenial parties assembled Saturday evening at the dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving club.

Dining together were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rodgers, Mr. and Mrs. Ashby Hill and Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Clay.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schaefer, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robertson, of Montreal, Canada; Mrs. Charles Hollander, Mrs. Stacy E. Hill, B. W. Lamar and Lieutenant Philip E. Payne formed a party.

Miss Edna Belle Raine and Miss Virginia Courts, two popular members of the 1927-28 Debutantes' club, were honor guests in the dinner party at which Miss Frances Floyd was hostess.

Mrs. Frederick Pratt To Be Honored.

Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt, of Buffalo, N. Y., arrives Monday to visit Mrs. John M. Slaton, at Wingfield, her home on Peachtree street, and will be entertained at a series of social gaieties. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson's dinner Monday evening at Broadlands, their home on Paces Ferry road, will compliment Mrs. Pratt.

Mrs. Don Pardee's informal luncheon given Tuesday at the Georgian Terrace will honor Mrs. Pratt and former Governor John M. Slaton and Mrs. Slaton will be hosts at a dinner Tuesday evening for their guest.

Mrs. Pratt maintains an apartment in Paris and during last fall former Governor Slaton and Mrs. Slaton visited her at her European home for several weeks.

Mrs. May Palmer Weds Frank L. Parker.

Of interest to a large number of friends in Atlanta is the marriage of Mrs. May Palmer to Frank Linus Parker, of Salt Lake City, Utah, and Los Angeles, Calif., which occurred Thursday in a private parlor at the Biltmore hotel. Dr. J. W. Quillian, of the Methodist Episcopal church, of Decatur, performed the ceremony.

The bride is the mother of Mrs. J. R. McCalley and Mrs. T. I. Miller. Mr. Parker is a well-known business man of Los Angeles and Salt Lake City, where he is prominently connected in the hardware and lumber business.

After a honeymoon in California Mr. Parker and his bride will be at home, April 1, at 824 East South Temple street, in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Mrs. A. Rudolph Weds Mr. Beadle Of Biltmore, N.C.

Mrs. James Robert Pagett announces the marriage of her daughter, Mrs. Annie Louise Rudolph, of Gainesville, Ga., to Chauncey Delos Beadle, of Biltmore, N. C., the marriage having taken place Saturday noon, March 3, at the home of the bride's sister and brother, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Bridges, at their home on Penn avenue. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Bridges entertained members of the immediate family at an informal breakfast, after which Mr. Beadle and his bride left for a wedding trip to California. On their return, April 15, they will reside at Biltmore, N. C.

The bride wore a striking costume fashioned of beige crepe with a small hat to match trimmed with a rhinestone ornament. She carried a bouquet of orchids and valley lilies. Mrs. Bridges was attired in a black chiffon combined with flesh colored chiffon and she wore a shoulder bouquet of pink roses and valley lilies. Mrs. Pagett, the bride's mother, was costumed in navy blue crepe and she wore a shoulder bouquet of lavender sweet peas and valley lilies.

The handsomely appointed table in the dining room was overlaid with a Venetian lace cover, the color motif of lavender and pink being exquisitely carried out. In the center of the table was a plateau of pink roses and lavender sweet peas, from which arose an epergne filled with these same lovely flowers. Smaller plateaux adorned either end of the table, while silver candlesticks holding unshaded pink tapers enhanced the beauty of the table decoration. The reception rooms of the lovely home were artistically decorated with bowls and vases of pink roses and lavender sweet peas.

Mrs. Beadle is numbered among the most prominent matrons of Gainesville and is equally as popular in Atlanta's social and cultural circles. She is an accomplished musician, having graduated from the Brenau Conservatory of Music. Both she and Mr. Beadle have a host of friends throughout the south who will be interested in the announcement of their marriage.

A. S. Floyd To Be Host.

Alfred Swann Floyd will be host Sunday evening at a buffet supper at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James S. Floyd, on The Prado in Ansley Park. The occasion will honor the active members of the Tech chapter of the Kappa Alpha fraternity and the affair will assemble 60 members of the college set.

TRIPLET ELEPHANT GAME

$1,500.00 First Prize | $1,000.00 Second Prize | $500.00 Third Prize | A Grand Total of | 30 Cash Awards

THE PROBLEM

The sums total of the figures on each of the three elephants pictured herewith are to be given as a solution. You can find the sum total of each elephant by adding up the figures of each. The figures 1, 2, and 3 in the circles in the upper left hand corners of the elephants are simply to identify them. These figures have nothing to do with the elephants' weights.

In submitting your solution you must identify the three elephants by their numbers and give the weights of each A complete solution means that you are to find the sum total of each elephant. It takes the sum total of each to make one solution. This is a game of skill and not a guessing contest.

There are no "1's' or "ciphers" in the elephants. There are no groups of figures, that is, the figure "9" is the highest figure shown. There are no "23's," "55's" or "97's," or like groups. If you find a "2" and a "3" are written so closely together that it looks like "23," it means that "2" and "3" are to be added—just as you would if they were an inch apart.

There are no figures in the picture except in the bodies of the elephants. The tops of the "6's" are distinctly curved, and the bottom of the "9's" are straight or nearly so. There is no trick or illusion in the charts.

GENERAL RULES OF THE CONTEST

1. This contest is open only to residents of Georgia and adjoining states. Both old and new subscribers may enter. No employee or member of an employee's family of The Atlanta Constitution will be allowed to participate in the contest, nor any of the prize winners that have won prizes in excess of $100.00 in any of the elephant contests heretofore conducted by The Atlanta Constitution.

2. Contestants may submit as many different solutions as they may desire, provided a payment of one of the amounts designated in the prize list shall accompany each solution, but no contestant will be permitted to win more than one prize. Once registered a solution cannot be changed. NO SOLUTION UNACCOMPANIED BY A SUBSCRIPTION PAYMENT WILL BE REGISTERED.

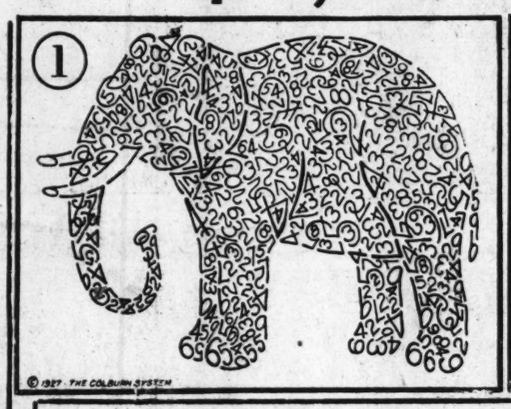

3. The Atlanta Constitution offers these prizes for individual effort. While it is proper for members of one household or several friends to work together, it is not permissible for more than one of those working in unison to send a solution of the puzzle. When, in the judgment of the contest manager or The Atlanta Constitution, more than one member of the same family or more than one of any number of persons he believes have worked together, send in a solution of the puzzle, the right is reserved to refund the amount of money paid for subscription and return the solution i. is believed has been submitted contrary to the rules.

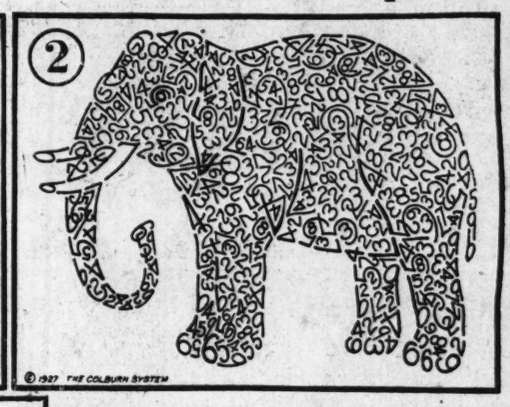

4. The Atlanta Constitution reserves the right at any time to reject any solution which it believes has not been submitted under the proper conditions. In other words, any group of persons working together and submitting more than one solution, all submitted by the group will be barred. The Atlanta Constitution also reserves the right to finally decide any other questions or points which may arise in this contest and participants by sending in their answers agree to accept the decisions of the contest manager of The Atlanta Constitution as conclusive and final.

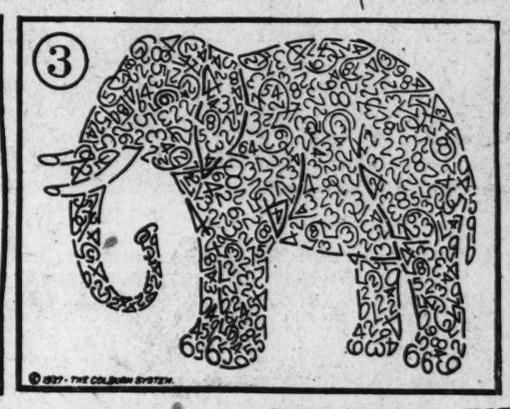

5. In case of ties, as many prizes will be reserved as there are people tied before any prizes are awarded for a less correct solution; that is, if two or more people should tie in the best solution, the first two or more prizes will be reserved for them, and they will be awarded in order of the standing of their solutions of the second puzzle. That is, the best solution will be awarded the first prize, the next best second and the third best third prize, etc.

6. All solutions with remittances must be delivered to the office of The Atlanta Constitution by 6:00 p. m., Thursday, March 29, 1928, or mailed at any post office in Georgia or adjoining states, bearing postmark of no later date than March 29.

7. The subscription rate of the daily and Sunday Constitution is $5.00 for six months, $9.50 for twelve months All subscriptions in this contest must be paid in advance. Nothing less than six months' subscription will be accepted, and not more than twelve months' subscription is required. A subscription can be sent to one person and the solution credited to another, but the complete address of both must be given in each instance. This contest begins Thursday, February 9, and ends Thursday, March 29, 1928.

Patience and Persistency are the only requisites in winning one of the 30 big awards.

Daily and Sunday Constitution 6 months, $5.00; 12 months, $9.50

Subscription Information.

The least amount to accompany a solution in this contest is $5.00 for six months' subscription to the daily and Sunday Constitution, new or renewal. The greatest amount required is $9.50 for twelve months' subscription to the daily and Sunday Constitution, new or renewal. All renewal subscriptions will be extended for the time paid for beginning with the present paid date of the expiration of subscription. Subscriptions secured by the means of this contest in Atlanta and suburbs will be delivered by carrier service. In towns outside of Atlanta where The Constitution has carrier delivery service, the paper may be delivered by carrier upon request of the subscriber or the contestant. Otherwise, the paper will be sent by mail.

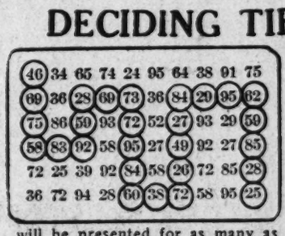

How to Win $1,500.00

To enter this contest it is necessary to send but one paid-in-advance subscription to the daily and Sunday Constitution for six months with $5.00, but you can increase the amount of the prize money that you will receive if you are a winner. For instance, with a $5.00 remittance and six months' subscription, should you win first prize the amount paid would be $500.00, but if the winner of first prize has qualified with a remittance of $9.50 for twelve months' subscription, the prize will be $1,500.00 instead of $500.00.

$500.00 will be awarded to the winner of first prize provided one six months' subscription to the daily and Sunday Constitution with $5.00 remittance is sent, new or renewal, $250.00 for second prize, $125.00 for third prize, etc.

$1,500.00 instead of $500.00 will be awarded to the winner of first prize provided one yearly subscription to the daily and Sunday Constitution is sent with $9.50, either new or renewal; second prize, $1,000.00; third prize, $500.00, etc. See last column in prize list. All subscriptions in this contest must be paid in advance.

DECIDING TIES---IF ANY

In case of ties, a second puzzle, like the accompanying chart, except larger, will be presented for those tied to solve. The problem will consist of drawing a continuous chain across the chart encircling the figures in the circles. If necessary to eliminate further ties, the puzzle, with combinations changed, will be presented for as many as five more times, after which, should any ties exist, each tying contestant will receive the full amount of any prizes tied for.

In case there are no ties on counting elephants no other puzzle, of course, will be presented.

$7,500

Travel and Pedestrian Accident Insurance

issued to annual subscribers and immediate members of a subscriber's family of ages from 15 to 70 at $1.25 per policy each per year. This fee is in addition to the subscription price. Applicants should give name in full, state age and occupation, and when a beneficiary is given be sure to state full Christian name and relationship to the insured.

Here Is The Great Prize List

Note: The value of the prize depends on how much you pay on your subscription with your solution in the triplet elephant game. The amount paid will be applied to the daily and Sunday Constitution: Daily only or tri-weekly subscriptions not accepted in this contest, and no solution will be registered unless accompanied by at least $5.00 for six months' subscription. The least amount is $5.00 for six months' subscription, or the largest amount required is $9.50 for twelve months' subscription.

Both the colution and subscription must be sent in at the same time in same envelope.

	Prize if 6 mos. sub. new or renewal with $5.00 is sent.	Prize if 12 mos. sub. new or renewal with $9.50 is sent.
First Prize	$500.00	$1,500.00
Second Prize	250.00	1,000.00
Third Prize	125.00	500.00
Fourth Prize	75.00	250.00
Fifth Prize	40.00	100.00
Sixth Prize	20.00	50.00
Seventh to Thirtieth Prizes	5.00	25.00
Total	$1,130.00	$4,000.00

Important Facts To Remember

While the amount you pay with a solution of the puzzle does not have any effect on your winning an award, it does affect the amount you will receive should you win, as the value of these awards is determined by what the winners submit in subscription money. This is explained in the awards list, which you should study carefully before sending in your solution.

The time a solution is received has no bearing upon its winning an award. Accuracy is what counts.

Not more than one award will be awarded to any one person.

Closing Date

The Great Elephant Puzzle Contest Will Close Thursday, March 29, 1928.

GRAVURE PICTORIAL SECTION

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

SUNDAY MARCH 4th 1928

THE IDEAL SERVANT—R. J. Wensley and his mechanical man, showing the intricate mechanism that is the heart of this queer creature of iron. (Herbert)

THE GLORIOUS GLORIA assumes a new role as "Sadie Thompson" in the picture presentation of the sensational stage success, "Rain." It will be shown at the Howard this week.

A NEW THRILL FOR OPERA LOVERS—Rosa Ponselle, who will appear in "Norma," to be presented this season, for this first time in Atlanta.

TALKING DOG—Stuart Tompkins, of New York, is the owner of this 3½-year-old Great Dane, which he claims can talk. The dog, it is claimed, can say "how-do-you-do," "thank you" and "candy, please" without prompting. (Herbert)

ATLANTA FLIER CAPTURES TROPHIES AT MACON AIR DERBY—Beeler Blivins, Atlanta flying ace, with his plane, an exact duplicate of the "Spirit of St. Louis," and the two silver cups he won in the Macon air derby.

MARTHA WASHINGTON, impersonated by Miss Helen Estes, of Gainesville, Ga., at the inter-state historical costume ball at Kenilworth Inn, Asheville, N. C., on Washington's birthday. Over 60 sponsors from as many cities in the south were present at the event.

"HELLO, ATLANTA"—Dapper Jimmy Walker, mayor of New York, being greeted by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, chief executive of "the New York of the South," on the former's recent visit to Atlanta.

SHE'S A FEMALE THAT'S MAIL—Figure it out. Margaret Bartlett, of Reno, Nevada, has been "mailed" by airplane to San Francisco—the second woman to make a trip of this kind. She weighs 100 pounds and postage was $400. (International)

CAPTIVES OF CAPTAIN KIDD—Miss Helen Hardman, niece of the governor of Georgia, and Miss Virginia Butler, of Houston, Texas, with Joseph Marvel, of Glens Falls, N. Y., as the famous pirate. Miss Hardman, sponsor for Commerce, Ga., wore a Louis XIV costume, and Miss Butler, representing Houston, was dressed as Mrs. Sam Houston at the interstate historical ball in Asheville.

SPEED DEMON HURTLES INTO SEA—A scene on Daytona Beach as Frank Lockhart's Stutz Special was being pulled from the sea after the near tragedy during the speed trials. Lockhart is shown in the driver's seat as scores of spectators rushed to free him from the partially wrecked machine. He was traveling more than 200 miles per hour when the accident happened.

TALENTED GIRL MUSICIAN—Miss Jo Beth Apperson, of 97 Highland drive, president of the Junior Music club and a senior at Washington seminary, has appeared in Atlanta's symphony orchestra. She will attend the convention of the Georgia Federation of Music Clubs in Rome in March. (Leonard & Co.)

Diven, manager of the General Electric company's federal and marine department; Walter Greene, artist, and W. E. Hoffman, General Electric sales engineer, with the painting of the airplane carrier "Saratoga" presented to the naval secretary by the General Electric company. (International)

SWEET SHADES OF NITRE!—Can this be possible? Yes, fair reader; Gene Tunney, champion heavyweight pug, is a man of parts. He plays a mean Italian harp between slugging matches. (Herbert)

ONE HAND IN A MILLION—C. H. Schoff, of Lancaster, Pa., drew 13 spades in a bridge game at St. Petersburg, Fla. Note the grin. He bid four spades and mopped up. (International)

YOUNGEST EXALTED RULER OF ELKS—John P. Graney, 29, of Passaic, N. J., nominated for leadership of his lodge without opposition, holds this distinction in the B. P. O. E. (International)

BACK TO WORK—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh is back on his old job—that of flying the mails. Here he is seen climbing into the cockpit to resume his old route between St. Louis and Chicago. (Associated Press)

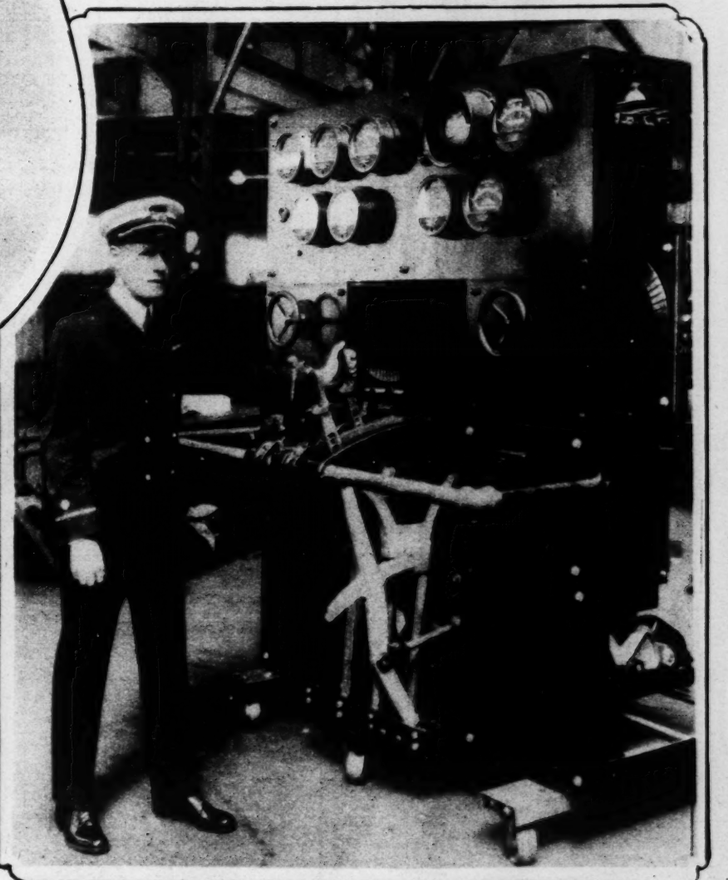

HONORED WITH DEGREE—Colonel D. B. McKay, mayor of Tampa, Fla., and editor of the Tampa Times, has received the honorary degree of doctor of literature at Rollins college. Colonel McKay is one of the outstanding publicists of the south.

ENDS 25-YEAR FEUD WITH ROCKEFELLER—John J. Foley, of Tarrytown, N. Y., has sold to the oil magnate a parcel of land which Rockefeller has wanted for a quarter of a century to complete his estate there. Foley's father engaged in a controversy with Rockefeller about the closing of a road, and the son inherited the fight. (Associated Press)

TO PLAY HERE—Jascha Heifetz, famous violinist, will appear in recital at the auditorium Friday, March 9.

SHIP ENGINE WORK BECOMES WHITE COLLAR JOB—No more oily dungarees for Uncle Sam's new type of first-aid marine ambulances. Five of these all-electrical cutters have been ordered for the coast guard. (International)

ORIENTAL!—One of the novelty costumes seen at Palm Beach. It is an ensemble of rich India print silk. The blouse is of filmy white georgette. (Herbert)

THIS IS A SMALL WORLD—In proof of the fact, when Frank Hecht, New York leather magnate, wished to place a half million dollar order for alpina snakeskin leather, he merely picked up the receiver of his phone and talked with Frankfort-on-Main in Germany. Preparations for the call had been made, and the order took only a few seconds. (Herbert)

Gray Hair

1 You try it first on a single lock of your hair to see what it does. Thus have no fear of results.

2 Then simply comb this water-like liquid through your hair. Clean . . . safe. Takes only 7 or 8 minutes.

3 Arrange hair and watch color gradually creep back. Restoration will be perfect and complete.

Test FREE 1 minute

NO more dangerous "crude dyes." Instead natural shade is called back to hair by clear, colorless liquid 100% safe. Faded, graying streaks disappear. Hair becomes live looking and lustrous. Stays easy to curl. Does not wash off.

This way embodies elements that take place of color pigment and give natural effect. Auburn hair reverts to auburn—black to black. Used by 2,000,000 women.

When will you look old?

WHEN the line of your under-chin begins to droop, when the texture of your throat becomes crepy, or when the little lines about your eyes and mouth deepen into wrinkles—then age is giving its first unmistakable warning.

But with Dorothy Gray's help you can always retain the youthful loveliness of your face and throat. From her long experience in caring for the faces of thousands of women Miss Gray realized that lines and wrinkles, double chin and crepy throat are caused by the loss of healthy, rapid circulation. So she evolved treatments and preparations which cleanse the skin, which keep it supple and smooth, which correct excessive oiliness or dryness. But the basic principle of the Dorothy Gray method is the stimulation of circulation into healthy activity.

The same preparations used in Dorothy Gray's salon treatments—and a booklet describing their use—may be obtained at leading stores.

Banish Fat
in this easy way

All ideas of beauty, style and fitness call for slender figures now. All who seek to please, in movies or society, must banish excess fat.

Note how many do that. In every circle you can see that most folks now are slender. Fat is the exception.

One great reason is Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for 20 years—millions of boxes of them. They have told the results to others. The slender figures now seen everywhere are largely due to that.

No abnormal exercise or diet is required, though moderation helps. The results of Marmola come through supplying a substance which Nature employs in nutrition. Its purpose is to turn food into fuel and energy, rather than into fat. The use is based on wide research and experiment.

Every box of Marmola contains the formula, also the reasons for results. This is to let you know just why it acts and avoid any fear of harm.

Marmola has for two decades held top place in this field. Go learn the reason. Watch what it does for beauty, health and vitality! Then tell your friends who need it. No one can afford to be abnormal when reduction is so easy. Order now—before you forget it.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

Apparently safe with teeth so glistening white YET . . .

WHEN the regular brushing of teeth keeps them as flashing as a pearl, all seems so safe.

Yet . . . there is an insidious foe which ignores the teeth and attacks the gums. Unaware of this fact, 4 persons out of 5 after forty and thousands younger sacrifice precious health. And needlessly too, because this sworn enemy of mankind—Pyorrhea, avoids firm, healthy gums.

So take this precaution: Use a dentifrice that keeps teeth white and also helps to firm gums and keep them healthy.

Daily, every morning and every night, brush teeth and gums with Forhan's for the Gums.

Without the use of harsh abrasives it cleans teeth quickly and helps to restore them to their natural whiteness. It protects them from acids which tend to cause decay.

It is the formula of R. J. Forhan, D. D. S., for many years a Pyorrhea specialist. And it is compounded with Forhan's Pyorrhea Astringent used by dentists in the treatment of Pyorrhetic conditions.

Now take measures that will help to safeguard precious health, beauty and youth against the ruthless attack of Pyorrhea. See your dentist at least twice each year. Have him examine teeth and gums thoroughly. And start using Forhan's for the Gums, morning and night, every day. Teach your children this good habit. They'll thank you in later years. Get Forhan's from your druggist. In tubes, 35c and 60c. Forhan Company, New York.

If gums bleed easily, if they are tender, apply Forhan's. With the index finger vigorously rub with a circular motion the upper gums, both inside and out, until they feel invigorated. Then massage lower gums. Do this regularly and gums will soon become firm and sound.

With your thumb and forefinger massage the gums both inside and out and the roof of the mouth as well. Massage until you feel the pleasant tingle of increased blood circulation.

Your gums should always look like this—even, sound and healthy. Keep them so by exercising them. Twice daily, massage them with Forhan's for the Gums—the dentifrice that safeguards the health of the gums and cleanses teeth.

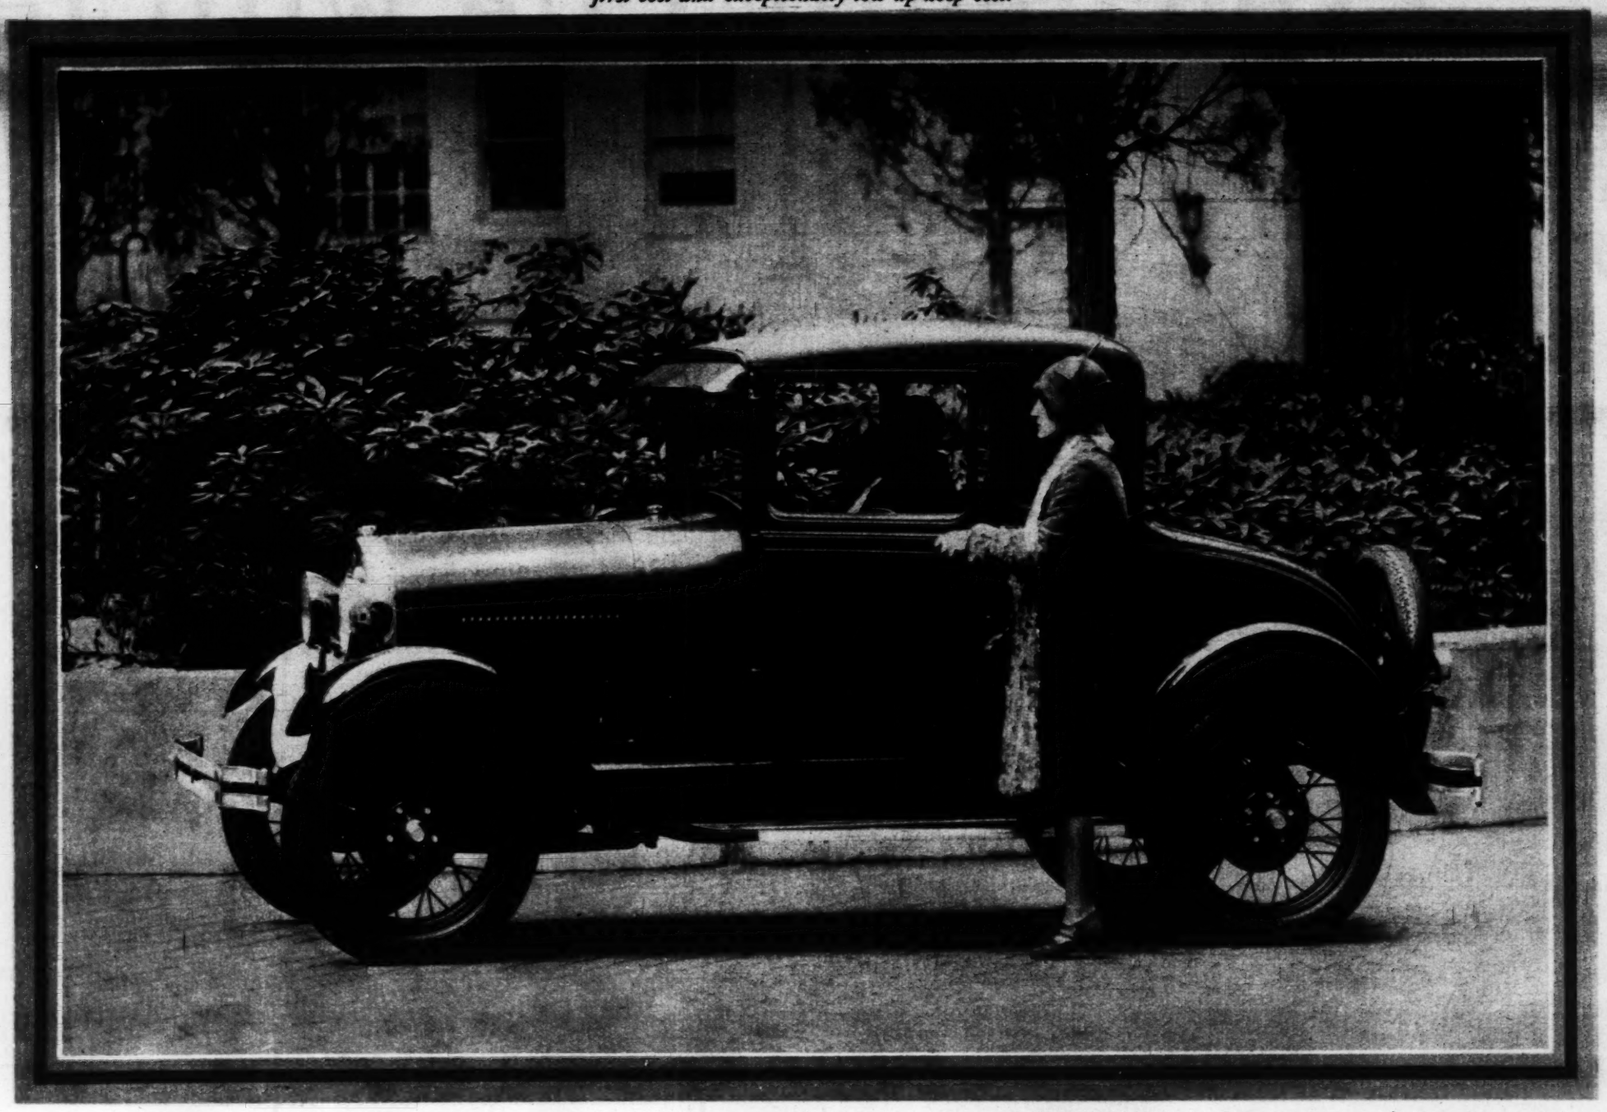

We Were Right. More and more people are realizing the importance of oral hygiene. Every morning and every night, they use Forhan's Antiseptic Refreshant. It protects mouth, nose and throat from infection. It keeps breath sweet and fresh. It is safe, effective and pleasant. Try it.

Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield . . . typical Ford reliability and long life . . . low first cost and exceptionally low up-keep cost.

You ride in complete comfort when you ride in the new Ford car

MANY factors have contributed to the unusual comfort of the new Ford.

First of all, you are comfortable in mind because you are sure of the mechanical performance of this car. You know it has been built to endure—to give you thousands upon thousands of miles of faithful, uninterrupted service.

Physical comfort is yours because of the roominess of all of the new Ford cars, the restful seat cushions set at just the right tilt, the low center of gravity, and the Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers.

But the most important reason for the easy-riding comfort of the new Ford is the low ratio of unsprung weight to sprung weight, due principally to the new transverse springs.

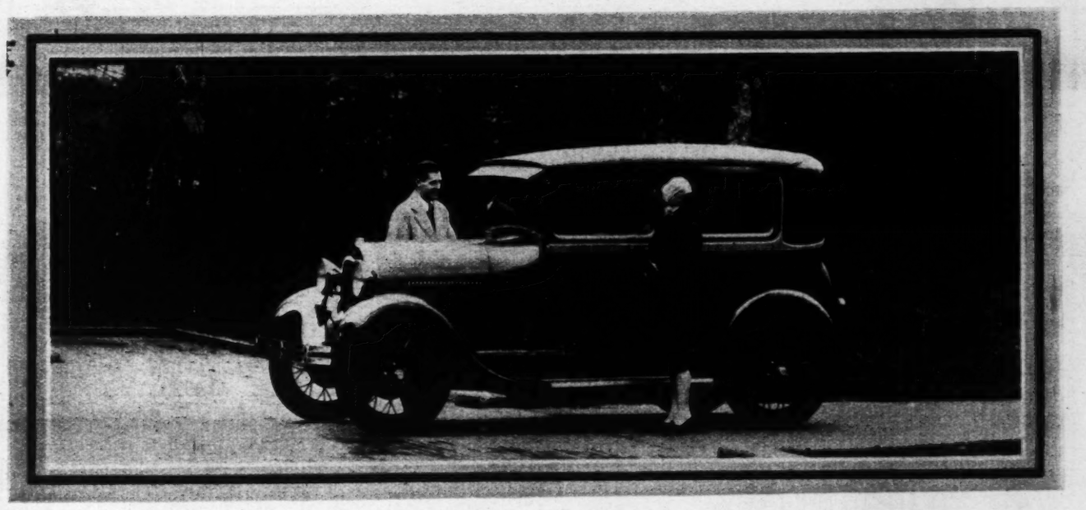

As speedy as it looks is the new Ford Roadster. And so comfortable and easy-riding that even rough roads may be taken at a fast pace.

The riding quality of any car, as you may know, depends to a great extent upon the ratio of the weight carried above the springs (the sprung weight) to the weight carried below the springs (the unsprung weight).

The less the unsprung weight in ratio to the sprung weight, the easier riding the car will be. If the weight below the spring is unusually heavy or out of proportion to that above, it imparts road shocks with greater force, thus lessening riding comfort.

In the transverse type of spring used on the new Ford, but one spring is used on each axle, the spring being bolted to the frame at the center, or heavy part, and suspended from shackles on the axle. By this principle of suspension the weight of the springs becomes part of the sprung weight of the car instead of the unsprung weight.

Road shocks are imparted at the outer flexible end of the spring. The most sensitive part of the spring thus receives the shock first, diminishing the effects of sharp impacts before they reach the sprung weight of the car. Rebound of the springs to such impacts is controlled by the Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers, especially designed for the new Ford car.

Restful riding comfort is an outstanding feature of the new Ford Tudor Sedan. A great family car because of the generous room provided for all five passengers.

These shock absorbers give the spring a free range of action when the car is being driven over smooth highways. There is instant shock-absorbing effect as soon as the car encounters any bump on the road.

Other factors in the low unsprung weight of the new Ford are the construction of the front axle and the new rear axle housing, which is made entirely of steel and is therefore lighter—and stronger—than rear axle housings made of malleable iron castings.

There are definite, understandable reasons, therefore, why the new Ford car is one of the most comfortable cars on the road today.

Prove this for yourself by arranging for a demonstration. Check up on comfort, on speed, on power, on acceleration, on hill climbing, on gasoline economy, on safety, on reliability, on low up-keep cost, and you will know there is nothing quite like the new Ford anywhere in design, quality and price.

The new Ford Roadster sells for $385, the Phaeton for $395, the Tudor Sedan for $495, the Coupe for $495, and the Sport Coupe, including a wide, substantial rumble seat, for $550. (All prices F. O. B. Detroit.)

The Peasants Are the Real Masters of the Russian Situation

From a Painting by Popov — Courtesy of N. Malianoff

RUSSIA Rides a Tiger

By Count Carlo Sforza

Former Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs and Ambassador to France

HISTORICAL situations never repeat themselves. But the more I think about and see of Russia, the more I feel convinced—that in spite of the feigned and real terrors inspired by the great bug-bear word "Bolshevism" — we are simply at "Thermidor" again.

For us today—for those of us who read Taine and Carlyle in a comfor- the end of the Reign of Terror in the history of the French Revolution. But for the Frenchmen who lived when Marat and Robespierre met their natural and fatal ends, "Thermidor did not seem so sunny. Deportations, executions, violence and terrors of every sort went on during 'Thermidor"— and for a relatively long period. The waves are slow to quiet down after a tempest.

What wonder if "Thermidor" is going to be much longer in Russia? In historical events there is a strict relation between time and size. Ten years of revolution in little France may well become fifty years in endless Russia. It is—in parentheses—with this thesis in mind that we find the patience to leave to our grandsons the privilege of assisting at the rebirth of a new China.

That there is going to be a change in Soviet Russia, even superficial observers have begun to suspect in recent weeks which have bfought news of a duel between Stalin and Trotzky, between the men in power and the "pure" in the Opposition.

But do not let ns waste time in studying the Russian polemics of last December and January around the Kremlin, and the subsequent events. The Kremlin was worth studying when it was inhabited by Lenin, or even by Trotzky. The group of men who now dominate Russia are able to retain power only by all kinds of police measures, by exiling their enemies or putting them in prison. Intellectually speaking, they do not awaken the least interest.

In spite of the Red atmosphere, it is the old Russian story that is still going on.

What else did Trotzky try in vain to do, a few weeks ago, when he attacked Stalin and the other men in power, than to repeat what later on, Lenin did to Kerensky.

The only difference, probably, consists in this: that Stalin and his comrades who now govern Russia, are resolved to offer from the Kremlin, a much more serious resistance to any attack than the Czar offered to Kerensky, or later on, Kerensky offered to Lenin. To be in power by chance, and to know that to be out of power means expiation, removes the happy alternative of a resignation. Dictators of this sort are not "in power;" they are simply entrenched in power.

It was probably the knowledge of Stalin's enforced determination to resist attack that, ten weeks age, led men like Zinoviev (the reputed author of the pretended Red letter which won the last British general election for the Conservatives) to show themselves quite willing to eat humble pie in order to get readmitted into the circle of the government's friends.

Was Zenoviev sincere? Or are he and his friends secretly going on plotting—as Russians have it in their blood to do—in the dark mysteries of the famous "Podpolie," the untranslatable word which characterized for decades the secret undermining power in Old Russia? But that question would lead us into the labyrinths of Oriental intrigue, where we could only use guesswork.

Now, if we want to look briefly at the factors of Russian life and Russian evolution, it is better to put to one side the government and the struggles around the government, and simply study this: The present state of mind of the peasants—and their reciprocal force and position. These, and nothing else, are the elements which will sway the future.

What are the relations between the masses of Russian workmen and the Soviet government?

Let us begin by stating the real numerical proportion of the workmen to the rest of the Russian people, on the one side, and to the Communist party, which actually dominates that people, on the other.

The Russian workmen constitute a maximum of 15,000,000 in a total of 130,000,000 Russians, now practically all peasants. The Communist party, which had no more than 30,000 adherents when in 1917 it came to power, actually has grown to 800,000 members. Indeed, it might have increased to millions, as always happens when a country has fallen to such a low level that one may be sure of some measure of personal safety only by being a member of the dominant party. However, the Communist party still has less than 1,000,000 members, but certainly not because of lack of applicants. The reason lies in their traditional respect for an old formula of Lenin's which prescribed "quality, not quantity." Be the quality bad or good, in a communist sense, the fact is that admissions into the party are still relatively slow.

Of the 800,000 members of the Communist party today, only about 350,000 are workmen or ex-workmen, the others being ex-bourgeois, assumed workmen, and, in the lowest portion, peasants.

There are books in America and Europe that describe the privations and sufferings of the Russian workmen. The description is exact, the coloring is not overdone, but the books are false. Why? Because they do not say a word about the real feeling of the workmen, which is still a sort of religious, unshaken faith in Communism.

Let us state the truth as it is. The Russian workmen have—or, to be more exact, they have had, up till now—a profound belief that in spite of tragic deceptions, the Leninist formula, a "proletariat's dictatorship," is the key to the enchanting world of their hopes.

This formula they find repeated everywhere they go in a hundred different forms. At evening meetings, at the new free open-air theaters, at the "movies," they are constantly lulled by the same refrain: "Is it not the Russian proletariat alone that rules the destinies of a great country? Where in the world except in Russia do the bourgeois and ex-bourgeois tremble and bow before a real workman? Where outside of Russia are imperial palaces turned into homes for old workmen?"

The Russian workman does not yet seem tired of such courtly flattery. And, like the old guests of the imperial palaces in the Crimea, now turned into rest houses for old proletarians, he readily listens to the pleasant lullaby. He does not deny that today he is suffering, but he tightens his belt and hopes that tomorrow everything will turn out all right.

There is—and those who are unable to see it are to be pitied—some moral nobility in their thinking and saying, as they often do, that it is for their sons that they wait; that it is their sons who will be happy and free in his life. It is the mystic nature of the Russian soul, with its longing for suffering, that makes this possible. It is with a sort of religious ardor that the working classes of Leningrad and Moscow believe themselves to be the vanguard of a new world, of a happier humanity. When they suffer they find some consolation in thinking that through what they are enduring they advance the blessed days of universal happiness—the happiness of all the slaves and pariahs in the west and in the east.

This feeling may fade; it already is beginning to fade. But to have deliberately ignored it, not to have taken it into account at all, is simply to repeat the errors of the British and the Germans during the French revolution. They believed they could dispose of it with a simple definition—brigands.

It is strange that such a psychological factor should take place in a country where the historical materialism of Marx should be the official truth and that this fact has been denied or not understood in the countries and among peoples where the boast of a richer spiritual life is more frequent.

All the Kremlin schemings for Communist propaganda abroad, from England to China, probably have arisen primarily from the necessity that the Bolshevik leaders feel, for giving some food, some hope, some satisfaction to the religiously expectant troops of the Russian working classes. All this propaganda abroad has brought upon the Russians endless complications and humiliations. At the Kremlin they are shrewd enough to have foreseen all this, but they were obliged to get into trouble, as they did with the Chinese last January, in order to satisfy the workmen.

To satisfy them to the end the Soviet government would have been obliged, when faced by cases like the recent ejection of all Soviet consuls from China to demand apologies, to threaten reparations.

Nothing of the kind has been done. Nothing ever will be done. At most, a few strong diplomatic notes—but these only for home consumption . . . What makes the Russian government feeble and uncertain is that an opposing force faces the workman and places the Kremlin between two antagonistic tendencies. This powerful element, so antithetic to the workman, is—the peasant.

The peasants were "communist" after the revolution; or, to be more exact, they seemed "communist" when it was a question of driving the old proprietors out of their estates. It was a repetition of what has taken place in peasant movements in many countries, from certain ancient revolts in China to the "jacqueries" of old royalist France.

The phenomenon seemed more formidable in Russia only because the peasant movement identified itself—in time and methods—with the Lenin coup. To tell the truth—and his is a point whose meaning has no little importance in the understanding of the Russian revolution—the Russian peasant had begun, even before the advent of Bolshevism, to seize the lands and to slay his baron, frequently to slay him and, in the Russian way, to weep over his at the same time. When Lenin grasped power, he simply put into words what the peasants had already begun to put into deeds. That is why the peasant supported Lenin, but without giving any serious attention to his theories.

The same phenomenon took place when they victoriously opposed the Wrangle and Denekin expeditions—they did not so much obey orders from Moscow as their own instincts, which put them on guard against young White Russian officers, the sons of the land owners they had slain some months before.

On the morrow of the World War I was in Constantinople as High Commissioner. As soon as the Italian officers attached to the general staff of the White Army reported to me that many of the Russian officers had organized small raids upon property that once had belonged to them, hoping to take it away from the sons of their old serfs, I realized at once—and said so to leaders of the Entente—that the White Russian expeditions were doomed to failure.

But even Lenin had his big failure with the peasants.

Thinking himself all-powerful, he cried in a famous speech:

"The peasants ask to be free to sell their grain. This freedom means also the freedom to speculate. Why do they not understand that it is impossible for us to allow that? It would be the end of our revolution. We shall never agree; we would rather die than yield on this essential point."

The peasants said—or, rather, thought—in their turn: "The land is ours but the grain is yours; the meadows are ours, but the hay is yours." They drew their conclusions. The result was the terrible famine which caused the death of so many millions of Russians. Hardly half of the Russian soil had been cultivated.

Lenin had sworn to die rather than to yield. He thought better of it, and he preferred to yield without dying.

Among the peasants—who are the same everywhere—one finds little religious ardor for the new ideas—that religious ardor which still exists so strongly among the workmen. I myself, in Siberia some months ago, heard an old peasant say:

"The Bolsheviki say that we may suffer now, but it is our sons who will be happy. Well, we gained more with our old Pope. He used to tell us that we may suffer now, but that we will be happy in Paradise. It was always a gain for ourselves."

Since Lenin's capitulation to the peasants, they have continued to gain strength. The taxation system has been changed to meet their fancies. They have been acknowledged the proprietors of their houses. The land division has been made according to rules that leave the state only a theoretical right of property; the peasants know that they are now the real masters of their fields. They even become rich; the kulak is already to be found in almost every village; and the kulak is nothing else than the shrewd peasant who hires cheap labor to work his fields, and who usually has a big account at the bank of the neighboring town. The picturesque work, kulak, means "closed fist."

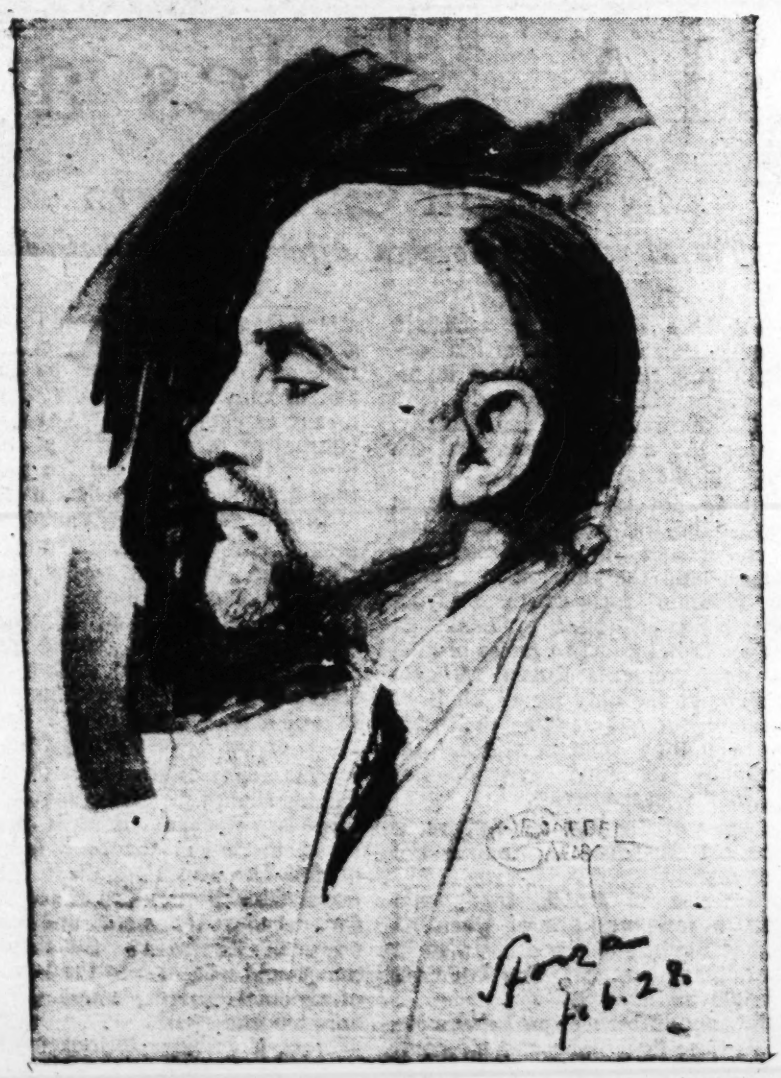

Now that he finds himself master of the land, the peasant is, naturally, much more of a conservative than anything else. The same thing happened in France when the paysans—of whose terrible condition under the ancien regime some striking sketches are preserved in La Bruyere's classical pages—became, with the Revolution, the proprietors of the "Biens Nationaux."

The Moscow theorists bow prudently to this new reality, unpleasant as it is for their dogmas. Recently the "Pravda" explained with a distinguo not unworthy of the finest traditions of the Jesuits, that a peasant still remains "a good member of the Communistic proletariat," even when he employs "temporary" workmen during harvest time. Other Communists go farther, and, at least with more intellectual honesty, admit that the creation of a class of well-off peasants must be favored, as it may constitute the economic backbone of Russia.

Well and good. But Stolypin, the last of the great statesmen of imperial Russia, had this very thing in view, and nothing else. Of course, as always happens everywhere, Stolypin, in his efforts to save Russian society, was always hindered by the very classes which he wanted to save, and which, "conservative" as they style themselves, are so often the best unconscious allies of revolutionary movements.

The leaders of Soviet Russia in order to please the workmen, are now bound to make a noisy show of propagandist zeal abroad, in Europe and in Asia, but probably not in America, where they are too eager to arrange loans. In China, where they have been strong only in appearance (the Chinese simply used them for their own ends, but always mistrusted them) they underwent a definite defeat in January. The Canton Communists were killed by the tens of thousands and all the Soviet agents were expelled. This is the result of the last Bolshevik putsch in China, which was plotted, not because Stalin wished it, but as a move of home policy. In Moscow they wanted a success of which to boast in their congress, so that they might be able to meet Trotzky's violent criticisms. They failed. Even the Russian vice consul was killed in Canton, but the

He Had a Horror of Being Buried Alive, but Because He Loved Her He Took a Long Chance and Followed Her Into the Labyrinths of a Stalactite Cave.

CUTTLE had a horror of going underground.

His dread was a legacy of the war, when he had been buried in a bombed sap. He had since then, avoided as far as possible, even tunnels and tubes.

Yet now, of his own free will, he was on his way to visit a subterranean cave.

Old families and old countries suffer from gout; England's chalky deposits crop out from coast to coast and encrust her spine. The stalactite cavern, to which Cuttle was bound, was hollowed deep in the heart of a mountain, which at one time had been quarried.

Cuttle's host had been enthusiastic about the cave , which he compared to Cheddar, with an unfair bias in favor of his own locality.

"It'll never be opened to the public like Cox's cavern or Cough's cave," he declared, "because it is too inaccessible. But it's well worth a visit. Suppose you folks take off some time today to see it."

It was tennis week at the county town and many of the players were his guests. While the list of fixtures was being consulted, Cuttle stood aloof and admired the clouds. But he pricked up his ears as a girl—Shirley Charles—put a question. "Is it a very strenuous climb? You see, I have a touch of tennis-elbow, and I have got to save myself any strain."

Shirley took herself as seriously as a racehorse on the eve of the Derby. Wimbledon was her Mecca; but her immediate goal was the county championship.

Her host hastened to reassure her.

"Any one of sixty could tackle it with ease. It's a stiffish scramble down at its entrance and the going's a little rough. But there's only one bad bit, and the air —considering all things—is sweet as milk."

"I'm on," declared Shirley.

"I'm off," murmured Cuttle, discreetly withdrawing a few paces.

He was recalled by Shirley's voice.

"The others have got to phone up the secretary of the association. I hate hanging about. Suppose we go on ahead?"

Cuttle forgot his qualms. Before ever he met Shirley in the flesh he had worshiped her on paper. He had a bulging envelope of tennis snapshots, cut from the daily press.

But, as a nonplayer, he had been outside her charmed tennis circle. This was his first opportunity to be alone with her.

"Great idea!" he said fervently.

She walked him at a regrettable pace through the village. It was a heavy day, with a spatter of rain in the breeze. The sky hung low and was the color of a bruise.

"How far is it?" asked Cuttle.

Shirley consulted an envelope, on the back of which their host had drawn a rough plan.

"About a mile and a quarter to the shaft. We follow old workings through to the cave. The general said we couldn't miss it. Wait a minute here!"

She stopped outside the village shop.

"My torch needs a refill," she explained. "We'll buy some candles and then we'll be on the safe side, whatever happens."

Cuttle reflected sadly that she seemed determined to forestall any emergency which might have saved him from the horrors of underground. But, once they were out on the rough paths of the mountainside, he forgot everything but Shirley.

She wore no hat, and the wind blew an enchanting golden cowlick over her eyes. Her cheeks were like ripe apricots. She had radiant youth and health. Better than all this, she was at the top of her form.

Cuttle decided that they were reaching the cave too quickly.

"Do you mind easing up a bit?" he asked, blowing ostentatiously.

"O, sorry I forgot." Shirley's smile was sweet. "I'm in special training. I've even knocked off smoking until after the championship."

Shirley consulted an envelope, on the back of which was drawn a plan.

She slackened her steps to a pace which made conversation possible. Cuttle yearned to exchange views about some of the things which matter; community singing, vitamin B, and survival after death. But Shirley knew a better subject than any of these. Tennis.

Cuttle did his best. He talked of Tilden and Suzanne; of Borotra and Betty Nuthall; but, chiefly, about the local tennis week. And, in particular, the form displayed by that promising young player, Miss Shirley Charles.

"Isn't it thrilling to have the crowd cheering you and asking for your autograph?" he asked.

Shirley tried to look stern.

"Applause shouldn't be allowed. It's apt to put you off your game."

"But, does it?" persisted Cuttle.

"Well, to be frank, it does; but, only when they're cheering your opponent. And I get very tired, sometimes," she added.

Cuttle rejoiced to hear it. He held Shirley the dearest girl on earth; but it was plain that she possessed one grievous fault. Unless it were checked, a man might end in being known as the husband of Miss Shirley Charles.

"Tired of tennis?" he asked hopefully.

"No. Of wearing white. So insipid." She stopped to consult her envelope. "We must be nearly there."

At the reminder, Cuttle felt the working of an internal churn. Their path had led them directly under the brow of the mountain, which hung over them in massive rocks superimposed on raw earth. While Cuttle viewed it with a sinking heart, Shirley ran ahead, with a scream of delight.

"Here!" She stopped before a gash in the ground, which sloped steeply to unseen depths.

"Doesn't it look like the beginning of an adventure?" she asked joyfully.

Cuttle leaned over the side and was met by a whiff of decay, as though the mountain suffered from foul breath.

"Such a lovely earthy smell," declared Shirley. "Makes one think of Pan."

"Pan stuck to the woods, like a sensible chap," dissented Cuttle. "And—if this is the entrance—I've the deepest respect for the age of sixty. But—I'm positive it is not."

Shirley merely consulted her miserable plan.

"Of course it is. It's marked here. O, do let me go first!"

Cuttle saw that there was not be any reprieve, as she leaped into the chasm as nimble as a chamois. He took a last look at the world, lying below him in dark laps of bracken and heather. Then, gritting his teeth, he followed Shirley down the shaft.

The sides were slippery and draped in sappy greenery, which he was positive oozed verdigris within his grip. Worse still, it proved to be of unexpected depth. The slice of livid sky at the top grew narrow and pale as he wormed his way down into twilight gloom. He felt his feet slipping on the base of a slimy rock as he dropped a good five feet down to the bottom.

In the darkness Shirley's torch glimmered like a glowworm. Looking up, he could no longer see his crack of blessed daylight.

"How on earth shall we get up that last bit a gain?" he inquired.

"Pick-a-back," said Shirley. "Isn't it a thrill? Aren't you just loving it?"

Cuttle declared that he loved it. Just.

"And now," he said, "I think we'll pick-a-back up again. This is the wrong hole. Now, please, don't tell me to find a better 'ole! At certain times I abominate humor."

Shirley stood firm. "My dear man, what's all the fuss about? It wasn't half so stiff a scramble down as the general led me to expect. Come on!"

Cuttle saw that she had not turned a hair. She seemed endowed with points of India rubber and unpuncturable wind. So he cursed himself for a club footed craven, as he stumbled after her, along the bed of a miniature moraine. However, he had one ray of light in his darkness, for it was evident that Shirley had accepted him.

"I'm glad we two got off alone," she said, frankly. "In conversation, we make quite a good doubles, don't we? We seem to think alike."

"About tennis," observed Cuttle bleakly.

"Yes. But, competition play apart, you play tennis, of course?"

"I'm only a rabbit," confessed Cuttle.

He could guess that he had shocked her, although her voice remained kind.

"I expect golf is your game?"

"I potter round and take my eye off the ball."

"O! Then, what is your special line?"

"The line of mediocrity."

Shirley discreetly changed his subject.

"Let me get my bearings!" she said. "We keep on turning to the left. In that case, we go down here."

She pointed to a cutting in the rocks.

As Cuttle looked through the narrow aperture, he felt his old horror of underground suddenly weigh down on him, like actual stricture. The back of his neck began to ache slightly, as though a heavy hand were forcing down his head.

"Nonsense!" he objected. "We keep on down the cave."

"But I can see the end of the cave," declared Shirley triumphantly. "So this must be the way. But if you prefer it, we'll wait for the others."

Cuttle reminded himself that Fate had given him this hour. By the afternoon he would be again outside

Shirley's circle, straining his ears to catch the magic sounds of "cross-cut, volley and chop."

"It's not a pleasant spot to hang round in," he said. "We'd better go on."

The gallery was so narrow that they were forced to walk in single file. But it seemed lofty, although an occasional drop fell from its unseen roof. This moisture was responsible for a cold dead odor, as of stagnant water.

Cuttle tried to take as shallow breaths as possible, with the result that an invisible finger began to tickle his throat.

"Talking about the electric hare—" he began hurriedly. "What do you think——"

"Why are you coughing?" interrupted Shirley.

"This air. It strikes me as foul."

"But the general said it was sweet as milk."

"I never did have any opinion of milk," commented Cuttle, beginning to whistle "The Frothblowers' Anthem."

"Yet milk," said Shirley, "gave you your first start in life and made you the man you are today."

Cuttle followed the glowworm glimmer of her torch in silence. Presently, he spoke.

"I don't quite like that remark, because I've an idea that you don't think me quite the world's model for a man."

"Shirley laughed. "Don't be silly! Your only trouble is you've far too much imagination. Now, I cough just like you, before a match. It's just nerves."

Before Cuttle could reply they were startled by a low, sullen boom as of an explosion. It grew louder, throbbing through the narrow passage in a savage roar, like the stamping of a vast machine.

Cuttle's heart dropped a beat. He had a vision of a monstrous slice of the mountain peeling itself off and sealing their entrance shaft with hundreds of tons of earth.

"What is it?" asked Shirley.

"Sounds rather like a landslip," he replied. "I think we'd bette r go back, just to see if the—the road is clear outside."

Shirley shook her head, as a second boom followed on the echoes of the last.

"Why, it's thunder! Now, I do call that luck to be out of the rain!"

Remembering the livid sky, Cuttle knew that she was right. But his nerve had definitely crashed, and he followed her with the uneasy sensation that every step brought them still farther from the safety of their base.

Although he made no further protest, he had hardly gone a few yards down the next passage when he recognized that he was in the grip of his old enemy — claustrophobia. The roof was so low that they had to stoop.

Cuttle felt as though the mountain itself was pressing down on his head. The ache at the back of his neck grew almost intolerable, while the air seemed to have thickened and to be clotted with the taint of decay. In his efforts not to breathe, his throat was sanded.

He fought his sensations desperately, as he remembered Shirley's charge of nerves. This was merely the aftermath of his experience in the bombed sap. They had the general's assurance that the air was technically pure.

As he realized this fact, he was conscious of relief. He reminded himself that there was a time limit to everything. Moreover, his sufferings were not comparable with his gain, if he could only subdue his reactions to the discomfort of underground. It was plain that Shirley liked him: the end of the morning might find them closer friends.

Suddenly he burst out laughing.

"O, I'm so glad you're liking it, at last," cried Shirley. "I thought you were horribly bored."

"You see," explained Cuttle, "I'm not used to pleasure. I'm one of the world's workers. I make marmalade."

"Of course," Shirley reflected. "'Cuttle's Crystal Cut.' I never connected it with you. Jolly good marmalade, too."

"Excellent. If you'll put that into writing, enclosing your signed photograph for publication, I am prepared to send you a whole pot, gratis. I spare no expense in advertisement."

"If you'd really like my photograph," said Shirley, "I'll give you one, in memory of this morning. Oo! My back is aching from stooping. Is yours?"

"No."

Cuttle spoke with truth. Every shred of discomfort had vanished at the prospect of Shirley's gift.

But his jubilation was of short duration. It vanished abruptly as Shirley dropped to her knees before an aperture, not much lighter than the entrance to a dog kennel.

"Here comes the general's bad bit," she announced cheerfully. "It's evidently a working of the old chalk quarry. Come on! This is most exciting!"

Before Cuttle could protest, she had crawled through the hole. Although she managed to hold her torch in her left hand, she blocked its light, leaving Cuttle in darkness.

In a panic he struck a match. All he could see was a long silk stocking, grievously laddered, and a rubber sole.

His every fiber rebelled as he crept after her. It was exactly like one of his recurrent nightmares of being buried alive, when he awoke sweating and fighting his bedclothes.

The cutting was practically dark and very hot. He seemed again to be eating mouthfuls of curdled air. They stuck in his throat and made him choke. He tried not to cough and felt his heart protest in violent thumps. Lastly, his brow grew damply chill and he heard an ominous singing in his ears.

With a shock of positive fear, he realized that he was on the verge of a faint. He fought the sensation with every ounce of his strength. While he cursed himself for his insensate folly in going on an expedition for which he was unfitted—both temperamentally and physically, he reminded himself that he was merely the victim of his nerves. If he let them conquer him, he had lost his chance with Shirley forever.

He pictured her plight at finding herself entombed in a burrow with an unconscious man. She could neither extricate him nor minister to him. She would never forgive him.

He told himself that this torture was worse than the agony of the bombed sap. After all, death exacts no ceremony; one can meet it as Nature in the raw, and feel no shame. But, now, he had to remember that he was an English gentleman and a public schoolboy, and all the beastly things which he was not; that he made marmalade; and—worst of all—that Shirley was billed to appear at 3:30 p. m. on the central court that afternoon.

Then he thought of the miners who had lain here, on their backs, all day, picking away at this very cutting; who took the job in their stride and never lost their joy in beer. Recalled by their heroism, his own manhood oozed back.

Shirley's voice broke through the buzzing of the bees which had hived inside his head.

"I'm through!"

In another second he was standing erect and wiping his brow.

"Picture of a camel after going through the eye of a needle," he remarked. "If that's the general's idea of light exercise for a man of sixty, I'll remain young."

Unluckily, Shirley detected his pallor.

"You look ghastly! Are you all right?"

"Quite. But it's rather hot. If you don't mind, I'll shed something."

He felt distinctly easier without his pull-over, which he tucked under one armpit. He reminded himself that, after all, his gallant miners worked, more or less, in the buff. With a fresh interest he examined his surroundings.

They were in what appeared to be a gigantic fissure in the mountain—rather like human flies in a crack. The walls on either side, dripped with moisture and he could hear subterranean gurgling. Although the roof was lost in shadows, he had the comforting idea that the chimney might open to the sky.

He followed Shirley with renewed confidence.

"These drippings suggest we are near the stalactite cave," he remarked.

"I've never been in one," confessed Shirley. "That's why I'm keen on this. What are the stalactites like?"

"O, bunches of carrots and bits of drapery, and such-like. Requires an effort of magination, to my mind."

"Then you are qualified as a guide."

Cuttle looked at her quickly, with a sense of guilt, as though she had actually witnessed his agony in the burrow.

"My imagination tells me that we shall turn into stalactites ourselves, if we stay here," he said. "What's the matter?"

Shirley was shaking with laughter. She turned to him, her eyes brimming with mirth.

"I've just been looking at the chart, and I find I took the wrong turning. That bit we crawled through was a little extra I threw in. Awful confession. But we're straight again and this is the general's bad bit!"

She pointed to a break in the path, where the rock narrowed to a ledge about a foot wide, above a deep cavity. It extended for about two yards and could be crossed with ease by any one who possessed a good head.

Although Shirley went over like a lamp lighter, Cuttle followed closely behind her, in case of mishap. Near its end, she leaned over the gap.

"Coo!" she cried, "I believe it goes down for miles. I can't see the bottom and there's ever such a wind blowing up!"

She broke off with a cry, as her foot slipped on the ledge. Leaning forward too far for safety, she had lost her balance. But, even as she staggered, Cuttle's arm shot out and he dragged her across to safety. As he did so, the pullover which he was carrying, fell into the depths. They could follow its passage by the magnificent rattling of dislodged pebbles, rebounding against the rocks.

After an interval, there was a distant splash.

"In another hundred years or so, there'll be the stalactite of a pull-over," said Cuttle. "Most instructive for the Boy Scout who finds it."

But Shirley did not laugh.

"It might have been me!" she said.

Cuttle saw that she was badly shaken by the incident. Her cheeks no longer looked like ripe apricots. When they left the fissure to follow another cutting through the clay, he forgot his own discomfort in his concern for her.

"I'm feeling quite rotten," she said, suddenly. "I'm sure this air is septic."

"Sweet as milk," he assured her. "Proof. It's not knocked me out."

"But you're a man."

"And you're a tennis champion."

"Not yet."

"No. Next week."

Cuttle felt that his own shadow must be standing by, laughing at the ironic twist to the situation, as he strove to interest Shirley in the supreme topic of tennis. He succeeded to a certain impersonal extent. She stopped him in the middle of his description of a Wimbledon final.

"Where are those candles? This torch is nearly done."

She recovered some of her complacency when Cuttle drew the bulky parcel from his trousers pocket.

"Lucky I thought of it, or we'd have been in the soup," she said, producing her matches.

There were but three in the box; one was already spent, and the heads of the other two blew off directly they were struck.

"That's the worst of cheap foreign matches," remarked Shirley. "Where are yours?"

Cuttle put his hand in his trousers pocket.

"Hurry up!" called Shirley. "The light's nearly gone!"

He tried the other pocket.

"I know you've got a full box," said Shirley, "for I saw them."

"Only give me time!" urged Cuttle.

He patted the breast pocket of his shirt with fingers which were clay cold. He knew that he had carried matches. And he knew where he had put them.

Shirley remembered, too.

"They were in the pocket of your pull-over," she said. "Your pull-over—O!"

She clapped her hand to her mouth to suppress a scream. Dimly, Cuttle saw her face—white as ashes, with a damp golden cowlick clinging to her forehead. Then—the light went out.

"That's done it!" said Shirley, beginning to laugh.

It was shaky laughter—several degrees more tremulous than tears. But it made Cuttle realize that an exhibition court may prove a valuable training ground, after all.

"What's the next move?" asked Shirley, taking great pains with her voice.

"Masterly inaction," replied Cuttle. "The others will soon be here. We've only to wait for them."

"Wait—in the dark?"

"It won't be long."

"But they may decide not to come."

Cuttle had already thought along these lines. He saw so many possibilities—each with power to petrify his brain—that, already, he was trying not to think.

"In that case," he said, "they'll certainly send out a search party for us."

"Of course. Let's sit down and be comfortable!"

Her words were a mockery. The darkness was like an enemy which had already struck home, drugging their faculties.

Cuttle was blind, with no third eye to guide him. His ears were beginning to betray him, for he located

WITHOUT A SUCCESSOR

Lord Asquith's Death in England Marked the Passing of a Generation. He Was the Last of the Old School—But His Memory Will Live On.

BY J. RAMSAY MACDONALD
Former Prime Minister of Great Britain

EVERY one in England feels today that the death of the Earl of Oxford and Asquith has severed the link binding us to the past. It is not only a man who has gone; but a generation. For Lord Asquith has left no successor. We are now men.

He stood for the type of public servant and party leader which the swirling tides and hectic business of our time have discarded. He never yielded to the mad pace which our public life has assumed, to its sleepless agitations and never ending concerns which have invaded the repose of the mind and the leisure of work. He belonged to the days when our statesmen drank port and read the classics in their proper tongues and spent their week-ends in leisurely fashion and spoke in rounded, sonorous periods.

I had been in the House of Commons with him since 1906, and with the exception of one Home Rule issue and its consequent Parliamentary moves—like the Parliament act—I rarely agreed with him. Only once did I sit by his side. That was when the opposition was divided between the Liberals and ourselves in the short Parliament of 1923.

But there was a bigness about the man which made strong political differences appear insignificant and which always commanded homage and respect. His mighty intellect seemed cold and formal. One's heart was never warmed at its fires. But his steadied head and invigorated solid faculties divided the truth from error and clothed his thoughts and arguments in diction of Roman demeanor.

Asking myself now what it was that marked him out among our public men, and reviewing the years I have been with him for an answer, there can be no doubt about the reply. It was the dignity of his mind.

They say—and, indeed, facts prove it—that those who were admitted to the privacy of his life were bound to him by loyalties that defied both time and fortune. His wealth of conversation, his good humor, his genial humanity that dwelt beneath the mask he wore, his easy-going tolerance, his catholicity, made him one of those rare beings—a genial and enduring friend. He was a shy man, however, a man whose doors were not wide open to any one who cared to enter them—a man who was not one of those "hail fellow, well met" creatures, whose smile means nothing and whose hand is no bond. He was ever a man who met strangers with a chilling greeting that frequently seemed like a rough growl or a snap. And as a result few came to sit on his easy chairs where, amid the whirling smoke, they could find and enjoy the real man.

One night I sat beside him at the table of a rich young man whom he had taken to his bosom. It had been a troublesome day for him in the House of Commons. Mr. Andrew Bonar Law had been rudely insulting. It was at the time of the Parliament bill. I saw that he was disturbed, but not one word of what had happened crossed his lips. One would have thought he was a pleasant man of the world, without a care ruffing his mind. Often have I wondered why it was that the man who revealed himself to me that night was so little known among those who shared his Parliamentary life, who fought with him in his daily battles.

For, indeed, like all men who cared for the joys of the cultured life, who live in tradition and who value the spacious, sonorous harmonies, he was what it called a man of the world, whose eye sparkled with a merry, knowing twinkle, and whose laugh revealed the deep wells of enjoyment within.

But in public he was apart. He often went through the division lobbies without turning to the right or to the left. With a short, rapid step, he went down the corridors without a glance of recognition. In the House of Commons itself, he gave the impression of a mountain standing alone, high over the surrounding hills, and holding communion not with them, but with the stars—or perhaps with himself.

There are two kinds of magical oratory. There is the sparkling gush of thought and feeling upon which the lights of imagination and emotion flash and play. That type overwhelms with its force, blinds by its brilliance. But that was not his kind of oratory. His was the slow-moving, majestic mass that flows in a steady, impervious flood without a ripple upon its surface. Sometimes it was formal, sometimes it was dead, sometimes we speculated, as it rolled along, what would be the second or third adjective or adverb he would string to his substantive verbs. But the next morning it read like a piece of pure, finished literature. If he didn't always speak well, he always read well. The speeches — certainly parts of them——which he made in the early days of the war are worthy of being placed alongside the best ever spoken by an Athenian tongue.

His argument was always a structure, never a formless heap of reasons. He built up his case line upon line, precept upon precept—and when it was finished it was fair to look upon. In that controversy of the Titans which raged around protection between 1904 and 1906, his protection was easily the most destructive. The light nature of Mr. Winston Churchill George gave life and popular interest to the conflict, but Mr. Asquith gave forth the heavy, smashing metal that shattered the foundations, the politics and the economics of the Tariff Reform League.

He was a leader who did not court cheering popularity, but who was rewarded with well established confidence who cared little for the publicity or the rewards of demagogy, but who cared for solid work firmly done, who lived in, not upon, the surface of things. He did not enjoy the lust of battle. He fought because he had to fight. But when he went into battle he went through it sturdily. He was not nimble; he was slow. But you knew where he was. And therefore he was not always a successful leader. Lighter qualities in public life not infrequently got the better of him and at last he had to lay down his staff of authority and retire to the House of Lords and to the lawns along the banks of the Thames at Sutton Courtney. There he taught us the dignity and beauty of a calm mind sheltered by its own self respect from the blurting, noisy winds that blew strong.

When he entered politics he belonged to the radical school of social reformers. The first tinge of socialism was appearing like a flush of pink INSTALLMENT IX.

ON, through the neat, checkerboard fields of Bengal, with fleeting glimpses of half-naked natives tilling the ground and patient buffaloes turning the water wheels, and once in a while a bulbous, shimmering temple dome seen vaguely through the delicate tracery of the tamarisk trees. On, through a day and a night and again a day and a night, the train rolling between silvery, rush-tipped hillocks, and fantastic, red-granite mountains tearing the far horizon with twisted peaks; through a motley land, a bewildering land of too much color, of impossible splendor, of sudden, useless beauty—and sudden, useless ugliness; through the Central Indian plateau that was yellow and sad with a great, brittle heat, with a sharp edged disc of a sun that painted the plains in exaggeratedly contrasting shades, touching the tortured branches of the dwarf acacias and the fantastic spires of temples and mosques with points of dazzling gold, steeping the splotches that seemed like bottomless bases of the rocks with inky black hollows, weaving over everything a crooked, shifting pattern of intolerable crimson and orange.

Still on—passing here and there through the reek and riot of some upcountry town where half the races of Asia jostled each other in the narrow streets. New and exciting and picaresque to Prince Tamerlanoff and L'Hommedieu. But to Lord Carmyon, from his former residence in India, a twicetold tale nor a very interesting one . . . he knew it all, yawned at it all; from the sudden rush of flaming splendor to the thick, stinking layer of cruelty and superstition and ignorance that stews and oozes beneath the colorful surface; from the Rajput gentleman's stately widow who mounts the blazing funeral pyre in spite of British laws, to the meanest half-caste money lender who devils the souls and depletes the purses of sporting subalterns amid the flowering peepul trees; from the most westernized oriental sinning the sins of London and Paris, to the most easternized occidental sinning those of Bombay and Hyderabad.

So Lord Carmyon was slightly bored while the train puffed on; skirting a wedge of jungle that lay across the land like a carelessly flung scarf; rolling over a stretch of ochre loam covered with billows of chalk rock mantled by a filmlike spray of sand which twisted and twirled in the fiery wind—and then, on the third day, due to an accident farther up the line, a four-hour wait at a small desert station that consisted of a chaotic whirlwind of stabbing, minute quartz grains, nine red-necked vultures squatting in a row on a low wall and making unseemly noises, and a tumble-down Vishnavite shrine. And it was here—with the sand making their eyes water and their throats rasp, with the vultures cawing stridently in their ears, the smell of dust and refuse and soft coal in their nostrils, and a few feet away the fakir in charge of the shrine diligently scratching his naked, hairy, dirt-caked hide—it was here that Lord Carmyon and the young sultana told each other how dear she was to him and he to her.

Can you picture it?

The drifting, biting sand grains.

The nine red-necked vultures—though ordinary vultures without red necks would have been bad enough.

The dirty fakir, half-mad, mumbling his fanatical incantation to incredible gods:

"Ram! Ram! Kali! Kali! Kajar kaloti ujjar dhot. Pani de, pani de! Ram! Ram! Kali—"

The dust.

The refuse.

The choking black coal smoke.

Can you imagine a less romantic, a more discouraging milieu for a love scene?

Neither David Belasco nor D. W. Griffith would have permitted such a milieu for any of their heroes or heroines. They would have insisted on some delightful stage setting: month of May, of course, or just possibly June; baby-pink clouds in a baby-blue sky; a slice of sentimental moon regardless of the time of day; background of rare flowers piled up in an exquisite though rather intemperate design . . . and take away those cawing vultures, that mumbling fakir, and have the orchestra play a soft, dreamy waltz.

Hey, there—professor—let's hear that new Viennese tune!

And say—Bill—let's have a bit more moon!

Romance—if you please—and lots of it!

Right!

Let's go!

But then it is a debatable point if Lord Carmyon and Sultana Evelyn had ever heard of David Belasco or D. W. Griffith. Too, even supposing they had heard of them, they might have differed as to the correct interpretation of romance.

After all, they were young. And, being young, they were wise. And, being wise, they knew that romance is a living thing, a thing of the soul, not a dead thing, a thing of meticulous stagecraft.

At all events, that's how it was.

Lord Carmyon had had no chance since leaving Calcutta of speaking to Evelyn. Now he saw her standing on the station platform, alone for a moment, since Gul-dur-Burran had returned to the railway compartment for some pillows.

He walked up to her. She was such a charming little figure in her rose-red Hindu dress embroidered with seed pearls and bordered with purple and gold, and her small face blurred by the thin-meshed veil with only the eyes showing above it—and first they talked about the weather.

"Beastly hot, isn't it?"

"Oh, yes. Frightfully hot."

"Think it'll rain?"

"O, I don't know."

"I wish it would."

"So do I."

"Much hotter here than in Calcutta.'"

"You think so?"

"O, yes. Although I don't mind the heat as much as the humidity."

"That's just what I think."

"Regular heat. Grownup heat. Heat with a beard on it."

A remark which made her laugh.

A laugh which, quite logically, made him say:

"I like the way you laugh."

"Do you really?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Because—O—it's so jolly—it ripples so and"—no logical sequence here at all—"it encourages me."

"To do what?" she asked.

"To beg you to forgive me."

"For what?"

"The other day—at Shukri Ali's—you were so angry at me."

"O, no!"

"You were—you told me that—"

"I don't even remember," she interrupted.

"So I must have forgiven you long ago."

"That's because you are generous—and fine—"

"So are you."

"O—please . . ." embarrassedly.

"You are, Freddie." Then, seeing the light eddying up in his eyes as, for the first time, she used his Christian name, she added: "Why don't you call me Evelyn?"

"May I—really?"

"You ought to, Freddie!"

Silently, to herself, she commented: "Such a perversely shy young man! Here I have to do all the ice breaking—which isn't proper for a girl. But—you wait, Freddie! I'll make you tell me that you love me if I have to shake the words out of you one by one."

She repeated:

"Yes. You ought to. Don't you want to?"

"Well—you are a Sultana—"

"Not right now. Right now I'm supposed to be the Maharanee of Bundalpore—and you're supposed to be my cousin—at least according to the passports Shukri Ali got for us . . . and cousins shouldn't be so formal, should they?"

"That's right," he admitted.

"That's right—who? Smith—am I? Or perhaps Brown? Or—?"

"Evelyn. I must get used to your first name."

"That's a fib," she thought. "I wager you think of me by my first name . . . and I wager, too, you think of me a whole lot. You're just stubborn."

Aloud she went on:

"Yes. You were so generous and fine and splendid—so—oh how shall I say it?—medieval, I fancy—the first time we met, at the British embassy in Paris, when you noticed I was worried and unhappy, before you had an idea who I was and what it was all about . . . you spoke to me of high chivalry. You offered—you offered to tilt a lance for my sake, to do grand and glittering deeds of valor. Tell me, Freddie, dear—why were you willing to do all those glorious things for a girl whose very name was unknown to you?"

"Because—" He slurred: was silent.

"Go on!" she insisted.

"Because—oh—"

Again he was silent; again she insisted:

"Go on, go on!" And, maliciously, she added: "Of course, if it's a habit of yours to talk like that to every young girl the very first time you meet her—"

"Nothing of the sort!" he interrupted.

And she smiled triumphantly as, the words coming helter-skelter, he exclaimed roughly:

"Damn it all—if you must know—I loved you—I fell in love with you the moment I saw you."

"I suppose I ought to reply: 'How absurd! Love at first sight doesn't exist!' But I know better, Freddie. For, I, too, loved you—the moment I saw you."

Then a very queer thing happened to them.

They stared at each other. They were silent. And, as silently they stared, it seemed to them as if, suddenly, they were quite alone in the world.

There was no desert. There was no puffing, waiting train; no cawing, red-necked vultures; no mumbling, naked, fanatical fakir. There was no sky. There was no sun. There was only he and she. Only a man and a woman. And there was God.

Then, so lightly, her hand brushed his, and a shiver ran through his veins like a network, immensely delicate and immensely strong, of a million feathery touches. And when finally she spoke—just two words: "O Freddie!"—that haunting, small voice of her's dived straight to the core of his life, and then he heard his own voice speaking words that were tremendously, fantastically un-English:

"There is a song for you in my heart, dear. I know the verses—but I cannot speak them. My soul is lilting the very tune—but I cannot sing it. My love is so great that it chokes me."

She gave a little laugh.

"Freddie," she wispered, "I used to think of you as a bold, swashbuckling soldier. And now I'm afraid you're a poet."

"Can't I be both? Did not the troubadours fight as well as rhyme? A lute in my left hand—a sword in my right—"

"Never mind the sword, dear. Tell me how much you love me!"

So they walked up and down the station platform, talking, talking, talking; and the consequence was that, an hour or two later when the train was again on its way, Lord Carmyon lied shamelessly in answer to Tamerlanoff's and L'Hommedieu's rather ironic questions what on earth he and the young Sultana had been gossiping about so intensely and secretively.

"O," he replied, "mostly military things, dealing with our coming campaign in Kivastan . . . also some financial matters—" and he improvised superbly.

Perhaps they believed him: perhaps not.

But there is no doubt that Gul-dur-Burram, having received a similar explanation to a similar query, did not believe her mistress at all. She did not say so in so many words. But suddenly, for no evident reason, she exclaimed:

"Once I, too, loved and was loved. Hai—tall he was and very strong and as handsome as the moon on the fourteenth day. A warrior he was—a Tartar of Tartars—ah—so cruel . . . but never cruel to me. And sing he could to charm the birds from the trees . . . ah—listen, heart of my heart—here is the song he used to sing to me—when he was young—and I was young—and never a hurt in my soul—"

And quite sweetly, for all her age cracked voice, she thrilled an ancient Tartar melody:

"In the pagoda of exquisite purity
I hear each day the tinkle-tinkle
Of my lost love's jade girdle gems.
Looking from the carved, broad window
Of the pagoda of exquisite purity,
I see the unsullied waters of my grief
Flow on in bleak undulation.
I see a stray cloud of my Mongol home land
Above the spire of the pagoda of exquisite purity,
And the wild geese of Tartary
Flying over the river dunes.
In the pagoda of exquisite purity
My heart sighs—sighs for the white jade moon
Above the Tartar steppes . . ."

A day and a half later they arrived at Peshawar, just as morning came out of the east with the young sun gilding the carved struts of Kabul gate, spiking a crimson diadem across the snowy face of the lower Himalayas, shooting a glimmering, yellow wedge of light down the length of the Khybar pass, straight into the stony entrails of Afghanistan.

At the station they were met by an elderly Rajput who introduced himself as Mohindar Singh, Shukri Ali's confidential agent. He told them that Sir Richard Warburton, governor of the northwest frontier province and warden of the Khybar, would sign tomorrow their permits to cross the pass into the north. For the Khybar pass is the only way from India to Afghanistan. It is jealously watched by the British, whose soldiers, men of the Khybar Rifles and diminutive, red-faced Goorkhas in bottle-green uniforms, squat on every hilltop and behind every rock and tree, rifles always cocked, fingers always on triggers, shoot first and inquire afterwards, and nobody allowed to set foot on the pass without permit duly signed and countersigned and sharply scrutinized by British officers a dozen or more times duing the few miles from the entrance of the Khybar to the Afghan frontier. To both sides of the pass tower the Himalayas—tower dizzily, enormously, overwhelmingly—with sheer, wind swept granite walls that give no footholds to beast or man.

The Khybar pass receives much less publicity than the Prince of Wales. Yet it is considerably more important to Great Britain than his royal highness. Indeed, should the English be forced to choose between the two they would not hesitate.

They would say:

"Help yourself to the prince. Take Australia and Queen Mary for good measure and the London Tower and . . . you care for half a dozen first class battle cruisers? Very well. Take them, too. But leave us the Khybar."

For those few rugged, bleak miles are a pistol aimed straight at the heart of India—a pistol that means safety to the British as long as it is in their hands, and catastrophe were they to relinquish it for a single moment; with Russia squatting up there in the north, beyond the Himalayas—the same old Russia, be it tsarist or bolshevist—immense, grim, sardonically sure of its ultimate destiny—waiting for the day when its armed hordes, Slavs and Tartars, Kirgiz and Turkomans, shall pour through the Khybar to the conquest of India.

And England without India—what would it be?

No longer a proud empire. But just a tight little parochial island, occupied with cricket and football and the small beer of local politics and inter-denominational quarrels.

"The Khybar tomorrow," said Mohindar Singh to the young sultana as he led her to a waiting carriage. "Everything is ready—horses, camels, guides, servants, tents. In the meantime, my humble house is yours."

So they drove through the turbulent border town; though the whirling, choking dust that rose in clouds from the dirty streets; past crowds of ruffianly, swaggering, fur capped border Pathans; to Mohindar Singh's house, which was on the outskirts of Pashawar, not far from Fort Jamrud.

There, in a large pavilion in their host's garden, tiffin was served—the coarse, unappetizing food of the north, stringy, tough mutton stewed in honey and seasoned with asafoetida, leather slabs of bread, sticky sweetmeats, muddy coffee, unripe melons; food that made L'Hommedieu homesick for the sauces and condiments of his native land, but that was thoroughly relished by the Asiatics, chiefly by the seven rogues who squatted on the ground, sleeves rolled up, hands dipped wrist deep into the stew pots, ejaculating grateful, heartfelt bismillah's and Allah ke Quoodrut's, eating and drinking with loud, smacking, gargling noises, after the primitive, unmannerly habit of their breed.

"Mon Dieu," commented the Gascon. "They eat most in d flat. Here!" offering a mutton bone to one of the four Afridi brothers and speaking in French, which, perhaps luckily for him, the other did not understand. "Play the Marseillaise on this, my little assassin!"

Lord Carmyon—for such is the way of romantic young men who are in love—hardly knew what he was eating. He only knew that there was a great happiness in his heart, and the garden was lovely, with a pleasant, soft rumor of spring, and sappy, green shoots thrusting through the mellingtonia bushes that fringed it toward the road, and a brook cutting across it with the sobbing lilt that is in a man's dreams when he is far from home, and gold dusting the willows—peace and spring—

He interrupted his thoughts.

Peace not for long—he said to himself.

The Khybar tomorrow. Afghanistan. The north. Central Asia. Kivastan.

Then war.

War not of trenches and gas and stinking chemicals. But war of Asia. War almost medieval. War of glittering, naked blades and galloping horses and the hollow, nasal beat of Tartar kettledrums.

War for the sake of a queen's narrow hands!

Such a pretty queen—

He looked at her.

His eyes said:

"I love you!"

Her eyes replied:

"Then tell me the real reason."

"And I love you!"

He rose, walked in back of her under pretext of filling her coffee cup; whispered:

"I am jealous, dear—jealous of all the years when I did not know you."

She whispered back:

"I've always known you—in this life—and in all my past lives."

And heaven knows what sentimental foolishness he was going to murmur in answer when, just then, trouble came with a bearded Uzbek's peaked, black turban showing above the bushes, and his voice exclaiming shrilly:

"Mohindar Singh! Wah—pumah-i-Khoda! Mohindar Singh-jee!"

The rajput approached the newcomer.

"What is it, Fazil Khan?" he demanded: and then, when the other had delivered his message in guttural undertones, he threw up his hands and appealed excitedly, despairingly, to the deities: "Ai Bhugwan! Ai Narayoon! Ai Sitaram!"

He returned to the pavilion and explained what had happened:

"The maharanee arrives here in the morning."

"Maharanee?" echoed Prince Tamerlanoff. "Which maharanee?"

"The Maharanee of Bundalpore."

"O," cried Evelyn—"you mean—?"

"Yes. The real Maharanee of Bundalpore, the one in whose name your passport was forged—in whose name we have applied for a permit to cross the Khybar. She telegraphed to Warburton saheb, the governor here—telegraphed from Quetta—must have left there already—"

"How did you find out?" interrupted Lord Carmyon.

"Fazil Khan is the chief operator at the local telegraph office. He is—O"—hesitating a little—"one of Shukri Ali's friends—"

"Another thugee, I wager," commented the Englishman in his thoughts as he remembered the statue of Doorga in Shukri Ali's house and the man's grim, cryptic warning. "Another devotee of the six-armed goddess—"

Aloud he said:

"The governor has not yet seen the telegram?"

"No."

"When will it be delivered?"

"Very late tonight. His excellency is at Fort Ali Musjid, dining with the colonel saheb there. He will not be back until midnight."

"Why don't you tell Fazil Khan to wait with the delivery of the telegram until tomorrow—after we'll have left, Mohandar Singh?"

"What good would that do, saheb? The maharanee's train arrives early in the morning—hours before the Khybar Pass is open for travelers—and the news of her arrival will be all over town."

The situation seemed hopeless.

By tomorrow the cat would be out of the bag. If they remained in Peshawar, or anywhere in India for that matter, they would be arrested. Forged passports. A dangerous offense. Besides, the whole story was certain to be discovered—and then an end to their dreams of high chivalry; and, by the same token, an end, doubtless, to the House of Colin Mor Macdonnell, sultan of Kivastan.

"The Khybar!" said Lord Carmyon. "We must go through the Khybar tonight!"

"Saheb," sighed Mohindar Singh, "not a mouse can cross the Khybar without a permit."

There was silence.

The seven rogues had not taken part in the discussion; had been conferring in whispers.

Now Toor Gar Khan rose and salaamed.

"Cheel ke ghur men, mas ka dher"—he quoted the ancient Indian proverb—"there is always meat in the kite's nest."

"Meaning what?" asked Lord Carmyon.

"Meaning that the Khybar is not the only way to the north—meaning that there is a second way, a way no saheb has ever trod—yet a way three sahebs will tread tonight, if their hearts be strong and their souls tough, as well as one small mem-saheb! Nor shall we show the way because of Shukri Ali's orders, but"—staring boldly at Evelyn—"because of your eyes, O young sultana!"

And the seven rogues salaamed before her deeply and, with fists on hilt, gave the throaty yell which is to the warriors of Central Asia what 'hurrah!' is to those of Europe:

"Hai! Shumshere aloom! Hai! Shumshere bu dust! Ho! Swords out! Ho! Swords in hand!"

Few newspaper readers will recall the short news items, cabled from Pershawar via London, which read:

> "Two days ago the Indian government was the victim of an extraordinary hoax. Passports had been granted to a woman who represented herself to be the Maharanee of Bundalpore, and to her suite. Permits for the party to cross the Khybar Pass were about to be signed when, unexpectedly, the real Maharanee of Bundalpore arrived in town. In the meantime the adventuress and her companions had disappeared and have not as yet been apprehended. The British authorities doubt that any political significance attaches to the incident."

This paragraph was tucked away in an obscure corner. On the other hand, there may be a great many people who still remember an article, signed by a famous Paris correspondent, which appeared in the same issue. Beneath flaring front page headlines of

> "EAST CAN NOT MEET WEST. KIPLING AGAIN PROVED TRUE. ORIENTAL POTENTATE KNOCKS LOVELY PARISIAN BRIDE FOR ROW OF GERANIUMS."

it related how last night at the Palais Dore, momentarily the most fashionably exclusive restaurant in Paris, a certain Prince Mustaffa Bek, son and heir to the Sultan of Mervistan, had a heated argument with his pretty little French wife, suddenly rose, called her an unmentionable name, and knocked her down. Immediately afterwards, before the excited, indignant guests were able to lay hands on him, Mustaffa Bek rushed out of the place, while men and women ran to IRVIN S. COBB is one of those writers—and there are not so many—whose personalities make an impression on their time. A great many writers are merely sieves through which raw material is squeezed, to be jellied into fiction, drama, poetry, what not; the jelly may be delicious, but you care little and know little about the sieve through which it comes. Not so with Cobb. The big print of his thumb, to change the metaphor, is marked clearly on the page of our day. We are interested in the man himself as well as in what he writes; he is what newspaper folk call good copy.

Meet him, talk to him a while, and you know why. It is because he is such a big, homely, wholesome, forthright, genial, picturesque individual; one who speaks his mind, looks on life without fear or favor, laughs at it, and at the same time can unmercifully flay injustice and pity misfortune.

We are interested in Cobb because he is ourselves as we would like to be, the average man raised to the nth degree of vividness and made articulate. Does he have an operation? We want to know all about it. Does he go to the dentist's? We want him to tell us his experience. Does he try to run a little farm in the country? Well, well, Mr. Cobb, and how did you make out? And he tells us, laughing at himself all the time, and making us see ourselves in the same situation. He is no abnormal and peculiar genius. His reactions are our reactions, only immensely intensified.

What, in general, is his life like? Again the kind of life, I think, that a lot of us would like to live—sane, interesting, vivid. In winter he is in a house in New York; in summer he goes to the country. Every morning he writes. He worked like a horse during his younger days as a reporter and immediately thereafter, and he has earned leisure; though leisure, in the case of a writer, is an equivocal term, since it is used to fill up those mental and spiritual and emotional reservoirs on which he draws in his work.

Anyway, we will say Cobb has leisure, and leave out of account the endless social and professional demands life builds up around a public figure. During that leisure he reads; he hobnobs with the interesting and great personalities of his time; he goes to Europe; or, preferably, he visits here and there in his own country, which he knows like a book. Above all, he loves to get off with a party of men to some remote hunting lodge, perhaps among the bayous of Louisiana, where he spends his days shooting wild duck and his nights swapping yarns before the log fire; or to a camp in the far Northwest, where he spends his days fishing and his nights exactly as before stated. Hunting, fishing, riding, swapping yarns—there is fine zest in these to Cobb, as to which of us is not?

All this is a matter of common knowledge. It is not so well known that he is also a great collector of Indian relics and finds as much zest in this as in hunting and fishing.

The study where he works, or his office, as he characteristically prefers to call it, is packed with things made by Indians, from Navajo rugs on the floor to the last Flathead buffalo spear crowded against the ceiling. When you visit Cobb you lay your coat on top of a Pawnee papoose-carrier and hang your hat over a Sioux tomahawk decorated with a scalplock.

"The modern woman has no monopoly on making herself a martyr for the sake of style," he remarked when I was there last. "In that respect the flapper and what we are pleased to call the savage Indian are sisters under their silk and buckskin."

He picked up a gorgeous Indian dress, overlaid from neck to hem with heavy bead embroidery in bright colors.

"This weighs twenty-five pounds," he went on. "It was the bridal robe of a Crow squaw. I have seen them as heavy as thirty pounds. The modern flapper goes to a hop, with the thermometer at 10 below, in a costume you could tuck into a watch pocket; but she is no more unreasonably feminine than the dark little lady who put on this twenty-five-pound suit of bead armor on a hot summer day and thought she was having fun as she stewed in it during a dance lasting several hours.'

It is natural that a man like Cobb, who somehow smacks of wind and wood and good brown earth and takes delight in strong and simple drama, should discover a distinct congeniality of spirit in the red men. He has, in fact, been made an honorary member of the Navajos, among whom he is called the Laugh Maker, and of the Blackfeet, who call him "Pa tok Pa kos," or Eagle [illegible], and thus he is initiated in Indian secrets [illegible] white men share.

Now, nine times out of ten t appeals most strongly to a man roots farthest down into the c nature has some connection w health and it is so with th Cobb's.

times out of ten the thing that strongly to a man and works its t down into the crevices of his some connection with his boy- it is so with this hobby of

"When I was a boy," he says, "I lived in a part of Kentucky where the Moundbuilders flourished in times past. Boylike, I used to grub around these mounds a lot. Mostly, I think, they were built not by some mysterious, distinct race, but by the Chickasaws and Shawnees of that region for burial purposes, for observation, and, perhaps, in connection with religious worship and ceremonials. Be that as it may, they were veritable treasure chests—or it might be more exact to say refuse heaps—of Indian relics. We boys who lived near them became young archæologists, in a way, without knowing it.

"So long after the last of my collection of birds' eggs had been smashed and the last stamp had been raffled off and the last chromo cigarette actress had been traded away, there still remained a solid little collection of Indian arrowheads, beads, pottery, old bones and such like things which I had picked up myself in the mound country.

"And, finding these things myself, having them in my possession, handling them, thinking and talking and wondering about them set up in me, even as a youngster, a strong love for the lore of the American Indian. As I grew up the hobby kept getting a closer grip on me, which is a way hobbies have. It has given me a larger amount of wholesome fun and some understanding of a fine race of people that most of us know altogether too little about."

Mr. Cobb abstracted a cigar from a box under a carved wooden Indian's head, lighted it, and leaned back with his hands clasped over the smock he wears when he is working.

"I have upward of a thousand pieces now out not by any means everything I've wanted. Among the things I've coveted most was a wide beaded belt owned by a man in Wyoming and obtained by him from a Crow squaw a good many years ago. On it the squaw had copied with great care and skill what probably seemed to her the most lovely thing she had ever laid eyes on. It was the label from a tomato can—fat, ripe tomatoes, green leaves, and a suggestion of the trade name, all beautifully worked out, Indian fashion, in colored beads.

"Your Indian, you see, was quick to adapt to his own peculiar needs objects thrown on the junk heap by the white man, and could give us many lessons in thrift and reclamation. He transformed the white man's metal files into daggers that are marvels of fine workmanship, made spearheads and tomahawks out of old iron wagon tires, and converted round cheese boxes into war drums.

"There against the wall behind you is an object I treasure, and an example of just such adaptation—a skin-covered shield, you see, which is fringed with several hundred conical ornaments in sets of different sizes, made out of nothing but old tin cans, cut up into small pieces and twisted into uniform shapes. The work is almost as carefully and artistically done as though the old tin cans were some precious metal — as, indeed, any metal is precious to a primitive people. When the shield is shaken the ornaments make a pleasant tinkling sound, each group having its own special tone. The Indian does like things that tinkle and rattle."

Most of Mr. Cobb's collection, as he explained, has necessarily been obtained by purchase from dealers or by trading with other collectors. "And I solace myself for the money I spent on them," he remarked, "by the thought that genuine Indian relics are getting scarcer and scarcer, and mine are therefore growing more and more valuable." He has not as much time as he would like to get out and pick up a piece here and there first hand. Some, however, he has found, and some were given to him by Indian friends.

I told him about a white quartz arrowhead my wife and I picked up the other day while we were walking across a cornfield near our house, and we talked of what a genuine thrill it is to find one of these delicately wrought little objects and to realize that Indians had trod and hunted and fought long ago on that very spot where your feet stand, yet how pernicious a discovery, since thereafter you keep your eyes on the ground searching for more arrowheads instead of looking off to the horizon. Then Mr. Cobb showed me a number of similar quartz arrowheads he had found, and with some pride an exceptionally large flint arrow or spear head, about three inches long and perfect in workmanship, which he had come upon on the very spot where they were digging the foundation for his former home in Ossining, N. Y. Thoreau, it would seem from his journal, had some sort of curious affinity for Indian relics and was always pick-the help of his charming, golden-haired wife.

There were cries sympathetic, cries shocked, and—since even beauty in distress, even beauty brutally knocked down, is still beauty—cries admiring:

A glass of champagne was held to her lips.

"Here—It'll do you good!"

"Who was the man?"

"Mustaffa Bek. . . . ."

"O—the Prince . . . .?"

"Yes . . . ."

Powder puffs were offered. Handkerchiefs. Tiny perfume bottles.

An elderly gentleman—surreptitiously and, let us hope, paternally—caressed her cheek.

They crowded about.

"Feeling better, madame?"

"Another glass of champagne—come . . . ."

Good Samaritans. Some of them, though, were not so good.

For instance, to mention just a few of the latter: a notorious Greek crook who looked like a Spanish duke used the opportunity of the crush and excitement and confusion to help himself to the pearl necklace of Mrs. Ezra W. Donaldson, wife of the Montana copper king; a well-known Spanish duke who looked like a Greek crook used the same opportunity to slip his visiting card into the hand of a red-haired woman with whom, all evening, he had been flirting across the width of the restaurant; and M. Marcel Lajeunesse, the famous French divorce lawyer, bending over Delphine, murmured in her ear:

"I am Maitre Lajeunesse . . . 15 Rue Saint-Honore—office hours ten to twelve in the morning . . . . . command me if you contemplate an action for divorce . . . . "

She sat up.

"Thank you—" she sighed—"thank you all—you've all been so kind . . " She dabbed at her eyes . . . "please . . . . somebody . . . . call me a taxi . . . "

And nobody—not even M. Marcel Lajeunesse famed for his forensic shrewdness—had sufficient power of observation to notice that, strangely, in spite of the blow which had floored her and had caused her to faint, not as much as a blue and black suspicion marred Delphine's ivory and gold loveliness and that her convulsive sobs were only another proof of the average woman's superb histrionic gifts.

Nor did—could—anybody know how, that same afternoon, husband and wife had rehearsed the whole scene.

"It is my duty," he had said.

"To strike me?" she had smiled.

"No, no . . . . you know what I mean—my duty toward Sultana Evelyn . . . . chiefly now that she's quite alone—with the Three Musketeers dead. . . . "

"Are you sure? Somehow I just can't believe it, Mustaffa."

"It was in all the papers," he had announced, thereby demonstrating his simple ingenuousness. "Come on now. Let's try it again. How about hitting you on the left ear, darling?"

"All right, sweetheart." Then, when he had lashed out at her with his clenched fist, she had stepped back, had exclaimed: "Don't be so realistic! Who do you think you are? Georges Carpentier?"

"I shan't hurt you—shan't even touch you, dearest. Come on"—making a feint at her—"once more. It must appear genuine. Kuprine mustn't suspect. . . ."

And Kuprine didn't. He too, the following morning, though not ingenuous in the least, believed the papers for once; whistled when he read about the scandalous scene in the Palois Dore; was not in the least surprised when, late in the afternoon, Mustaffa Bek called on him.

"I know why you're here," was his opening remark.

"Mind reader, are you?"

"No. Newspaper reader."

"The papers are rather giving me the razz, aren't they?"

"And so Paris is getting too hot for you?"

"Atmospherically the other way about, old fruit."

"What do you mean?"

Paris is giving me the cold shoulder. Went to the club for a drink—people turned their backs on me. Dropped in for lunch at the Ritz—and the headwaiter had the confounded cheek to tell me my patronage was no longer wanted . . . and a number of the lads cut me in the Bois—cut me dead."

"Can't blame them, Mustaffa Bek."

"Never knew that you were so squeamish."

"I'm not. I've put my foot on most of the decalogue in my time. But—to hit your wife—at least to be seen doing it . . . why—it simply isn't done!"

"She deserved it."

"I dare say. Most wives do. Still—you have to be an English duke to get away with that particular domestic pastime."

"Why the exception in favor of English dukes, Kuprine? Tremendously unfair!"

"Granted. But it's a fact. I suppose—" a shrewd guess, the Russian had thought—"you want my advice about what to do next?"

"O—I jolly well know what to do next. But I don't know how to do it."

"Namely?"

"I want to say pater peccavi and go home. Mervistan's the place for me."

"What's preventing you from going there?"

"Best reason in the world, old thing. Fear!"

"Fear?"

"Right-o! My father is so dooced careless when it comes to slicing off disobedient heads — even his first born's."

"You seem to forget that so far your father has no idea how disobedient you've been. The Mervistan telegraph lines are destroyed—remember?"

"O yes—I thought of that. But the Captain Jones person is on the way. He's such a helpful soul . . . he's sure to tell the guv'nor and to put in a bad word for me."

"Well—you'll have to reach Mervistan before he does."

"Tell me something new, bright eyes. That's just why I'm calling on you. There's only one way of beating Jones to it; overland, to Moscow, and somebody to taxi me by airplane from there to the border of Mervistan. At a pinch—for I've done a bit of flying—I can pilot a machine myself."

"All right. I'll arrange it for you."

"You aren't such a bad old egg. Thanks awfully, Kuprine."

"You needn't thank me," rejoined the latter, smiling sardonically. "Personally I don't care a curse if your father has you shortened by a head or not."

"Oh—then why . . . . ?"

"Political considerations. You see, your second brother is slated to succeed to your father some day if you don't. And he—well—he's less stupid than you, and would therefore be more dangerous—to Russia."

"My dear chap," laughed Mustaffa Bek, "I'll say one thing for you. Your coarseness is charmingly genuine and spontaneous. Well — when do I start?"

"When can you?"

"Tonight if necessary."

"Good enough. No use wasting time. Take the midnight express to Berlin. Change trains there for Moscow. I'll give you a few lines to certain people there, and I'll send them a telegram tonight."

. . . . . .

So Mustaffa Bek left Paris; and three days later Russia came to him as it comes to all those who approach it from the west . . . or from the east, the north, or the south—it really doesn't make the slightest difference. Past the sterile, vague monotony of East Prussia's plains — hazy, wired over plains that Corot might have painted—Russia came to him with a lonely, round, medieval tower that was immensely tall yet seemed squat and flattened, as if crushed by the weight of the gray heavens, the gray, swinging centuries, and in front of it a frontier sentinel standing on wide straddled feet, rifle with bayonet on shoulder, wearing a greenish drab uniform.

Tsarist uniform, or bolshevist? On the tower tsarist emblem of imperial eagle, or bolshevist of hammer and fist? That, too, doesn't make the slightest difference.

Some will claim that this tower is nothing but a rather ugly, useless pile of stone and brick and mortar, and that the soldier is nothing but a bovine, brutish, vodka soddened peasant. Others will hold that tower and soldier are symbols; the tower a symbol of Russia's history, past, present, and future, and the sentinel a symbol of Russia's brooding, unthinking strength . . . . . enormous symbols, cosmic, grown out of that vast, tragic Slav earth—standing to guard it, to love it and occasionally, to lay it waste and mulch it with blood . . oh, yes! that's what some men will say; but then it's a fact that some men will say almost anything.

Anyway, if you want to understand Russia—though the Lord knows why you should take the trouble and risk the heartbreak—you must consider this sentinel in front of the tower; and you may consider him as you prefer; literally or figuratively.

Look at him!

There he stands, motionless, stolid, patient, because it is his duty; and up to him—it has happened before, will happen again—steps a man of God, perhaps a Tolstoy, and says:

"You must not kill."

"Why not?"

"Thus it is written in the Bible. Throw your rifle away."

And the soldier replies:

"You are speaking the truth. Am I not an orthodox Christian of the holy Greek communion? I must not kill—" and he throws the rifle away.

"Now you must do penance," continues the man of God. "Bare your back so that I may whip you with a knout and drive the wicked devils of lust and cruelty out of your soul."

And the soldier bares his back, and the knout descends with sickening, tearing, crimson thuds, and the man of God cries: "Hallelujah! Praised be Saint Chrysostom the golden mouthed!"; and then—it has happened before, will happen again—a man of power, perhaps a Romanoff, steps up and asks:

"Why did you throw your rifle away? Why do you let yourself be beaten with a knout?"

"Because I must not kill. Because it is thus written in the Bible."

"How do you know? You cannot read. Who told you about it."

"The man of God."

"He is not a man of God," laughs the man of power. "He is a foreigner, a German, a Frenchman, a Pole, a Protestant, a Jew, a Roman Catholic—an enemy of the fatherland—an enemy to the dear Crucified One. He is an antichrist. Kill him!"

And so the soldier kills the man of God and, for good measure, stabs and shoots whatever other foreigners, Germans, Poles, Frenchmen, Protestants, Jews and Roman Catholics, he can find, and the man of power exclaims: "Charming! And so patriotic! Praised be Saint Vladimir of the sword!" and he is about to go to Paris, since the women there are pretty and the red wines pleasant when—it has happened before, will happen again—a man of brain, perhaps a Lenin or Trotzky steps up and says:

"Killing is a good thing, a proper, just thing. But you must learn whom to kill."

"You must kill the man of power."

"Why?"

on the Liberal mind. At the universities there was a movement to "make the world better"—as Lord Esher, in his latest book of reminiscences, tells us they expressed it themselves—and young men from the elect and select circles came under its influence. They read John Ruskin and Thomas Carlyle. Asquith was one of those in the movement.

But to them the phrases and slogans of political radicalism were well nigh dead. Interest was shifting from political to social democracy. Events were also about to happen which were to revive interest in British imperialism and were to challenge all parties in British politics to define their attitude to their nation as an acquisitive world power. Liberals of the old generation stuck to their old slogans and held imperialism to be a sin. The young generations saw something more than flashy tinsel in the dominion empire. Gladstone and Harcourt were in one camp; Roseberry and Asquith in the other.

The Boer war broke out and Asquith disappointed the Radicals. Those were days of Liberal dissent and disruption among colleagues, days of open hostility between leaders sitting side by side in the Liberal benches. Yet, though Asquith was definitely and professedly one the side of the imperialists, he was never possessed by the narrow enmities of many of his colleagues. He recognized the qualities of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman as a leader of the united Liberal party, and when that party was called for by the events that followed he took his stand loyally by Sir Henry as the only possible leader and in the end pronounced upon him a funeral eulogy that rang with a sincerity unusual on such occasions.

The next war found the nation united as it perhaps has never been before or since—and he lifted the emotions of the people onto planes of stern, moral determination. What took place behind the scenes in those years is still a plaything of whispered rumor and of private gossip. Some of it has been committed to print, but much of it is still flowing on idle winds. At any rate he fell. He has undoubtedly left behind him records of what he knew or believed or experienced. But during his lifetime he gave forth to the world no growling revelations like Bismarck. He kept his silence and gave us neither enlightenment nor guidance.

The Liberal party, split in 1918, suffered greater humiliation in 1922. The next year, divided both in leadership and in council, another election smote it still more heavily. Then, when Labor was returned as the second party and was about to assume office, Mr. Asquith made the biggest blunder of his life. Speaking at the National Liberal Club shortly after the election, he used words that made an approach from the Labor party impossible. He evidently thought that we would go in and make a mess of it by being unequal to the terrible task of governing an empire like ours. Doubtless he felt that we would hold office for a brief inglorious month or so and that upon our failure Liberalism would return to favor and to power. What moved him to this I do not know. It was fatal. When I read his speech at a fireside far remote from the center of things, I could not believe that his sagacious judgment had failed. But it was so. History tells the rest.

In the end the Liberals had to support that hollow and unjust plea that undue political interference had been at work in the Campbell case, when a Communist was prosecuted for sedition and the prosecution had been withdrawn. And in the election that followed, Mr. Asquith, to the personal regret of every one, was defeated in Paisley and ceased to be a member of the House he had led and ruled by his intellectual power and enthralled by his masterful oratory.

But his troubles were not over. Again and again was he stricken; yet he stood amid his fortunes as great in his adversity as he had been in his power. His memory will stand the wearing of long years. The mists of time may make him dim, but what will be beheld will be a form of serene dignity and unmoved rectitude.

"Because he oppresses you, and because he drinks champagne and his wife wears pearls about her white throat."

"Is that sufficient reason"

"Yes, O fool," replies the man of brain. "Have you ever drunk champagne?"

"No."

"Does your wife wear pearls?"

"No."

"In other words, you are oppressed, aren't you?"

"Yes."

"Then kill the oppressor, the man of power!"

So the soldier kills again and stands there, in front of the tower, as he has always stood, stolid, patient, guarding Russia, loving it and occasionally mulching it with blood; while for a while at least—until somebody else happens along, perhaps the next time a man of gold—the man of brain sits in the kremlin of Moscow and says:

"I am Russia!"

Tragic?

A viewpoint.

And Mustaffa Bek's viewpoint—later on, in answer to Lord Carmyon's question—was typical of the man:

"Politics don't interest me nor, I'm afraid, the rights and wrongs of mankind. Perhaps the tsarists were right and the bolshevists are wrong—or the other way about. I don't know But—my dear old trout—can you imagine Lenin drinking his vodka from those delightful, ruby red tumblers which a king of France sent to Catherine the Great? Can you see Trotzky wiping his ragged beard with those delicately embroidered napkins which a Bourbon of Spain gave to Ivan the Terrible? Can you picture Tchitcherin eating his filthy cabbage soup from the gold plates presented by Napoleon to Emperor Paul? Can you imagine it? Ah—that's what I call tragic—and in such wretchedly bad taste, don't you think?"

Not that he voiced this opinion as, a few hours after his arrival in Moscow, he sat facing Karakhan, the soviet minister for Asiatic afairs, who looked up from reading Kuprine's letter, mentioned that the latter had wired him at length, and add:

"You can make Mervistan in two or three days. The plane is ready, the piloting waiting for you."

"That's what I call perfectly topping efficiency," laughed Mustaffa Bek.

"O—" the other smiled without amusement—" we are not above taking an occasional lesson—even from capitalism." He pressed a button on his desk, said to his secretary who came in: "Vassily Ivanovitch, will you be good enough to drive Mustaffa Bek over to the aviation field—at Sakolniky park?" He rose and shook hands with his visitor: "Au revoir."

"Au revoir—and thanks."

The airplane, too, was a marvel of Russian, or rather, to tell the truth, of transplanted post-war German—efficiency. The pilot, a pleasant faced youth whom Kharakhan's secretary introduced as Pavel Ilyitch Novadkine, was as proud of it as if it had been his own child and, when presently he was alone with Mustaffa Bek, needed little urging to exhibit its fine points.

"Have you ever driven a plane?" he asked.

"I've done a bit of flying. But this bus of yours is new to me."

"Ought to be. Specially made for our government. But so easy to handle. Why—it drives itself . . . just look!"—and he explained eagerly, enthusiastically, while Mustaffa Bek listened eagerly, enthusiastically. For aboard the train a plan had formed in his brain; was rapidly crystallizing when he discovered that he would be the only passenger and that no mechanic would be taken along.

The machine was different in many ways, in a dozen new technical particulars, from any that Mustaffa Bek had even seen or ridden. It seemed a cross between a huge Haviland bomber and a fast Italian Caproni, with a tremendous wing spread, extraordinary strength and massiveness in every strut, and generous room for four passengers and baggage.

"How much speed can you get out of her?" he asked.

"Better than one hundred and fifty miles," replied Novadkine.

"Three motors, eh?

"Yes. Four hundred and fifty horsepower each . . . and look at those gas tanks."

"My word! Aren't they huge?"

"Enough for several days' flying trip."

"What about your return journey?" Mustaffa Bek tried to make the question appear casual. "Any gas depots where we are going?"

"Several. Some near Bokhara. Others near Kuldja, on the border of Chinese Turkestan.

"Been there before?"

"Part of the way . . . and our maps are excellent."

"Mind showing me the map?"

"Not a bit. Here you are—" and the young Russian produced a flying chart of Central Asia and pointed out to the other the route which he proposed taking.

By this time it was noon. The Sakolniky flying field was deserted, since the aviators and mechanics had gone to lunch; the sort of lunch in which Russians specialize and which takes them from soup—two kinds and none slighted — to dessert — three kinds and none slighted—and, as often as not, all the way back again from the three desserts to the two soups.

Shirley's voice in a direction which he knew to be false. He found himself gasping for breath, as though he were being chloroformed by the black density.

It was like the prelude to creation, where there was neither form, nor light, nor time.

Shirley had the same thought.

"It's horrible!" she cried. "It's like—nothing! I'm sorry—but I simply can't stay still, waiting in the dark. Let's go on!"

Cuttle sprang to his feet. His belief in that rescue party was not as vital as he would have wished. It would be a relief to move.

"Heaven helps those who help themselves," he said, cheerily. "I'll prod the wall and we'll keep on turning always to the left. Give me your hand!"

He could feel that she was shaking like grass in the wind. But as they began to move slowly and cautiously forward—testing each step—her fingers grew warm within his grasp.

"I hope you realize this is your fault," he said. "See what comes of giving up the womanly habit of smoking!"

"Yes," agreed Shirley. "Normally, I carry tons of matches. Of course, too, if I'd not been curious to see the bottom of that crevice, you wouldn't have lost your pullover."

"Never mind. I saved something more worth while."

"I wonder! It might have been quicker—that way!"

"Don't be a blooming sap!"

Cuttle's rough words had their desired effect.

"You're right," said Shirley. "We both know. So it's no good talking about it. Better talk about ourselves. Tell me do you like making marmalade?"

Marmalade. Cuttle thought that, surely, it was the strangest topic, as—hand in hand—they groped in the pitchy darkness of the mountain's maw. Their past was a mockery; their future, a menace; their present, an incredible reality.

They wandered—because inaction was death to the spirit. While they sat, and waited, the Shadow which followed them, swallowed them up. They wandered—although they had no goal. They could see no end, because they did not dare to look beyond the moment. Even if a false step brought death to the body, it was better to go out and meet it, unafraid.

So—they talked of marmalade.

"Of course, I like making it," said Cuttle. "All but one part of it. It's a jolly good trade. Wholesome, refreshing food for the nation—made from the purest sugar and finest fruit. Nature's own remedy——"

"Don't!" pleaded Shirley. "You make me feel ashamed."

"Why—on earth?"

"Because you work and I play."

"Now, don't be a sap again. Call your kind of tennis jolly hard work."

"It is, in a way. It's fine for lots of things. But—I've thought far too much about it. Even when I was at school I woudn't play with the other girls for fear of losing my form. You see, I'm not big, like the real champions and I've lost my sense of proportion. I can see myself, now. Just a fairly good amateur with a swelled head."

So—in the darkness—she saw herself plainly for the first time. And the famous tennis champion was just a pretty frightened girl—mighty glad of the pressure of a friendly hand.

It made Cuttle long to justify her confidence, but he could do nothing. They could only wander on, until they crossed the threshold of a still deeper Darkness.

"What's the part of your work you don't like?" asked Shirley suddenly.

"The jokes," explained Cuttle. "People always asking you if you pick up the oranges and peel in the gutter, and so on. And I've got to grin and pretend to like it."

Shirley actually laughed—and the Shadow shrank a little farther behind.

"That's weak," she declared. "You should either like it or let them see you don't like it."

"What? Have people laughing at me?"

"Why not? What do people matter. People are only a lot of yous and mes. Why do you practically admit that every man is better than yourself?"

Although her words were a flame spurting in the gloom, Cuttle made no reply. He had gone past speech, as he pressed forward through the darkness, as though he were wading through a sluggish black lake. Only part of his brain seemed able to function, and he reeled slightly, like a man walking in his sleep. All sense of time or direction slipped away. He might have been wandering for a hundred years,, when he felt Shirley's fingers tighten on his.

"Listen! Voices."

He strained his ears. There were gurglings and whisperings—chuckles and echoes everywhere.

"No," he said. "Only water."

"But I can distinguish words," persisted Shirley. "Shout!"

They both shouted into the darkness. But only the echoes replied.

"You see!" said Cuttle.

Then, in turn, his own hand clasped Shirley's fingers in a voice, as the echo sent back an independent reply.

"Halloo! Where are you? Shout"

They pressed forward, straining their eyes. A long way ahead, there seemed to be a very faint sprayed light, like street illuminations seen through a window, at the end of a black corridor.

Presently, Cuttle gave a shout of surprise. They were poised upon the lip of a drop down to the cup of a huge cavern. Natural pillars and arches gleamed faintly in the light of electric torches, as though adorned with frosted icicles.

It was the general's famous stalactite cave. Cuttle could distinguish moving figures and the white blurs of faces looking upward to their gallery.

Yet, even as he hailed his friends, Cuttle felt a sense of loss. This was the end of the adventure. Shirley's own special circle was here. Some of the tennis players were already clambering up the rocks, to their aid.

Shirley was carried off, surrounded, swallowed up. But in the midst of the excitement and confusion she looked across at Cuttle, and smiled. He knew, then, that his fears were vain. They had come too close together in the darkness, where they had not only found each other, but seen themselves. He would be inside.

He turned to the general, who received him with welcome brandy and profanity.

"Drink, and be damned for an infernal young fool! It beats me how you could go wrong, when I'd drawn you a plan as plain as the nose on your face!"

"Did we take the wrong turning?" asked Cuttle.

"Wrong turning?" roared the general. "You never were right. You only went down a derelict mine shaft and wandered about in the old workings. Marvel is you escaped being gassed. The air must be foul as festering fish."

Cuttle smiled. It was difficult to explain to the general that they had been protected by a power akin to the force which works miracles at Lourdes.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "we were both nearly bowled over. But we had your assurance that the air was pure, and we believed it. Auto-suggestion, I suppose. But it was pretty bad in the dark. That was the worst part."

The general's face sobered.

"If you'd shown a naked light," he declared, "there would have been an explosion, probably, and a fall of earth. I believe that it was losing your matches that saved you both from being buried alive."

Marriage a Failure

DO NOT GROPE IN DARKNESS

Find Out the Mysteries of Life!

Read the Most Sensational Book in Years, "The Eternal Question" —and Know Why Marriage is So Often a Failure.

JUDGES granted over 2,000,000 mismated couples divorces last year. Why? What's wrong with marriage? Is it spiritual? Is it physical? Is it the man's fault? Or does the woman fail? Will trial marriages solve sex mistakes? Is your love-life and sex-life complete? Are you unhappy because of ignorance of the fundamental facts of life? Are you committing errors which may ruin your future happiness? Do you know your desires, impulses, energies? Can you fascinate the other sex? These are but few of the subjects discussed in the amazing BRAND NEW book "The Eternal Question."

Sex Secrets!

This sensational book, now published for the first time, reveals sex secrets never before seen in print —true stories of grief caused by ignorance. Clears the way to successful marriages, happy matings, contentment and fulfilment of sexual desires. Discusses every side of sex relationship, mental, spiritual, moral, physical. Talks plainly, unafraid but decently. Analyzes moments of exultation, petting, adolescence, disease, vicious sex practices, anatomy, marital bliss, measles of marriage, "the dangerous age" and similar topics. A book you will read from cover to cover and then keep for future reference as you face the problems dealt with in everyday life. And everyone must face these problems at some time.

This book is not a novel —it is a penetrating searchlight fearlessly turned on the most intimate relations of men and women. It tells all you must and should know about Limitation of Offspring and why a wife should be permitted to decide when she shall become a mother, smashing indisputably every argument against Voluntary Parenthood. Its astounding facts, upon which the very laws of life are based, convey a vital message to brides, grooms, husbands, wives.

Life's Tragedies!

A beautiful and happy bride today. Too soon a mother, then more children. The result—overwork, strained constitution, broken health, unhappiness and too often a divorce. Why is this so often the case? Why should marriage convert a healthy, normal girl into a tired old woman? Why not a continuous, happy married life, with children in proportion to the mother's strength and the means of the family? Why —a sex tragedy? Authoritative answers to these questions and priceless other revelations are contained in the 412 pages of the latest and greatest sex book ever published.

This startling book—vividly illustrated—gives "human interest" stories, proving "TRUTH" stranger and more fascinating than fiction—"NEVER TOLD TALES"—that seldom reach the public. It frankly answers questions everyone wants to know, but hesitates even to ask a physician.

What's the Trouble? Who's Fault Is It?

In the problem of too many children the cause of much hardship, suffering, unhappiness and many divorces!

The straightforward discussion of Birth Control in its many phases is a personal and intimate message of untold value to every husband and wife.

THE PIRATE OF ROCKY ISLAND

A Boy's Own Story of His Adventures

BY W. BOYCE MORGAN

Author of "Raging Waters" "The Friend of Prince Philippe," "The Ghost at Faversham's," The "Conquerors Club" Stories, Etc.

"You can't imagine the thrill I got as we glided over the water"

INSTALLMENT I.

If you don't like this story, blame it on Miss Meloy, and not on me. Maybe I'd better tell you that Miss Meloy teaches me English in high school, and that it's all because of her that I'm writing this accoun of my adventures.

You see, Miss Meloy is always having us write themes for her, and in one of them I told about what happened to me during the summer I spent with my Uncle Ed on his island. She called me up to her desk the day after I turned in the story.

"Paul," she said, "is this a true story?" Did it really happen to you?"

I told her that it did.

"Then you ought to write up the whole thing. I think it would make a very fine story."

Well, I liked the compliment all right, but writing the whole story struck me as a lot of work, so I told her that I didn't think I'd ... She insisted, though, and what could I do? She promised to help me with it, and I'd rather do a little extra work than take a chance on flunking English and not being able to play baseball this spring.

So that's how it was, and you can easily see that Miss Meloy is to blame.

Maybe I'd better go back a ways and tell you how it all started. I guess I've been interested in pirates all my life. I can remember Uncle Ed reading "Treasure Island" to me when I couldn't understand more than about half the words. After that I got hold of all the pirate stories I could lay hands on, and simply ate them up.

If I had had a brother I think we'd have run away and become pirates ourselves when we were little, but the only other child in our family is my sister, Beth. Of course, Beth is a lot of fun, but she's a girl, and she's almost two years younger than I am, so you can easily see that I couldn't run away and be a pirate with her. But we did have a lot of fun playing together when we were little, and Beth was awfully good at fixing up fancy costumes.

Even after I got to be a freshman in high school I still was interested in buccaneers and sea robbers, even though I didn't play I was one any more. Uncle Ed knew about this, and used to write me the most wonderful letters from his island, all about the pirates that used to be there, the buried treasure, and all that. How I loved to get those letters.

But maybe I'd better tell you more about Uncle Ed and his island. It really wasn't his island at all, but it did belong to a rich friend of his whom he met in college. You see, Uncle Ed was a doctor, and at the time of the war something happened to his throat and lungs so he can't live in a northern climate any more. He had to go away somewhere where it was warm. This friend of his, whose name is Harold Parsons, had a lot of money, and had bought a little island of his very own off the coast of Flordia.

So he invited Uncle Ed to come there and live with him. The island was deserted except for the Parsons and their servants, and since Mrs. Parsons wasn't very well, Harold thought it would be a good idea to have a doctor living with them. The whole thing worked out beautifully, and it was mighty lucky for Uncle Ed.

Well he went down there to live with the Parsons a few months after he returned from France, and has been there ever since. I guess he'll never leave now, except for short trips, because he went and married Louise Parsons, Harold's sister. She is awfully nice, though, so it was all right with me.

Uncle Ed and I had always been good chums, and he wrote me the nicest letters, and kept saying that he was going to have Beth and me down to visit him some time. That seemed almost too good to be true, but I always dreamed about it happening.

And then one day just before school closed last spring this letter came. I still have it—and I'll never throw it away—so I can tell you exactly what it said.

"Dear Paul:

"Right now Rocky Island is a busy place. Louise's young nephew, William Drake, who is about your age and lives in New York, had a severe sick spell last winter and is down here recovering. He's having a wonderful time.

"I'm wondering if your Dad won't let you and Beth come down as soon as school is out and spend the summer with us. We've been wanting you for a long time, and it would be nice for you to be here while Bill is here too. I have written to your Dad about it, and told him to let me know at once.

"Here's hoping you can come. Love to you all—

"Uncle Ed."

Well, maybe you think I wasn't thrilled by that letter I couldn't wait until I got to Dad to ask him about it, with Beth right on my heels. For a minute I was afraid Dad would refuse, but finally he said, "Well, you worked hard last summer, and I guess you have a vacation coming to you. I think we can let you go."

The last weeks of school were a total loss as far as Beth and I were concerned. Finally the great day came, and Dad put us on the train for the long ride to Florida.

The trip was uneventful until we had almost reached our destination. Then in the middle of the night the train was stopped, and I woke up to find several detectives searching it. Everybody was excited for a while, for we learned that there had been a

The BOYS and GIRLS PAGE

Something to Do

DALE R. VAN HORN

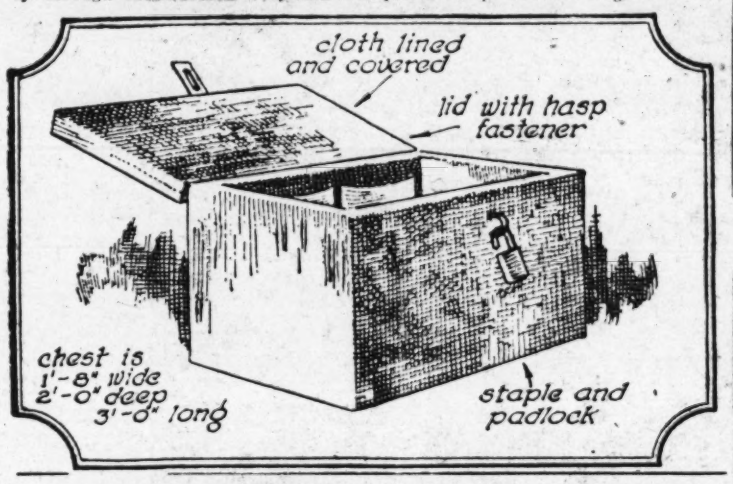

Every girl wants a treasure chest in which she can keep her keepsakes and treasures. Such a box can be easily made. When lined and covered with cloth, with a staple and hasp and a padlock to keep the contents safe from prying hands, you will have a chest to be proud of.

Get a packing box if possible, of the following dimensions: Length, 24 inches; depth, 16 inches; width, 20 inches. If the top boards are pulled apart, carefully nail them back in line with cleats on the underside. Get two small brass hinges and fasten the top to the back edge.

Attach the hasp to the front edge and drive the staples in place so that the hasp can be pushed over it to hold the top snug. If possible, have the points of the staple project slightly through the wood so they can be clinched. The padlock to be used need not be large—in fact, one costing about 25 cents will be adequate.

Line the inside with colored cretonne pasted to the wood. The edges can be tacked also to prevent its peeling off. Sew a set of pockets in the back wall for smaller articles which might become misplaced.

For the outside you can use more cloth glued in place. Thin the glue out a little with water and press in place with a rather hot iron. Another covering will be lacquer. In fact, because of its easy application and brilliants effects, this may be best. After giving the box a thick coat of the lacquer paint on a suitable design in a pretty, contrasting color to heighten the effect. The hasp and staple shou'd also be lacquered to prevent rusting.

CHINOOK

THE OLD TRAPPERS' LANGUAGE

By EL COMANCHO

CHEE—Pronounce as spelled. This work means new, lately, recently, not long ago. CHEE CHACO is a newcomer, a tenderfoot, a new arrival. CHEE NIKA OPITSAH is "New my knife is." CHEE MAMUKE OKEOKE means "make it new" (do it over).

CHETWOOT—The CH is pronounced as in Church, E as in Bet, OO as in Coo, with the accent on the first syllable. This is the Siawash, or Chinook Indian word for Brown Bear, as distinguished from the Black Bear, or ITSWOOT. Both are name words with no other meanings, although common expressions in Chinook are SKOOKUM KAHK-WAH ITSWOOT, or "A little strong like the black bear."

COLE—A corruption of the English word Cold, and having the same meaning. It is pronounced as written. The degree of cold is indicated by the words used with it. Thus COLE alone merely means Cold as distinguished from Heat. TENAS COLE is A Little Cold. HIYU COLE is Very Cold, and DELATE HIYU COLE is Very, Very Cold, or about as cold as you can get in Chinook. WAKE COLE is Not Very Cold, and HALO COLE is No Cold. ICT COLE is One Cold, or one winter season. ICT COLE AHNCUTTIE is One Year Ago (One Winter of the Time Passed).

CHINOOS—The CH is pronounced as in Church, the I as in Tin, the OO as in Coo, and say CHIN-NOO-S-SS, with a hissing sound as the end. This is the Sellish word for tobacco, and in Chinook it means smoking tobacco unless MUCK-A-MUCK is used as a prefix, when the two words mean literally Tobacco-to-Eat, or chewing tobacco. Ordinarily the word means pipe tobacco, but it is not used to mean Killikinick nor is it ever used for the ceremonial smoking mixture used in certain rituals to ward off evil. Stick CHINOOS is a cigar.

(Additional words of the Chinook Language will be published next week.)

Attack Riddles In March, Month Of Big Battles

March is supposed to be the month of battles between winter and summer, you know, so a battle between you and some riddles is very timely. Here's hoping you don't take a licking from these!

1. Who was the wickedest man mentioned in the Bible?
2. What has two backbones and millions and millions of spare ribs?
3. If you throw a man from a window, what does he fall against?
4. Why are soldiers tired on the first of April?
5. If eggs are selling for 52 cents a dozen, how many can you get for a cent and a quarter?

HINDU FLOWER MIRACLE.

The Hindus are noted for the many marvelous tricks they perform. Here is on that is very spectacular—and very easy to work.

Take any jar which you can't see through. Now get a good-sized lump of cork and stick a straight piece of stiff wire in it. Put the two cross wires (a) in place so that the affair will not fall over against the side of the jar and attach the flower in place. Put this contraption in the jar and fill with water slowly.

The water makes the cork float and the flower rises or "grows" out of the jar.

EXTRAWD'NARY!

"Father, I cawn't eat this soup."

"Waiter, bring the young gentleman another dish of soup."

"Father, I cawn't eat this soup."

"Waiter, bring the young man some other soup."

"Fawther, still I cawn't eat this soup."

"Well, why, my son, cawn't you eat it?"

"Father, I have no spoon."

HOW D'YE FEEL?

"Corkin'," said the bottle.
"Rotten," said the apple.
"Punk," said the firecracker.
"Fine," said the judge.
"First rate," said the postmaster.
"Grand," said the piano.
"Keen," said the knife.
"Ripping," said the trousers.
"Juicy," said the orange.
"All done up," said the shirt.

EDITORIAL

ARE YOU LIKE MARCH?

If a vote were taken among all the people living in the greater part of North America as to which is the most disagreeable month of the whole year, March would undoubtedly take first place without a struggle.

Why is it that this month has such a bad reputation? Spring starts in March—and we all love spring. Winter ends in March, and we are usually glad to see it go. Why, then, do we hate the month?

The answer is this: March is undependable. You can't trust her. She may smile at you in the morning and cloud up an hour later, drenching you with icy rain or biting sleet before night. You never can tell what she is going to do next.

There are a lot of people in the world who are just like March—they are not dependable. And, as we dislike the month, we dislike those people. If you want to pattern yourself after some month of the year, be sure to pick a good one—and be even surer that you are not March-like!

big robbery in St. Augustine, and they thought the robber was trying to escape to the West Indies. But they didn't find him on the train, and after a while we went on again.

Early the next morning we reached Cypress City, and Uncle Ed met us at the train. You can imagine how delighted our greetings were, and how the three of us chattered through breakfast. I at once began asking about pirates, and Uncle Ed laughed.

"I guess we had them a long time ago, but you won't find any on our island now," he said. "However, there's a cave on the island that I like to believe may have been used by buccaneers once. I'll take you there."

Speaking of pirates made Beth thing of the incident of the preceding night, and we told Uncle Ed of the train being searched.

"Yes, I read about the robbery in the papers," he said. "It was a big one. About twenty thousand dollars' worth of jewelry was taken. But if the robber tries to get a train either north or south they'll get him. I'm afraid he's in a bad predicament.

Breakfast finished, Uncle Ed led us toward the harbor.

"The sea was calm today, so I came for you in the speed boat," he announced. "That means you're going to have a mighty fast ride over to Rocky Island."

"Will you let me run it?" I asked breathlessly.

"Perhaps, if you're good."

I couldn't wait until we got down to the dock, where a beautiful, long, low speed boat was pointed out to us as the "Louise." We piled our baggage into it, and then, with Beth and me sitting beside him, Uncle Ed pointed the sharp bow of the speeder out of the harbor.

"Why, it's just like driving a car," I said to him as the boat picked up speed and skimmed over the water, leaving a great path of churned-up spray behind her. "Won't you let me take it?"

"Go ahead," agreed Uncle Ed. "Steer just as I have been. Rocky Island lies right over there." He pointed with his hand.

I climbed into the seat and took the steering wheel. He showed me how to feed the gas, and it was really simpler than driving a car. You can't imagine the thrill I got as we glided over the water, going about forty miles an hour.

Beth took her turn at running the boat, and it seemed only a few minutes until Uncle Ed again took the wheel, and pointed out a tiny island with a rocky coast that lay just ahead.

"Rocky Island There it is at last" exclaimed Beth, and from a low dock that lay under the shelter of a spur of land we saw waving handkerchiefs greeting us.

AS SCIENCE SEES IT

WHAT ARE FRECKLES?

Every boy and girl knows what freckles look like, for most every child has a few of them at some time or other, and some children have many of them all of the time. But what are these brown spots that appear on hands and neck and face, and what makes them come?

The skin contains small cells which are capable of producing a yellow pigment under certain conditions. When these cells are stimulated, they produce more of this pigment than usual and the coloring matter shows up as small spots, the sort that Wesley Barry and a lot of other boys have with more or less frequency.

In some people these pigments are always active enough to produce freckles, but in most of us they appear only when the skin has been exposed to strong sunlight. This is the reason they appear usually only on the neck, face and hands, since the other parts of the body are protected by clothing.

Some people are much more liable than others to have this freckling; in some, too, it disappears quickly, in others it remains a long time.

THE ADVENTURES OF PETER PEN

ing them up in his rambles about Concord. Maybe Irvin Cobb has a similar sixth sense for things Indian. I don't know.

Mr. Cobb brought out a pair of moccasins which had been made for him by the Blackfoot Indians when he joined their tribe. "I must tell you about my disastrous experience with the sign language in connection with these," he said.

He had got in trouble with sign talk before, notably when, in his room in a hotel in Monte Carlo, he tried to instruct a bellboy by signs to get him a taxicab to take him to the Casino, where they play roulette; and the boy nodded complete understanding, disappeared, and came back with a plate of scrambled eggs. But, undeterred by this experience—

"When the Blackfeet took me into their tribe I studied up on Indian sign talk, so I could pull some kind of oration or speech of appreciation.

"A number of chiefs, four or five, including old Chief Eagle Ribs, who gave me his name when I was adopted, entertained us in one of their lodges. They were going to make me a present of a pair of moccasins, and Grass Growing Up, the widow of Yellow Wolf, traced the outline of my foot on a board to get the size.

"When she stood up I determined to air my new knowledge of sign talk and pay her a compliment. So I said, in sign language, 'I think you are a beautiful young woman,' using the gestures that indicate youth and beauty—a woman painting her cheeks and looking into a mirror.

"Now this was stretching it just a little, because Grass Growing Up, while she was a mighty comely woman, was no longer precisely beautiful or young. The Indians around the circle looked at one another and put their hands in front of their mouths in the sign that meant they were perplexed. Then Grass Growing Up answered me in sign language.

" 'I think you are a fat liar,' she said, making the signs of a good-sized corporation and a forked tongue.

"Well, whoever thinks Indians are a solemn lot without a sense of humor should have been in that tepee in the next few minutes. Those old chiefs, who had been sitting for the most part in dignified silence, jumped up, whooped, hollered, rolled on the ground and pounded me on the back in their glee at the way Yellow Wolf's widow had put one over on me. This, from their standpoint, was incredibly brilliant repartee, and they will tell that story about me as long as I live.

"In fact, after I had left that country and was a hundred miles away, across the Divide in Glacier National Park, I was riding along the trail one day when I met three Indians in a wagon. I had never seen them before, and they had never seen me; but the word had traveled, and as soon as they had said 'How,' they jumped out of the wagon, whooped, hollered, and made the signs of the fat liar.

"However, I did succeed in turning the joke somewhat on one of the chiefs. When I first visited a tepee as a formal guest I got Tall Top, the interpreter, and Chief Bull Calf to give me careful instructions in advance as to Indian etiquette. The Indians, like the Chinese, have elaborate rules for social intercourse, and I didn't want to bulge in"—("bulge in" is exactly what Mr. Cobb said; what he meant to say, I think, was "barge in," but I leave it in his own words because they gave me so instant and vivid a picture of Irvin S. Cobb bulging in at the entrance of a little Indian tepee)—"I didn't want to bulge in after the unceremonious fashion of those palefaces whom the Indians look on as plain ordinary bores.

"So I went to the lodge entrance and rapped, and when the question came, 'What is it?' I followed the traditional formula and said, in the Blackfoot tongue: 'I and So-and-So. May I enter?' They told me I could come in, and I entered and played the game right through—sitting down at the left of my host, keeping silent till I was spoken to, passing the pipe and dishes of food from right to left, never crossing in front of the lodge door or passing anything in front of it, never stepping over the fire, and so on. And it made quite a hit with my hosts.

"Shortly afterward I invited a number of chiefs and head men to my cabin for a party or feast. I greeted them at the door, and as they came in they all carefully took off their hats, all except old Spotted Bear, who forgot and kept his on his head. After we had shaken hands all round Eagle Ribs reminded Spotted Bear of the breach of paleface decorum, and he suddenly removed his hat with the look of a youngster caught in the act of stealing jam. Thereafter the rest of them proceeded to make life miserable for Spotted Bear—for among his other characteristics the Indian is one of the greatest kidders in the world.

"It was Spotted Bear who told me the story of Napi, the god who is known as the Old Man Who Never Gets Any Older, or the Old Man With a Young Face."

Here I want to interrupt a moment to say that Mr. Cobb's interest in Indians is not by any means confined to collecting their implements of war and peace. After all, by nature and profession Cobb is a teller and a collector of yarns; he loves a good yarn above most things, and since Indian mythology and Indian history is full of good yarns, he has pretty well soaked himself in the red man's lore.

But to go on.

"Napi," said Mr. Cobb, "was a half-god who did many wise and many stupid things; and Spotted Bear told me that when Napi did things that were wise that was the god coming out in him, and when he did things that were stupid that was the man coming out. For Napi, said Spotted Bear, as we sat beside his lodge fire, was the son of the Sun, who is the greatest god of all, but his mother was an Indian maiden, the most beautiful girl who ever lived among the Blackfeet.

"A long time ago, went the story of Spotted Bear, who made the gesture of drawing a bog far back to indicate the long-ago past, this Indian maiden lived among the Blackfeet, and many young braves wanted to marry her, but she would have none of them. And one day she told her father that she was going to have a child, and that the Sun was its father; but the old chief did not believe her, and he was grieved and shamed, thinking that his daughter had been betrayed, and sternly he drove her away from his lodge in disgrace.

"Alone and sorrowful, the maiden wandered across the prairie and after a while she lay down by a badger's hole and there her child was born—Napi, the most beautiful child ever born to any woman. So she laid her baby inside the badger's hole, where he would keep warm. And that night three great medicine men or magicians, in three places far off, saw a new star in the sky, and each of them followed the star, and at last they came to where the Indian maiden lay with her child by the badger's hole.

"When they saw Napi they knew he was the son of God, and they worshipped him; and then they went back to the maiden's father and told him he had done his daughter a great wrong, and that she was in truth the bride of the Sun, and had given birth to a god. So the maiden returned to her father's lodge, and there Napi grew up, and ever after it was he who interceded between the Sun God and his people, the Blackfeet. Not until the Blackfeet began to live like the palefaces did Napi depart from them; but on the day they return to the ways of their ancestors he will come back and he will bring back the vanished buffalo with him.

"When old Spotted Bear had told me this story I asked him if he was sure he had not gotten an old Indian legend mixed up with the white man's story of the birth of Christ—the two were so startlingly alike. But Spotted Bear said with simple dignity: 'Yes, I have been told that the story of Napi is like the story of the white man's Messiah; but this story was told among our people a thousand years before the white man was known to us."

Russia Rides a Tiger

Russian press has kept silent about all that.

It is possible that they are going to begin again somewhere else. I have recently been informed that they now propose to create a propaganda bureau at Mecca, the old town where so many Moslem pilgrims meet every year. But it is certain that they will only reap new embarrassments and humiliation—unless this silly and criminal European war talk brings them some unexpected help.

It is the existence of these two opposing forces in Russian life that imposes on the new regime the fatal contradictions which so frequently characterize its action.

For the peasants—a seemingly passive and silent mass, but when really aroused all powerful—the Kremlin is bound to submit to any humiliation. For the real masters—the peasants—do not want to hear of any serious diplomatic complications, of mobilizations, of war. During an experimental mobilization in the Leningrad region last autumn, much less than 50 per cent answered to the call.

The peasants constituted the force of the revolution, when, toward the end of the war, they deserted the trenches and seized the lands of the barons. But all that—the desertion of the trenches as well as the occupation of the lands—was done for essentially peasant reasons, which had nothing to do with Bolshevik reasons and ideologies.

This is why, deeply convinced that a change is at hand in Russia, I believe that the various military acts of yesterday and the diplomatic ones of today, far from creating real difficulties for the Russian regime, serve in a certain sense simply to strengthen it. At least they give it an alibi.

For my part, I declared this publicly, when, as the head of the Italian foreign policy, I was approached in an effort to obtain Italian collaboration in some fooish anti-Bolshevik action from outside.

"The attacks from outside"—I said in the Italian Parliament—"will never be a solution. I believe in democracy and liberty, and that is why I am against Bolshevism. But to be a useful lesson it has to die by itself."

A radical change—if not its death—is already in view.

It is probable that the Bolshevik leaders sometimes wonder how it happens that they still provoke so many terrors—feigned or real—in certain European quarters. They think, I presume, that foreigners would be much nearer reality in—pitying them.

The Chinese have a wonderful phrase to describe the weakness of certain types of so-called strong dictatorial governments: They are—so the picturesque idiom runs—riding a tiger.
